b. Annual Progress Reports.

All projects must report annually into REReport. An annual Progress Report is due 90 calendar days after the awards anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day of which the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period. The following information, when applicable, must be included in the Project Modifications section of the annual Progress Report.

1) A comparison of actual accomplishments with the goals established for the reporting period (where the output of the project can be expressed readily in numbers, a computation of the cost per unit of output should be submitted if the information is considered useful);

(2) The reasons for slippage if established goals were not met; and

(3) Additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs.

c. Final Technical Report

The Final Technical Report is required within 90 calendar days after the expiration or termination of the award. The Final Technical Report covers the entire period of performance of the award and must describe progress made during the entire timeframe of the project instead of covering accomplishments made only during the final reporting segment of the project. In addition to supplying the information required under item b. of this article, the final report must include the following when applicable:

Identify equipment purchased with any Federal funds under the award and indicate subsequent use of such equipment.

FINANCIAL REPORTING:

As outlined in 2 CFR 200.327, the recipient must submit financial status reports by the frequency required in the terms and conditions of the award. The following are the financial reporting requirements for NIFA.

Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425:

A Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due on an annual basis no later than 90 days following the end of the award anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day when the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period.

A final Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due 90 days after the expiration date of this award. The report must be submitted to the Awards Management Division (AMD) as a pdf attachment to an email sent to awards@nifa.usda.gov.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: In Fiscal Year (FY) 2016, $4,570,425 million was available to support awards after legislatively authorized set-asides were deducted.

A total of 61 applications were reviewed in response to the FY 2016 RFA. A 13-member peer review panel evaluated the applications. The peer panel included faculty and administrators from land grant and non-land grant colleges and universities, and practitioners from the food and agricultural sciences community.

Funds were available to support 20 awards in the following Grant Types:

Conference/Planning Projects [Three (3) awards]
Regular Projects (13 awards)

Joint-Institution Projects [One (1) award]
Large-Scale Comprehensive Initiatives [Three (3) awards]

The funding ratio for this program in FY 2016 was 26%.

Funded projects will address one (1) or more of the following educational strategies:

- (1) Curriculum Development, Instructional Delivery Systems and Expanding Student Career Opportunities;
- (2) Faculty Preparation and Enhancement for Teaching; and/or
- (3) Facilitating Interaction with Other Academic Institutions.

The Higher Education Challenge (HEC) program seeks to improve formal, baccalaureate or masters degree level food, agricultural, natural resources, and human sciences (FANH) education and first professional degree-level education in veterinary medicine (DVM). HEC projects may improve the economic health and viability of communities through the development of degree programs that emphasize new and emerging employment opportunities. Projects may also address the national challenge to increase the number and diversity of students entering the FANH sciences. Fiscal Year 2017: In Fiscal Year (FY) 2017, it is anticipated that $4,566,840 will be available to support awards after legislatively authorized set-asides are deducted.

A total of 105 applications were received in response to the FY 2017 RFA. It is anticipated that approximately 20 awards will be granted in FY 2017.

As of August 2017, the FY 2017 peer panel has not been convened to evaluate the merit of the submitted applications. Therefore, further information is not yet available. Pertinent data to be provided by Program at a future date. Fiscal Year 2018: The projected amount to fund proposals for FY 2018 is Zero ($0). However, if the program is funded, it is projected that for similar projects will be awarded in FY 2018. Pertinent data to be provided by Program at a future date.

RELATED PROGRAMS:

10.210 Food and Agricultural Sciences National Needs Graduate Fellowship Grants; 10.216 1890 Institution Capacity Building Grants; 10.226 Secondary and Two-Year Postsecondary Agriculture Education Challenge Grants

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: A university is leading a project to develop the Excellence in Education for Food, Energy, and Water (E2FEW) project, which will support the development, implementation, and evaluation of a 24-month sustained professional development program for postsecondary food, agricultural, natural resources, and human (FANH) sciences faculty. The faculty development program is designed around core tenets of effective undergraduate STEM instruction, including active learning, scientific teaching strategies, and the use of Undergraduate Learning Assistants.

A university was funded to:

- (1) improve the quality and relevance of fiber, textile, and apparel (FTA) curriculum and promote enhanced curriculum and instructional materials and methods;
- (2) attract, recruit, and retain more qualified and diverse students for the FTA sector; and
- (3) prepare graduates with the knowledge and skills to meet current and future workplace needs.

A university was funded to expand the opportunities within its Urban Food Systems Masters degree-level program in agriculture to include competencies (soft skills) in communication, problem solving, professionalism, teamwork, and leadership.

A university is leading a project to strengthen animal welfare education in the veterinary curriculum, with emphasis on food animal production. Project objectives include development of:

- (1) an online 1-credit animal welfare course suitable for freshman level veterinary students;
- (2) animal welfare case studies suitable for integration in advanced veterinary courses;
- (3) 1-week rotations for swine and dairy cattle animal welfare assessment;
- (4) effective multiple-choice examination questions to evaluate student competency; and
- (5) a "roadmap" of existing educational opportunities to facilitate veterinary student specialization in animal welfare.

A university was funded to lead a project that addresses the need to be ready and capable of solving global food security and hunger problems that span geo-political borders. The instructional opportunity addressed by this project is to reach graduate students in food and agricultural sciences by globalizing the curricula with contextually-rich reusable learning elements (RLEs) and authentic case studies. Instruction will be created in three (3) broad areas (Global Horticulture, Sustainable International Development, Human Health and Nutrition) with content experts creating the materials. Fiscal Year 2017: Project data is not yet available. The peer review panel has not met to evaluate proposals that were submitted in response to the FY 2017 RFA.

It is anticipated that funded projects will address one (1) or more of the following educational strategies:

- (1) Curriculum Development, Instructional Delivery Systems and Expanding Student Career Opportunities;
- (2) Faculty Preparation and Enhancement for Teaching; and
- (3) Facilitating Interaction with Other Academic Institutions.

Pertinent data to be provided by Program at a future date. Fiscal Year 2018: This program is subject to congressional budget approval for FY 2018. At this time, the projected funding level is Zero ($0). However, if funding is provided, it is anticipated that similar projects will be awarded.

Project data is not yet available. Pertinent data to be provided by Program at a future date.

10.219 BIOTECHNOLOGY RISK ASSESSMENT RESEARCH

(BRAG)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002, Section 7210, Public Law 101-171, 7 U.S.C. 5921; Food, Agriculture, Conservation, and Trade Act of 1990, Section 1668, 7 U.S.C. 7901.

OBJECTIVES:

The purpose of the BRAG program is to assist Federal regulatory agencies in making science-based decisions about the effects of introducing into the environment genetically engineered organisms, including plants, microorganisms (including fungi, bacteria, and viruses), arthropods, fish, birds, mammals and other animals excluding humans. Investigations of effects on both managed and natural environments are relevant. The BRAG program accomplishes its purpose by providing Federal regulatory agencies with scientific information relevant to regulatory considerations derived from the risk assessment research that the program funds.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Grant funds must be used for allowable costs necessary to conduct approved research objectives. Funds may not be used for purposes other than those approved in the grant award documents. The use of grant funds to plan, acquire, or construct a building or facility is not allowed under this program. With prior approval, and in accordance with the cost principles set forth in the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) Circular No. A-21, (codified at 2 CFR 220), some grant funds may be used for minor alterations, renovations, or repairs deemed necessary to retrofit existing teaching or research spaces in order to carry out a funded project. However, requests to use grant funds for such purposes must demonstrate that the alterations, renovations, or repairs are essential to achieving the major purpose of the project. Grant funds may not be used for endowment investing.

Section 720 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2012 (Pub.L. No. 112-55) limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

*Special Note on Indirect Costs as in-kind matching contributions:

Indirect costs may be claimed under the Federal portion of the award budget or, alternatively, indirect costs may be claimed as a matching contribution (if no indirect costs are requested under the Federal portion of the award budget). However, unless explicitly authorized in the RFA, indirect costs may not be claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution, unless the total claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. An awardee may split the allocation between the Federal and non-Federal portions of the budget only if the total amount of indirect costs charged to the project does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. For example, if an awardee's indirect costs are capped at 30 percent pursuant to FY 2012 appropriated funds, Section 720 of the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2012 (Division A of Pub. L. 112-55), the awardee may request 15 percent of the indirect costs on both the Federal portion of the award and as a matching contribution. Or, the awardee may request any similar percentage that, when combined, does not exceed the maximum indirect cost rate of 30 percent. Fully discretionary.

Applicant Eligibility:

Any public or private research or educational institution or organization.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Any public or private research or educational institution or organization.

Credentials/Documentation:

The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

- (i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;

(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

(3) Additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs.

c. Final Technical Report

The Final Technical Report is required within 90 calendar days after the expiration or termination of the award. The Final Technical Report covers the entire period of performance of the award and must describe progress made during the entire timeframe of the project instead of covering accomplishments made only during the final reporting segment of the project. In addition to supplying the information required under item b. of this article, the final report must include the following when applicable:

Identify equipment purchased with any Federal funds under the award and indicate subsequent use of such equipment.

10.220 HIGHER EDUCATION - MULTICULTURAL SCHOLARS GRANT PROGRAM

Institution Challenge, Multicultural Scholars & Graduate Fellowships Grant Program (Multicultural Scholars)

[Formerly: Minority Scholars Program]

FEDERAL AGENCY:

AUTHORIZATION:

Legislative authority for this program is contained in section 1417 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (NARETPA) (99 Stat. 1548; 7 U.S.C. 3152). USDA/NIFA administers this federal assistance grant program to support food and agricultural sciences baccalaureate and Doctor of Veterinary Medicine (D.V.M.) degree training of the next generation of scientists, policy makers, and educators in the Food and Agricultural Sciences. USDA initiated the Higher Education Multicultural Scholars Program in FY 1994. This program, functioning collaboratively with eligible higher education institutions, is developing intellectual capital to secure the preeminence of U.S. food and agricultural systems., 7 U.S.C 3152.

OBJECTIVES:

To increase the ethnic and cultural diversity of the food and agricultural scientific and professional work force, and to advance the educational achievement of minority Americans, by providing grants to colleges and universities that have a demonstrable capacity to attract, educate, and graduate minority students for careers as agriscience and agribusiness professionals, and have unique capabilities for achieving the objective of full representation of minority groups in the fields of agriculture, natural resources, forestry, veterinary medicine, home economics, and disciplines closely allied to the food and agricultural system.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Competitive annual grants to selected U.S. institutions of higher education provide for a limited number of four-year undergraduate scholarships to support minority students pursuing baccalaureate degrees in the food and agricultural sciences. Institutions also receive an annual cost-of-education allowance for each scholar supported by a grant. The scholars are selected by the institutions and students must apply for the scholarships through procedures established by the individual institutions.

No scholarship grants are made directly to students and students cannot apply directly to USDA for scholarships. Scholarship monies may be used for tuition, fees, room, board, and other educational expenses as announced in a Federal Register notice inviting applications for new awards.

The institutional cost-of-education allowance may be used by the selected institutions to defray program expenses including, but not limited to, travel and publications costs incurred for student recruitment, and salaries of project personnel. Indirect cost is not allowable. Pursuant to 7 U.S.C. 3152(b), no indirect costs may be recovered under the MSP Program. Funds are restricted to the clearly designated uses found within the RFA.

For Award Category No. 2 Proposals, the budget sharing criteria are: (i) no single institution may receive more than forty percent (40%) and (ii) any institution may not receive less than fifteen percent (15%) of the requested funding for the baccalaureate and/or D.V.M. degree level training project (see Part II, C of the RFA).

When grant is for SEL that will be used by To-Be-Recruited Scholars: The SEL funds for To-Be-Recruited Scholars will be withheld until the Project Director has submitted, to the MSP Grants Program Office, all of the required documentation for eligibility of the MSP/SEL Scholar(s) for the SEL as well as the required specifics outlined in the RFA for the SEL. The information must be submitted for approval, no less than 90 days prior to the use of the SEL funds (see Part IV, B, 3, b, Section 1 of the RFA). Fully discretionary.

Applicant Eligibility:

Proposals may be submitted by all U.S. colleges and universities with baccalaureate or higher degree programs in agriculture, natural resources, forestry, veterinary medicine, home economics, and disciplines closely allied to the food and agricultural system, including land-grant colleges and universities, colleges and universities having significant minority enrollments and a demonstrable capacity to carry out the teaching of food and agricultural sciences, and other colleges and universities having a demonstrable capacity to carry out the teaching of food and agricultural sciences.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Funds awarded under this program are used to support full-time undergraduate students pursuing a baccalaureate degree in an area of the food and agricultural sciences or a closely allied field. Persons eligible to receive scholarships under this program are students who either are enrolled or have been accepted as full-time baccalaureate or DVM degree candidates, and who are members of groups traditionally under-represented in food and agricultural scientific and professional fields.

Credentials/Documentation:

The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

(i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;

(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

10.221 TRIBAL COLLEGES EDUCATION EQUITY GRANTS

Higher Education Native American Formula and/or Higher Education Native American Institutions

FEDERAL AGENCY:

AUTHORIZATION:

Authority for the Tribal Colleges Education Equity Grants (TCEG) program is contained in the Equity in Educational Land-Grant Status Act of 1994 (7 U.S.C. 301 note) as amended by the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (7 U.S.C. 7601 note). Appropriated funds are to be awarded to the 1994 Land-Grant Institutions (hereinafter referred to as 1994 Institutions) for Education capacity building and funds are to be distributed equally among institutions that meet eligibility requirements., 7 U.S.C 301 note.

OBJECTIVES:

This grants program is designed to promote and strengthen higher education instruction in the food and agricultural sciences at the 34 Tribal Colleges designated as 1994 Land-Grant Institutions in the Equity in Educational Land-Grant Status Act of 1994, as amended. Plans of Work should focus on undergraduate and/or graduate studies in the food and agricultural sciences in one or more of the following areas: Curricula Design and Materials Development, Faculty Development and Preparation for Teaching, Instruction Delivery Systems, Student Experiential Learning, Equipment and Instrumentation for Teaching, or Student Recruitment and Retention.

The purpose of the TCEG Program is to provide funding to enhance educational opportunities for Native Americans in the food and agricultural sciences. The TCEG program is intended to strengthen institutional capacity to deliver relevant formal education opportunities. The TCEG is intended to be a component of the applicant 1994 institutions land grant roadmap or strategic planning process. To the extent practicable, priorities should reflect the following national critical needs areas:

1. Sustainable energy
2. Global food security and hunger

3. Climate change
4. Nutrition and preventing childhood obesity
5. Food safety
6. Sustainable rural economies

Awards are made upon approval of each institutions application for a grant that relate to an institutions long-range goals. As indicated in Part 1, C. of the RFA, an application may address one (1) or more of the following program areas:

Curricula Design and Materials Development
 Faculty Development and Preparation for Teaching Instruction Delivery Systems
 Student Experiential Learning
 Equipment and Instrumentation for Teaching
 Student Recruitment and Retention

Recognizing that strengthening instructional programs is a long-term ongoing process, the TCEG program is interested in funding subsequent phases of previously funded projects in order to strengthen institutional capacity, and institutions are encouraged to build on a theme over several grant awards to reach institutional long-range goals.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

The Tribal College Equity Program (TCEG) provides funds to enhance educational opportunities for Native Americans by strengthening instructional programs in the food and agricultural sciences at the thirty four (34) tribal colleges designated as the 1994 Land-Grant Institutions (hereinafter referred to as 1994 Institutions).

Under this authority, appropriated funds are to be awarded to the 1994 Land-Grant Institutions (hereinafter referred to as 1994 Institutions) for Education capacity building and funds are to be distributed equally among institutions that meet eligibility requirements. Funding Restrictions:

Section 720 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2012 (Pub.L. No. 112-55) limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

Indirect costs for the Equity program are not required and a 1994 institution may take less than the allowable amount or forego indirect costs altogether - adjust budgets accordingly.

Neither research nor extension projects are supported under the TCEG Program.

The use of grant funds to plan, acquire, or construct a building or facility is not allowed under this program. With prior approval, and in accordance with the cost principles set forth in OMB Circular No. A-21, some grant funds may be used for minor alterations, renovations, or repairs deemed necessary to retrofit existing teaching or research spaces in order to carry out a funded project. However, requests to use grant funds for such purposes must demonstrate that the alterations, renovations, or repairs are essential to achieving the major purpose of the project.

Grant funds may not be used for endowment investing.

Special Notices:

1. NIFA will withhold all funds for a TCEG award to an applicant requesting indirect costs if the applicant has not negotiated an indirect cost rate with its cognizant federal agency.

2. If a grantee is in the process of negotiating an indirect cost rate with its federal agency, NIFA will withhold all funds from that grantee until the indirect cost rate has been established.

3. If an institutions indirect cost rate has expired or will expire in the near future, a clear statement on renegotiation efforts must be included in the application. (See Part IV, B.5. of the RFA - Budget Justification.)

4. It is incumbent on all applicants to have a current indirect cost rate or begin negotiations to establish an indirect cost rate prior to the TCEG submission deadline. Because it may take several months to obtain an indirect cost rate, applicants needing an indirect cost rate are encouraged to start work on establishing these rates well in advance of submitting a TCEG application.

5. In lieu of requesting indirect costs (if the applicant does not have a negotiated rate), an applicant may prepare a budget in which all charges in the budget are included as direct costs.

NIFA does not require matching support for this program. Fully discretionary.

Applicant Eligibility:

Applications may be submitted by any of the Tribal colleges and universities designated as 1994 Land-Grant Institutions under the Educational Land-Grant Status Act of 1994, as amended. This Act, as amended in Section 533(a), requires that each 1994 Land-Grant Institution be accredited or making progress towards accreditation and be recognized as a legal entity. If accreditation is being sought, a college must demonstrate its progress towards accreditation by a letter from a nationally recognized accreditation agency affirming receipt of application for an accreditation site visit or other such documentation.

An applicants failure to meet an eligibility criterion by the time of an application deadline will result in NIFA returning the application without review or, even though an application may be reviewed, will preclude NIFA from making an award.

Award recipients may subcontract to organizations not eligible to apply provided such organizations are necessary for the conduct of project goals and objectives.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: (1) Promoting Student Success through Experiential Learning in Environmental Science

The project promotes student participation, learning and success by providing engaging and relevant experiential learning activities across Aaniiih Nakoda College's Integrated Environmental Science (IES) curriculum.

(2) Experiential Learning at Blackfeet Community College

The Goal of this four-year project is to incorporate student experiential/nature-based learning across all curriculums at Blackfeet Community College to increase student retention by 30 percent (30%) by the end of this program.

(3) Native Food Pathways: An Ojibwa Approach to Food Science

The College seeks to expand offerings within the environmental science program to include food science. Topics will include organic gardening, fruit production, maple syrup and honey production.

(4) Education in Sustainability

The main goal of the project is to give students, faculty and staff the tools needed to increase environmental sustainability on campus. Capacity in sustainability will be built through experiential learning experiences for students and professional development for faculty and staff. The impact of this project will be campus wide, as even students who aren't participating in sustainability initiatives benefit from this work. Haskell will save money on energy, water, and waste disposal and those resources can be directed elsewhere.

(5) Revised Curricula in Agriculture and Initiation of Foods and Nutrition Programs for Health and Wellness

Project provides a rodeo program which involves about 150 students each year. The project also provides an equine assisted learning program. Fiscal Year 2017: (1) Bay Mills Academics and Agricultural Initiative

The Equity grant funded 13 student retention workshops attended by 270 students. These workshops, held at the Bay Mills Student Success Center, provided tutors in math, science and computer programming for free and 135 students rely on these services. In addition the colleges demonstration farm partnered with the USDA's Soil Conservation Service for an annual Education on the Farm event for 77 participants. In addition, Waishkey Bay Farm hosted six (6) sustainable agriculture workshops attended by 213 participants.

Faculty observe that some of the 160 students who participated are saying that mathematics actually makes more sense to them because of the new teaching methods.

(5) Creation of a Wildlife Biology Degree Program at the Salish Kootenai College

The Equity funding supports improvement for courses in GIS technology, hydrology and forest management. In addition, nine (9) new courses were added including laboratory classes in ornithology, entomology and ichthyology. National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

This program is administered under the provisions of section 1455 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977, as amended (NARETPA) (7 U.S.C. 3241) pursuant to section 815 of Public Law 104-127 and Public Law 110-246. Section 1455 of NARETPA, as reauthorized by section 7128 of Public Law 110-246, provides the Secretary of Agriculture with the authority to make competitive grants (or grants without regard to any requirement for competition) to Hispanic-Serving Institutions for the purpose of promoting and strengthening the ability of Hispanic-Serving Institutions to carry out education, applied research, and related community development programs., 7 U.S.C 3241.

OBJECTIVES:

The objective of this program is to promote and strengthen the ability of Hispanic-Serving Institutions to carry out higher education programs in the food and agricultural sciences. These programs aim to attract outstanding students and produce graduates capable of enhancing the Nation's food and agricultural scientific and professional work force. Grants under this program will be awarded to:

- (1) support the activities of consortia of Hispanic-Serving Institutions to enhance educational equity for underrepresented students;
- (2) strengthen institutional educational capacities including libraries, curriculum, faculty, scientific instrumentation, instruction delivery systems, and student recruitment and retention, in order to respond to identified State, regional, national, or international educational needs in the food and agricultural sciences;
- (3) attract and support undergraduate and graduate students from underrepresented groups in order to prepare them for careers related to the food, agricultural, and natural resource systems of the United States, beginning with the mentoring of students at the high school level and continuing with the provision of financial support for students through their attainment of a doctoral degree; and
- (4) facilitate cooperative initiatives between two or more Hispanic-Serving Institutions, or between Hispanic-Serving Institutions and units of State government or the private sector, to maximize the development and use of resources, such as faculty, facilities, and equipment, to improve food and agricultural sciences teaching programs.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Funds may be used to support one or more of the following target areas or additional target areas as identified in the annual program announcement: Curricula design; materials development; library resources; faculty preparation and enhancement for teaching; instruction delivery systems; scientific instrumentation for teaching; student experiential learning; and student recruitment and retention. 1. Award Limitations - Effective FY 2009, a lead institution may receive up to two awards. Institutions could serve as collaborators in many applications and awards.

2. Funding Limitations - Please see Part II, C.3., Award Size, for maximum budget requests for regular or collaboration project applications. Effective FY 2009, there is no limitation on the amount of funding a single awardee may receive either as a lead institution, a cooperating institution, a subawardee or any combination thereof. The lead institution on a Collaboration Project must retain at least 25 percent and no more than 75 percent of the funds awarded.

3. Use of Funds for Facilities -

Under the Hispanic-Serving Institutions Education Grants Program, the use of grant funds to plan, acquire, or construct a building or facility is not allowed. With prior approval, in accordance with the cost principles set forth in OMB Circular No. A-21, some grant funds may be used for minor alterations, renovations, or repairs deemed necessary to retrofit existing teaching spaces in order to carry out a funded project. However, requests to use grant funds for such purposes must demonstrate that the alterations, renovations, or repairs are incidental to the major purpose for which a grant is issued.

4. Indirect Costs - Section 720 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2012 (Pub.L. No. 112-55) limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded. Fully discretionary.

Applicant Eligibility:

(1) certify that it has an enrollment of undergraduate full-time equivalent students that is at least 25 percent Hispanic students; and

(2) provide assurances that not less than 50 percent of the institution's Hispanic students are low-income individuals as defined in the definitions section of this solicitation.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Hispanic serving institutions, as identified above, are eligible to receive funds under this program.

NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). Fiscal Year 2016: Experiential Training in Use of Unmanned Aerial Systems (UAS) Technology For Agriculture Applications Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi

The primary purpose of this four-year interdisciplinary multi-HSI project is to increase the number of south Texas students graduating from 2-yr Associate-granting institutions (DMC, TSTC) transitioning to 4-yr Bachelor of Science and Masters degrees (TAMUCC, TAMUK, UTRGV) in fields related to the agricultural, plant and biological sciences. Faculty and staff at partner institutions will provide undergraduate and graduate training and education in the use of Unmanned Aerial Systems (UAS) technology for precision farming in agriculture. Targeted coursework will be created to include two (2) permanent on-line introductory courses in UAV technology and ethics and one (1) blended (on-line/hands-on) course in UAS applications. Training will include internships and assistance in research projects aligned with UAS as a tool for crop/soil management, plant and natural resource sciences. Products will produce 28 Bachelor of Science and 11 Masters of Science graduates working in food, agriculture, and natural resources related fields. This project will also affect 48 students from two-year academic institutions. Educational needs areas addressed by this project include: (1) curricula design in terms of development of new courses of study and (5) student experiential learning.

Texas State University will complete the EverGreens goal is to increase the number of Hispanic students with advanced technical degrees at the food-water-energy intersection. To meet this goal, we will train a diverse future workforce with the leadership and cross-disciplinary skills in science, technology and innovation to solve today's complex agricultural problems specifically those due to a changing climate, widespread food insecurity, and the lack of available water. Hispanic students will be recruited from Palo Alto College and San Antonio College to seamlessly transition into and complete degrees at Texas State University. Forty-four Hispanic students will receive personalized support through mentorships, tutoring, and professional development, as well as financial assistance through scholarships and paid internships. Through the collective attainment of 16 associate, 16 bachelor, and 12 Master of Science degrees, students will be prepared to enter positions in well-paid, technical jobs in agricultural-related fields. Fiscal Year 2017: San Diego State University aims to provide solutions to food security through interdisciplinary collaborations and development of a career pipeline in the fields of food and agriculture. We will build lecture and laboratory curricula around a traditional Milpa (multispecies interplanting farm) while simultaneously introducing modern urban agriculture and scientific instrumentation. Students will work alongside indigenous farmers in Oaxaca, document and preserve traditional farming techniques. The hands-on experiences will enhance academic excellence while providing marketable skills that address the food security challenge. The recognition of scientific and cultural importance of Milpa will attract underrepresented and Latino students and incentivize their career choice in agriculture.

Texas A M- Kingsville will conduct the LEADERS 2 the Doctorate project that focuses on increasing underrepresented student success by becoming well-rounded leaders prepared to address needs related to animal health, production, and well-being. The purpose of this project is to increase the number of Hispanic leaders in animal science by developing experiential learning activities that increase retention/graduation rates, enhance scientific skills, and develop professionalism of an audience of underrepresented B.S. (n=20), M.S. (n=8), and Ph.D. (n=2) students. The LEADERS 2 program will produce experienced underrepresented graduates who are qualified to obtain advanced degrees, enter the work force as leaders in their field, and provide human capital necessary to enhance the nation's food supply. Program objectives will be met with our unique university exchange program, summer research internships, student research opportunities, leadership/soft skill development, conference participation, language development/teambuilding workshops, and collaborative, partnerships between HSI animal science programs and faculty from Ph.D. granting institutions.

The Lee College District will conduct the Get Responsible and Own Work (GROW) project will impact the horticulture program for 200 inmate students that are part of a certificate and associate degree program in Texas. Its goals are:

- (1) Practice in applying communication, problem-solving, self-management, and teamwork soft skills;
- (2) Practice in applying financial management principles to personal and business finances;
- (3) Increased degree completion rate for horticulture students;
- (4) Increased number of students articulate into related bachelors degree program; and
- (5) Majority of released completers in related employment after release. Fiscal Year 2018: Fiscal Year (FY) 2018, funds will support 13 Continuation and 11 REGULAR awards.

10.225 COMMUNITY FOOD PROJECTS

Community Foods

FEDERAL AGENCY:

AUTHORIZATION:

The Community Food Projects Competitive Grants Program (CFPCGP) legislative authority is located in Section 25 of the Food Stamp Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 2034), as amended by the Food and Nutrition Act of 2008 and Section 4402 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act (FCEA) of 2008 (Pub. L. 110-246), which authorizes a program of federal grants to establish and carry out Community Food Projects., 7 U.S.C 2034.

OBJECTIVES:

To support the development of community food projects designed to meet the food needs of low-income people; increase the self-reliance of communities in providing for their own needs; and promote comprehensive responses to local food, farm, and nutrition issues.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Community food projects are intended to take a comprehensive approach to developing long-term solutions that help to ensure food security in communities by linking the food sector to community development, economic opportunity, and environmental enhancement. Comprehensive solutions may include elements such as:

- (1) Improved access to high quality, affordable food among low-income households;
- (2) support for local food systems, from urban gardening to local farms that provide high quality fresh food, ideally with minimal adverse environmental impact; and
- (3) expanded economic opportunities for community residents through local business or other economic development, improved employment opportunities, job training, youth apprenticeship, school-to-work transition, and the like. Any solution proposed must tie into community food needs.

Successful applicants must provide matching funds, either in cash or in-kind amounting to at least 50 percent of the total cost of the project during the term of the grant award. 1. Construction and Renovation: With prior approval, and in accordance with applicable Federal cost principles, grant funds may be used to plan, acquire, or construct a building or facility, or to acquire land; and for improvements, alterations, renovations, or repairs to land or buildings, necessary to carry out a funded project under this program. However, requests to use grant funds for such purposes must demonstrate that such expenditures are essential to achieving the major purpose for which the grant request is made.

2. Indirect Costs: Full Negotiated Rate.

Special Note on Indirect Costs as in-kind matching contributions:

Indirect costs may be claimed under the Federal portion of the award budget or, alternatively, indirect costs may be claimed as a matching contribution (if no indirect costs are requested under the Federal portion of the award budget). However, unless explicitly authorized in the RFA, indirect costs may not be claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution, unless the total claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less.

An awardee may split the allocation between the Federal and non-Federal portions of the budget only if the total amount of indirect costs charged to the project does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. For example, if an awardee's indirect costs are capped at 30 percent pursuant to FY 2012 appropriated funds, Section 720 of the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2012 (Division A of Pub. L. 112-55), the awardee may request 15 percent of the indirect costs on both the Federal portion of the award and as a matching contribution. Or, the awardee may request any similar percentage that, when combined, does not exceed the maximum indirect cost rate of 30 percent.

Applicant Eligibility:

Proposals may be submitted by private nonprofit entities. Because projects must promote comprehensive responses to local food, farm, and nutrition issues, applicants are encouraged to seek and create partnership among public, private nonprofit and private for-profit organizations or firms.

To be further eligible for a grant, a private nonprofit applicant must meet three mandatory requirements:

1. Have experience in the area of:

- (a) community food work, particularly concerning small and medium-sized farms, including the provision of food to people in low-income communities and the development of new markets in low-income communities for agricultural producers; or

(b) job training and business development activities in low-income communities;

2. demonstrate competency to implement a project, provide fiscal accountability and oversight, collect data, and prepare reports and other appropriate documentation; and

3. demonstrate a willingness to share information with researchers, practitioners, and other interested parties.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Low income people.

Credentials/Documentation:

The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

(i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;

(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

Renewals:

Specific details are provided in the Request for Applications (RFA), which are generally published annually.

The most current RFA is available via:

<https://nifa.usda.gov/funding-opportunity/community-food-projects-cfp-competitive-grants-program>.

Formula and Matching Requirements:

This program has no statutory formula.

Matching Requirements: Percent: 100%. Successful CFP applicants and PP award applicants MUST provide matching on a dollar-for-dollar basis (100%) for all federal funds awarded.

Matching funds are not required for T & TA grants.

The legislation establishing the FSLC requires that as a condition to receiving a grant from NIFA, the NGO must contribute in-kind resources toward implementing the grant. To comply with this provision, NIFA has determined that applicants must provide at least 25 percent of total project resources on an in-kind basis during the term of the grant award. The Federal share of FSLC costs can be no more than 75 percent of total project costs. CFP, PP and FSCL grantees may provide matching funds through cash and/or in-kind contributions, including third-party in-kind contributions fairly evaluated, including facilities. The non-federal share of the funding may come from state government, local government, other non-profit entities, or private sources. Examples of qualifying matching contributions may include direct costs such as: rent for office space used exclusively for the funded project; duplication or postage costs; and staff time from an entity other than the applicant for job training or nutrition education.

SPECIAL NOTES:

(1) Use of Indirect Costs as In-Kind Matching Contributions. Indirect costs may be claimed under the Federal portion of the award budget or, alternatively, indirect costs may be claimed as a matching contribution (if no indirect costs are requested under the Federal portion of the award budget). However, unless explicitly authorized in the RFA, indirect costs may not be claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution, unless the total claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. An awardee may split the allocation between the Federal and non-Federal portions of the budget only if the total amount of indirect costs charged to the project does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. For example, if an awardee's indirect costs are capped at 22 percent pursuant to section 1462(a) of NARETPA (7 U.S.C. 3310(a)), the awardee may request 11 percent of the indirect costs on both the Federal portion of the award and as a matching contribution. Or, the awardee may request any similar percentage that, when combined, does not exceed the maximum indirect cost rate of 22 percent. (2) Matching funds are not required for training and technical assistance (T & TA) grants. MOE requirements are not applicable to this program.

Length and Time Phasing of Assistance:

The term of competitive project grants and/or cooperative agreements under this program may not exceed three (3) years.

2 CFR Part 200, Subpart D applies to this program.

In accordance with statutory time limits, project periods, including no-cost extensions of time, are not to exceed five (5) years.

Further details are provided in the Award document Form NIFA-2009 and the NIFA General Terms and Conditions Grants and Cooperative Agreements (dated October 2016) at: <https://nifa.usda.gov/resource/nifa-general-terms-and-conditions-grants-and-cooperative-agreements-october-2016>.

Youth Farm, along with our key partners Minneapolis Public Schools Culinary & Nutrition Services (MPS) and Nellie Stone Johnson Community School (NSJ) are partnering to focus on four (4) goals:

- (1) Increase understanding of food production and nutrition among youth and teachers through agricultural education, classroom lessons and school meals;
- (2) Increase community understanding of food production, purchasing and preparation through nutrition education and engagement in the farm project to support community health and self-reliance;

- (3) Increase access to diverse, healthy food options in order to support healthy Minneapolis communities; and
- (4) Create a scalable and replicable partnership model for supporting school communities in food, nutrition, youth development and agricultural education.

The MPS Farm Project and The Farm at Nellie Stone will be developed over the course of five (5) years, engaging students and teachers at NSJ, teachers and school garden coordinators throughout the MPS district, Youth Farm, youth, and community members from Hawthorne and surrounding neighborhoods. These partners will collaboratively build a 23-acre farm and outdoor education space, including a greenhouse and hoop house, creating food access and developing a model for partner schools that connects the farm, the cafeteria, and the classroom through experiential education that aligns with MPS standards and Youth Farms youth development model.

Integrating Workforce Training For Foster Youth With A Community Food Web: Culinary Arts, Agriculture, and Nutrition (I-Can)

The proposed project is designed to develop and maintain a network of services to assist young adults recently emancipated from the foster care system, and brings together the resources of a large comprehensive university, an arboretum, a non-profit social enterprise, and a NIFA-funded community-based education and research project. The goals of the program are to:

- (1) to increase knowledge and skills of sustainable urban agriculture;;
- (2) increase knowledge and practice of Dietary Guidelines for Americans in coordination with increasing culinary skills;
- (3) to develop business and entrepreneurial skills through the creation, testing, and sale of value-added products based on fruits and vegetables from the arboretum; and
- (4) to embed community-based research into the evaluation of the program.

Healthy Here: Bernalillo County Community Food Projects And Mobile Food Market

Presbyterian Healthcare Services will serve as the backbone agency for a collective impact partnership to address food insecurity and health disparities in Bernalillo County, New Mexico. Organization partners include Agri-Cultura Network, Adelante, Kids Cook!, Street Food Institute, and First Choice Community Healthcare. Partners along with a community-based Governance Committee will plan and carry out a four-year project incorporating a Mobile Food Market that sells locally grown produce and integrates outreach and education about cooking, nutrition, and gardening. Target beneficiaries are low-income residents of the South Valley and the International District. Residents here face challenges affording healthy produce and may not have ready transportation to reach the limited number of supermarkets and other retailers selling produce. The Mobile Food Market will stop at points of community intersection like schools, clinics, and senior centers. Programming also includes public workshops about gardening and food and a train-the-trainer model to produce Community Food Leaders. The project will also employ area residents as trained Community Food Educators. Project goals include increasing access to nutritious food among low-income residents; developing local leadership and food security; supporting local farming of high-value crops and agricultural economic development; improving healthy eating and reducing area health disparities; and strengthening linkages between agricultural, entrepreneurial, health, and human service sectors to create a vibrant local food economy.

Rebuilding Local Food Systems in Farmworker Communities Project
The Farmworker Association of Florida, a community-based organization, proposes to expand its Rebuilding Local Food Systems (RLFS) in Farmworker Communities project, whose goal is trifold: to increase small-scale food production in farmworker communities; to increase low-income community members access to and consumption of affordable, organic foods; and to raise low income community members awareness about the importance of producing and consuming fresh fruits and vegetables that are locally grown using methods that conserve natural resources. Toward this goal, the RLFS project has three (3) distinct objectives:

- (1) to establish/improve community gardens in four (4) farmworker communities to serve as small-scale agriculture demonstration sites to exemplify potential farm economic development opportunities;
- (2) to develop/implement a food and farm entrepreneur program to provide education and technical assistance to community members on becoming small farmers by establishing backyard farm operations or forming agricultural cooperatives; and
- (3) to provide sustainable agriculture, nutrition, and healthy living education to farm worker families and other low-income persons in the target communities.

The primary beneficiaries and engaged populations of the RLFS project are minority, low-income residents of the agricultural areas of South Apopka, Fellsmere, Pierson, and Homestead/Florida City. The Rebuilding Local Food Systems project aligns well with the following Community Food Projects Competitive Grants Program (CFPCGP) objectives and/or priorities: meet the food needs of low-income individuals; increase the self-reliance of communities in providing for the food needs of the communities; and promote comprehensive responses to local food access, farm, and nutrition issues. Fiscal Year 2017: Buffalo Community Food Hub Project will engage low-income community members, creating a neighborhood food hub, supporting market gardens, a Mobile market, job training and greater healthy food access. The Massachusetts Avenue Project (MAP) and Grassroots Gardens of Western NY (GGWNY) will partner to implement the Buffalo Community Food Hub Project (BCFHP). Building leadership among low-income youth, new Americans and community gardeners in Buffalo, NY, the project will increase food self-reliance of Buffalo residents, promote comprehensive responses to local food and nutrition issues and meet the food needs of low-income people. A new Farmhouse and Community Food Training Center will be established at MAP's urban farm on Buffalo's West Side that will serve as a neighborhood food hub and support the creation of market gardens and new market opportunities for local growers, food-based employment and training for disadvantaged youth, greater food access thru Mobile Market expansion, food preparation and preservation education and community organizing to support school and municipal policy in support of local procurement and greater food equity.

Da Bus Mobile Market and Food Pantry

Da Bus Mobile Market and Food Pantry Project is a three (3) year initiative of The Kohala Center and Hawaii Island Food Alliance to address food insecurity and health disparities on Hawaii Island. The project goals are to improve access to affordable healthy food among low-income residents; build target area community involvement in addressing food security; support local agricultural development; improve healthy eating and reduce health disparities in chronic diseases; and strengthen linkages between agricultural, entrepreneurial, health, and human service sectors to create a secure local food economy. To achieve these goals the project will provide for a Mobile Market which will distribute locally-grown produce, staple food items, seeds, and garden starts to low-income residents on Hawaii Island; integrate outreach education on cooking, nutrition, and gardening; provide Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) Outreach materials and services; and serve as an emergency food pantry. The Mobile Market will stop at designated community gathering sites in low-income/low-access rural areas including senior centers, low-income housing complexes, and County Park and Recreation centers. Project partners include non-profits, health institutions, university agricultural extension agents and nutritionists, farmers, and local grocers. The project is in alignment with CFPCGP goals by directly addressing the needs of low-income individuals with limited access to healthy food through a long-term solution to food distribution; increasing community self-reliance and encouraging healthy lifestyle development through gardening and cooking classes; and increasing the economic viability of the local food economy by supporting local farmers and grocers.

Farms to Food Banks Capacity-Building Project

The Farms To Food Banks Capacity Building Project will reduce food insecurity in Kentucky and strengthen the linkages between key sectors of Kentucky's food system, including farmers, nonprofit food distributors and low-income consumers. Outcomes include increasing the amount of fresh produce distributed to low income Kentuckians by 9 million, increasing by 20% the number of food bank patrons that are aware of the benefits of healthy eating and possessing the skill necessary to prepare fruits and vegetables; and increasing by 200 the number of Kentucky farmers benefitting from a new market for Number 2-grade and surplus produce and an average increase in cash flow of $2,500.00. The goals and outcomes will be received by providing equipment, such as walk-in coolers and air filtration systems, necessary for safe distribution of fresh produce by food banks and food pantries, by paying farmers to help cover their costs of picking, packing and delivering fresh produce to food banks, and by providing nutrition education services to low-income patrons of food banks and food pantries. Low-income individuals were involved in program planning and will be actively engaged in program implementation by serving as paid evaluation assistants. The self-reliance of Kentucky communities will be increased by supporting Kentucky farmers working to diversify their production from tobacco to fruits and vegetables. Ultimately, the project will help Kentucky do a better job feeding itself.

Community to Gardens and Back Again: Feeding Laramie Valley's community-engaged and driven project to increase sustainable, equitable access to fresh, healthy food in Albany County, Wyoming
 Community to Gardens and Back Again: Feeding Laramie Valley's community-engaged and driven project to increase sustainable, equitable access to fresh, healthy food in Albany County, Wyoming. Feeding Laramie Valley (FLV) is a nonprofit organization located in the high elevation, rural community of Albany County, Wyoming. Headquartered in Laramie since its inception in 2009, FLV leads and facilitates collaborative community projects for sustainable food security, collecting and producing fresh fruits and vegetables for distribution to local residents who do not have sufficient access to enough fresh food to live a healthy life, in an effort to address the fact that Albany County has the highest food insecurity rate in Wyoming. The goals of a Community Food Project for Feeding Laramie Valley, are designed to create a sustainable, long term approach to addressing food security in Albany County, Wyoming; to open avenues for greater community voice and power in the local food system; to increase the availability of fresh, locally-produced, healthy, affordable food; reduce the high incidence of food insecurity in communities touched by FLV projects; increase awareness and understanding of the connection between fresh produce and improved health; and to forge stronger community ties and networking among gardeners, farmers, entrepreneurs, volunteers, food system. Plans to accomplish these goals include expansion of community and backyard.

Richmond Healthy Corner Store Initiative Expansion Project (RCHD)

In the first year of the proposed Healthy Corner Stores Sustainability Project, RCHD and its partner, Shalom Farms, a nonprofit which is currently the sole distributor of produce to Healthy Corner Stores, will introduce new approaches for produce aggregation, storage, and distribution with a small subset of stores in order to determine the best long-term market-driven "free market"-based model for corner stores in Richmond. In the remaining two (2) project years, RCHD and Shalom will onboard and/or transition all Healthy Corner Stores to the new model, creating a streamlined system by which produce from regional farmers is aggregated, stored, and distributed to corner stores through well-established retailers and intermediaries, primarily Rudy's Exotic Mushrooms and Produce. By 2020, the proposed project will transform corner store-based food access work in Richmond from a public health intervention reliant on grant funding for operation to a financially lucrative partnership between vendors and store owners which will sustain mutual investment, spur additional store owners and vendors to participate in future years, and ensure access to a variety of fresh, local produce in Richmond's communities of greatest need. Fiscal Year 2018: Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Funds may be used only in targeted areas, e.g., curricula design and materials development, promotion of teaching competencies, promotion of agriscience and agribusiness career information, instruction delivery systems, student experiential learning, and educational activities that increase the diversity of students pursuing degrees in agriscience and agribusiness. NIFA has determined that grant funds awarded under this authority may not be used for the renovation or refurbishment of research, education, or extension space; the purchase or installation of fixed equipment in such space; or the planning, repair, rehabilitation, acquisition, or construction of buildings or facilities. Tuition remission not allowed. Section 720 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2012 (Pub.L. No. 112-55) limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

*Special Note on Indirect Costs as in-kind matching contributions: Indirect costs may be claimed under the Federal portion of the award budget or, alternatively, indirect costs may be claimed as a matching contribution (if no indirect costs are requested under the Federal portion of the award budget). However, unless explicitly authorized in the RFA, indirect costs may not be claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution, unless the total claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less.

An awardee may split the allocation between the Federal and non-Federal portions of the budget only if the total amount of indirect costs charged to the project does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less.

For example, if an awardee's indirect costs are capped at 30 percent pursuant to FY 2012 appropriated funds, Section 720 of the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2012 (Division A of Pub. L. 112-55), the awardee may request 15 percent of the indirect costs on both the Federal portion of the award and as a matching contribution.

Or, the awardee may request any similar percentage that, when combined, does not exceed the maximum indirect cost rate of 30 percent. Fully discretionary.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: Cultivating an Edible Education

Project incorporates both technical knowledge in the FANH sciences throughout core courses in biology, chemistry, physics, environmental science and history, and soft skills by employing project-based learning, dedicated instructional units, community engagement, field trips and summer programs to reach disadvantaged students from Rochester public schools.

Engaging secondary students in agricultural science career paths through integration of controlled environment food production education

The purpose of this project is to develop and deliver an innovative agriculture science curriculum and equip educators in its use to promote student proficiency in high school and increase enrollment in agriculture and food production tracks in post-secondary schools as well as later careers. This project will center on the use of controlled environment for soilless vegetable growing systems as a tool to enhance 9th through 12th grade chemistry, biology, and agriculture science education.

Building Capacity for School Based Agricultural Education in the Food Insecure Region of Michigan's Upper Peninsula

Michigan State University Upper Peninsula Research and Extension Center (UPREC) in partnership with the U.P. Food Exchange (UPFE) and the Growing

U.P. Agricultural Association (GUPAA) seeks to support the establishment of formal, school-based agricultural, food, and natural resource (AFNR) education programs in the Upper Peninsula (U.P.) of Michigan. Fiscal Year 2017:

Enhancing the future poultry workforce through STEM-based industry exposure and engagement

This three-year project will support a total of 405 students and faculty through a curriculum that combines STEM knowledge with career development using the poultry industry as its focal point.

Collaborative Learning between Higher Education and High School Students Dually-Enrolled in Online Nutrition

This two-year project will support partnerships and networking among academic institutions. It will advance agricultural education by fostering partnerships between high schools and colleges in the area of nutrition. The grant will strengthen content and delivery of a high school nutrition course and allow junior and senior high school students to take a dual enrollment in a college level nutrition course for credit.

Connecting Land-Grant University Research Centers to Secondary Agricultural Education Students in Idaho, Kansas, and Oklahoma

This three-year project will support 7,290 faculty and students through a curriculum development initiative involving a partnership of three Land Grant Institutions: University of Idaho, Kansas State University and Oklahoma State University. The project will create opportunities for high school students to have hands-on research experiences in agri-science at university research centers. To ensure the students get the most out of their research experience the project will provide mentoring to high school agricultural teachers and participating university researchers so they can optimize their ability to teach and develop students talents. Fiscal Year 2018: This program is subject to congressional budget approval for FY 2018. At this time, the projected funding level is Zero ($0). Credentials/Documentation:

The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

(i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;

(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Fiscal Year 2016: The National Institute of Food and Agriculture (NIFA) made ten (10) awards to seven (7) institutions totaling $1,674,391.

The 1994 Research Program is a competitive grant where recipients are selected via peer review.

Applicants may apply at four (4) different levels. A Student Research Experience can be funded up to $65,000; a Research Capacity Building Option up to $85,000 and a New Discovery Research option up to $200,000 and New Discovery with significant student research [five (5) or more students] set at $220,000.

There is no limit on the number of applications that can be submitted by an institution and multiple awards can be made.

In FY 2016, there were two (2) student projects, one (1) capacity and seven (7) new discovery; four (4) of those included significant student research.

Further, two (2) proposals that were not funded in FY 2015, re-submitted enhanced applications and received awards in FY 2016. Fiscal Year 2017: NIFA made ten (10) awards to seven (7) institutions totaling $1,668,633. One (1) school received two (2) awards.

The 1994 Research Program is a competitive grant where recipients are selected via peer review. There were 18 proposals accepted for review. Each proposal was evaluated and scored by three (3) reviewers.

Applicants could apply at five (5) different levels. A Student Research Experience can be funded up to $60,000; a Research Capacity Building Option up to $95,000 and a New Discovery Research option up to $200,000 and New Discovery with significant student research [five (5) or more students] set at $220,000. In 2017 it was also possible to receive a Pathways to Research grant. This grant helps a 1994 Land Grant build scientific capacity in order to become a more competitive funding candidate. Pathways awards were funded up to $59,954.

For the FY 2017 program, there were no restrictions in the number of applications that an eligible institution may submit through grants.gov. NIFA would only award up to two (2) research awards to any one (1) institution in the New Discovery Research option and up to two (2) awards in the Capacity Building option with a limit of three (3) awards total to any one (1) eligible institution in response to the FY 2017 RFA. EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2016; Turtle Mountain Community College, Anishinabe Campus Student Research Experience. Using Biological Indicators as Measures for Water Quality

Turtle Mountain Community College students will use biological indicators to measure water quality in Belcourt Lake. This project builds off of previous student research projects, which also used macroinvertebrates to evaluate water quality in Ox Creek, a waterway fed by the spill way of Belcourt Lake. The previous project found high levels of lead in sloughs north and west of Belcourt Lake. The project director expects six (6) students to have an intensive training in research and leadership skills.

An Undergraduate Research Experience to Develop Improved Forest Carbon and Biomass Models for the Salish-Kootenai & Nez Perce Inventory Programs

The project supports sustainable silviculture of indigenous forests and bioenergy production. It will also train students through hands-on experiences in forestry research. The collaborators are the University of Montana College of Forestry and Conservation, a McIntire-Stennis institution. Tribal partners are the forestry departments of the Nez Perce, Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes.

Conservation Bison Herd Health and Well-Being

This research will evaluate the effect of diet, parasites and disease on the reproductive fitness of Fort Peck Tribes bison herds. The Fort Peck Tribes Yellowstone conservation herd had a calving rate of essentially 100 percent in 2015. However, in the same year, the tribes commercial herds calving rate was only 75 percent. This study whether herd health is the deciding factor in the calving rates. The project director reports that the Fort Peck Tribes conservation herd offers a rare opportunity to conduct this evidence-based research, as its genetics are devoid of cattle DNA introgression. The work will be conducted with direct involvement of three (3) Fort Peck Community College students supervised by faculty from that institution.

Plant Phenology as an Indicator of Forest Community Resilience and Adaptive Capacity

This research will evaluate how climate changes affects how plants emerge, flower, produce seed and go dormant. Observing changes in plant life cycles and their reproductive fitness could provide strong indicators of changing climate conditions and assist natural resource managers in responding to change. In particular, this project will identify which plant species can provide early warning indicators of climate change in Northeastern Wisconsin.

New Discovery: Atmospheric Mercury Loading In The St. Louis River Watershed And Potential Correlation With Dragonfly Bioaccumulation

The project director will guide students as they measure the mercury deposition in the St. Louis River watershed. Students will test for correlation between dry deposition and bioaccumulation of mercury in dragonfly larvae. The data will help tribal natural resource managers and health officials to protect those who rely on the watersheds fish and plant life food. This study, which builds on previous student research, is also timely in that recent studies find that one (1) in ten (10) infants on the North Shore of Lake Superior have unsafe levels of mercury in their blood. Fiscal Year 2017: Building A Community-Based Research Plan At Tohono Oodham Community College

This two-year, Pathways to Research proposal will support a partnership with University of Arizona and meetings to develop an Indigenous Research program at the college. Project directors will reach out to students and the greater community to learn about what they would support in a new research program that is adapted to the needs of the Tohono O'odham Reservation.

IAIA Student Agricultural Research Project Phase II

This two-year Student Research project builds on a previous program to provide arts students with an opportunity to study science. Working with New Mexico State University, IAIA will train students in agriculture research methods applicable to farms along the Rio Grande and Pecos River corridors. This will enhance science literacy among all participants and may engage a few students in a new academic career.

Implementing Interdisciplinary Experiential Learning at a Tribal College

This two-year Capacity project will focus on building new collaborations with North Dakota State University. The project will investigate the potential of equine assisted learning as a means to address the community concerns about loss of culture and low academic achievement among reservation youth.

Effectiveness of sub-irrigation in the Milk River floodplain, Montana

This two-year, New Discovery project will investigate whether a sub-irrigation system can address the agricultural needs of in semi-arid regions of northcentral Montana. The Aaniiih Nakoda College community garden will serve as a demonstration plot for this new tool to manage soil moisture and nutrient management. The project director also hopes to attract more students to the environmental science program with the project. Montana State University-Bozeman will partner with the college on this research.

Strengthening Little Big Horn College Research Capacity through Improving Rural Families' Access to Safe Drinking Water

This two-year, New Discovery project, a partnership with the University of Wisconsin-Madison, seeks to apply archeology to develop a more sustainable agriculture on the Menominee reservation. The project builds on three (3) tribal research capacity grants and will explore Menominee agricultural practices from 750 to 1650 AD to gain insights on systems that could benefit modern agriculture during times of climate change. Thirty students will benefit from this project, including ten student interns, qualifying it for the enhanced student funding option. Fiscal Year 2018: Data is not yet available. Pertinent data to be provided by Program at a future date.

Project types were: Regular ($150,000 - $450,000) and Consortium Grant ($300,000 - $1,500,000) applications.

Each eligible individual institution, independent branch campus, and branch institution of State system may receive, or be a party to, a maximum of two (2) grant awards one (1) Regular Grant and one (1) Consortium Grant. A total of 3 ANNH applications were received:

- (1) consortium project of nine (9) institutions in Alaska;
- (2) consortium project of nine (9) institutions in Hawaii; and,
- (3) regular application from one (1) institution in Hawaii.

As evaluated by a peer review panel, the 3 applications requested a total amount of $3,478,786.68 which exceeded the award balance of $3,056,928 by at least 12%. Hence, the regular application was not funded and referred to the Hawaii consortium project for future potential partnership.

The funding ratio for the ANNH Program in FY 2016 was 67%. Fiscal Year 2017: For the FY 2017 ANNH award cycle, a total of $3,064,215 was available for awards after deducting legislatively authorized set-asides.

Grant types are as follows:

- Regular grants ($150,000 - $450,000)
- Collaborative grants ($300,000 - $1,500,000)

Each eligible individual institution, independent branch campus, and branch institution of State system may receive, or be a party to, a maximum of two (2) grant awards one (1) Regular Grant and one (1) Collaborative Grant. A total of four (4) ANNH applications were received:

- 1. collaborative grant for a consortium project of nine (9) institutions in Alaska;
- 2. collaborative grant of consortium project of nine (9) institutions in Hawaii;
- 3. regular application from one (1) institution in Hawaii; and,
- 4. regular application from one (1) institution in Alaska.

The peer review panel recommended three (3) of the proposals for funding two (2) collaborative grant applications, one (1) regular grant application). Since the three (3) recommended projects totaled $3,478,215, budget modifications will be made. It is expected that all available funds of $3,065,340 will be awarded in FY 2017.

The anticipated funding ratio for the ANNH Program in FY 2017 is 75%. Fiscal Year 2018: It is projected that $3,058,455 will be available for similar projects in FY 2018. Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: A consortium grant was funded to lead an Agribusiness Incubator Program that provides educational programs. These programs target a variety of degree levels, including Associate of Science, and Bachelors of Science. Also, the program emphasizes Student Experiential Learning, and Student Recruitment, Retention, and Educational Equality, with focus on developing student leadership skills, and building capacity among the states rural agriculture communities, including a large number of traditionally underserved minority populations. Project outcomes include a higher number of graduates in agricultural sciences; and increased productivity and profitability of the states agribusinesses.

A consortium grant was funded to plan for the sustainability of indigenous knowledge and usage paired with Western science programs to strengthen career pathways for the states native and rural students. Subsistence knowledge and usage is a term used to refer to those targeted USDA sciences that assist individuals and communities to better understand and improve food, shelter, transportation and other material aspects of rural/village life. The proposed plan of work continues to build on the accomplishments of earlier funding to deliver coursework and support students in Ethnobotany, Environmental Studies (including sustainable energy), High Latitude Range Management and continued development of new opportunities in tribal natural resource management. Funding will also support the continued development of a coastal resource science program and a continued marine science career pathway program. PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: ERS research on the farm and rural economy found the following:

--ERS farm income indicators and forecasts measure the financial performance of the U.S. farm sector.

--Farming is still an industry of family businesses.

--The ERS commodity outlook program serves USDA stakeholders in the public and private sectors by delivering timely, independent and objective information about agricultural markets.

--Rural child poverty rose from 19 percent in 1999 to 26 percent by 2013.

--A variety of factors lead migrants to return to their rural home communities.

--A disproportionately small share of grants by large foundations were disbursed to rural recipients during 2005 to 2010.

ERS research and analysis of U.S. agricultural markets found the following:

--Producer participation in local food systems and the value of local food sales are growing.

--Most land in farms is operated by the land owner.

--Mandatory price reporting for livestock transactions over the past 15 years led to some improvements in price discovery and market efficiency.

--Renewable energy policies have emerged as key drivers in global markets for biofuels.

--ERS estimates that the effects of recent decreases in energy prices on acreage and production are relatively small.

ERS research on climate change found the following:

--Climate change is likely to increase the use of genetic resources for adaptation to heat and drought stress.

ERS research on conservation, water, and environmental issues found the following:

--Implementation of the Evidence and Innovation Agenda continues as experiments are used to test existing and new approaches to program delivery.

--ERS research examined the issues related to the declining effectiveness of glyphosate and choices for managing increased resistance to it.

--The cost, biophysical impacts, and benefit valuation of wetland restoration and protection efforts vary widely from place to place, depending on a host of factors.

--The 2012-2015 droughts in California are having a major impact on agriculture. A variety of mechanisms influence how those impacts are felt by farmers, crop and livestock consumers, and the food sector.

ERS research on the organic sector found the following:

--Organic field crops have been profitable compared with conventional field crops primarily due to the significant price premiums paid for certified organic production that more than offset the additional economic costs.

ERS research on global food security found the following:

--Food security is projected to improve for many developing countries.

--ERS research suggests that households do not distribute calories equitably across all household members in developing countries, and that the depth of undernourishment for certain household members may be greater than traditional household consumption surveys suggest.

ERS research on global agricultural markets found the following:

--USDA Agricultural Projections to 2024 suggest long run increases in global consumption, world trade, and agricultural commodity prices.

--The joint effects of sanitary and phytosanitary measures and tariff rate quotas maintained by the European Union (EU) significantly impede U.S. meat exports.

--Easing trade and travel restrictions could stimulate increased levels and a wider variety of U.S. agricultural exports to Cuba.

--Chinas accumulation of large cotton stockpiles to support prices for its domestic producers from 2011-2013 has introduced a new degree of uncertainty into world cotton markets. Fiscal Year 2017: ERS research explores how investments in rural people, business, and communities affect the capacity of rural economies to prosper in the new and changing global marketplace. The agency analyzes how demographic trends, employment opportunities, Federal policies, and public investment in infrastructure and technology enhance economic opportunity and quality of life for rural Americans. Equally important is ERSs commitment to help enhance the quality of life for the Nations farmers who increasingly depend on these rural economies for employment and economic support, as well as to analyze new developments in the linkages between these farmers, consumers, and local economies.

ERS continues to monitor changing economic and demographic trends in rural America, particularly the implications of these changes for the employment, education, income, and housing patterns of low-income rural populations. The rural development process is complex and sensitive to a wide range of factors that, to a large extent, are unique to each rural community. Nonetheless, ERS assesses general approaches to development to determine when, where, and under what circumstances rural development strategies will be most successful.

ERS research and analysis provide insight into market conditions facing U.S. agriculture, potential avenues for innovation and market expansion, and strategies for managing risk. ERS produces USDA's estimates of farm income. In addition, the ERS program identifies and analyzes market structure and technological developments that affect efficiency and profitability.

The ERS climate change research program develops models and other analytical techniques to predict responses of farmers to greenhouse gas mitigation options, analyze the impact of mitigation options on domestic and global agricultural markets and land and water use, and evaluate adaptation by farmers to a new climate regime through use of alternative technologies. The ERS climate change research program builds on extensive expertise on the economics of land use and land management, technology adoption, conservation program design, economics of biofuels, and value and dissemination of public investment in research and development.

In addition, ERS is continuing to contribute to USDAs efforts to improve the science behind Federal environmental, water and air quality regulations and programs. As part of its analysis of environmental regulations and conservation incentive policies, ERS research continues to provide insight into developing policies for controlling nonpoint source pollution. More generally, ERS research analyzes the economic efficiency, environmental effectiveness, and distributional implications of alternative designs of resource, conservation, environmental, and commodity programs and their linkages. ERS conducts research on technological innovation in agriculture, the economic performance, structure and viability of the farm sector and of different types of farms, and the state of global food security. ERS effectively communicates research findings to policy makers, program managers, and those shaping the public debate. The research program identifies key economic issues and uses sound analytical techniques to understand the immediate and broader economic and social consequences of alternative policies and programs related to the sustainability and use of biotechnology in U.S. agriculture, including policies to promote trade of U.S. products.

ERS has a broad program of work examining the production and marketing characteristics of the U.S. organic sector. Ongoing activities include research on the adoption of certified organic farming systems across the U.S., analysis of consumer demand and prices in specific markets, and surveys of organic producers and markets.

The ERS research program includes an ongoing assessment of global food security. ERS provides research, analysis, and information on food security, including factors affecting food production and ability to import food, in Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Caribbean, and the Commonwealth of Independent States to decision makers in the United States and throughout the world. ERS is also investigating conceptual and measurement challenges inherent in assessments of undernourishment at the country, household, and individual level with experts in academia and international organizations. An annual report provides ERS up-to-date assessment of global food security. Fiscal Year 2018: ERS conducts research that strengthens our understanding of American farms, the agricultural sector, and rural communities. This includes analysis of commodity markets, the competitiveness of U.S. farms at home and abroad, and the general health of the rural economy. ERS research and analysis provides insights into market conditions facing U.S. agriculture, potential avenues for innovation and market expansion, and the effects of farm policies. The agency conducts research on the effects of new agricultural technologies and practices on farm business and farm sector performance as well as their implications for the changing size and organization of U.S. farms. ERS produces USDAs estimates of farm business and farm household income and identifies and analyzes market structure and technological developments that affect farm efficiency and profitability. ERS research and analysis provides insights into how the agricultural sector is evolving in both the short and long term. Analysis of the major factors driving the near and long-term outlook for agricultural commodity markets plays a central role in supporting USDAs monthly flagship report, World Agriculture Supply and Demand Estimates (WASDE). This report serves as the benchmark for information on major global commodities, and also supports the annual USDA baseline, ten-year agricultural projections that go into the Presidents budget baseline. ERS research explores how investments in rural businesses, communities, and people affect the capacity of rural economies to prosper in a changing global marketplace. The agency analyzes how employment opportunities, Federal policies, demographic trends, and public investment in infrastructure and technology enhance economic opportunity and quality of life for rural Americans.

The ERS natural resources and environmental economics research program improves understanding of the economic relationships behind Federal environmental, water and air quality regulations and programs. As part of its analysis of environmental regulations and conservation incentive policies, ERS provides insight into developing policies for controlling nonpoint source pollution. More generally, ERS research analyzes the economic efficiency, environmental effectiveness, and distributional implications of alternative designs of resource, conservation, environmental, and commodity programs and their linkages.

ERS develops models and other analytical techniques to estimate the impacts of alternative approaches used by farmers to adapt to changing weather conditions and resource constraints as the demand for agricultural production grows. The models predict responses of farmers to USDA programs including voluntary incentives for drought mitigation, and improved soil health and nutrient management. A related area of research addresses the implications of regional drought for U.S. agriculture, including producers production and investment decisions, and their participation in conservation and other risk-mitigating programs. ERS research on farmer responses the implications for markets and natural resources builds on expertise in the economics of land use and land management, technology adoption, conservation program design, economics of biofuels, and value and dissemination of public investment in research and development.

ERS conducts research on the economic performance and competitiveness of the U.S. agriculture in international markets. U.S. producers rely on export markets to sell agricultural and food products, to sustain and grow revenues, and to contribute to employment, particularly in rural communities. This research program examines emerging patterns of agricultural trade and the associated economic drivers including income and population growth, and domestic and trade policies, and provides information on the principal underlying factors affecting U.S. and global agricultural trade.

ERS conducts research on the state of global food security, including factors affecting food production and the ability to import food, in Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Caribbean, and the Commonwealth of Independent States. By investigating conceptual and measurement challenges inherent in assessments of undernourishment at the country, household, and individual level, ERS informs decision makers in the United States and throughout the world with its annual assessment of global food security.

ERS research and analysis provide insight into market conditions facing U.S. agriculture, avenues for innovation, and market expansion to help farmers and ranchers manage risk. ERS produces USDAs estimates of farm income. In addition, the ERS program identifies and analyzes market structure and technological developments that affect efficiency and profitability.

The ERS climate change research program develops models and other analytical techniques to predict responses of farmers to greenhouse gas mitigation options, analyze the impact of mitigation options on domestic and global agricultural markets and land and water use, and evaluate adaptation by farmers to a new climate regime through use of alternative technologies. The research program identifies key economic issues and uses sound analytical techniques to understand the immediate and broader economic and social consequences of alternative policies and programs related to the sustainability and use of biotechnology in U.S. agriculture, including policies to promote trade of U.S. products. ERS has a broad program of work examining the production and marketing characteristics of the U.S. organic sector. Ongoing activities include research on the adoption of certified organic farming systems across the U.S., analysis of consumer demand and prices in specific markets, and several nationwide surveys of organic producers and markets. The ERS research program includes an ongoing assessment of global food security. ERS provides research, analysis, and information on food security, including factors affecting food production and ability to import food, in Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Caribbean, and the Commonwealth of Independent States to decision makers in the United States and throughout the world. An annual report provides an up-to-date assessment of global food security. Fiscal Year 2018: ERS will conduct the following research on the rural and farm economy:

Large-Scale Farms in the United States. Farm production continues to shift to larger operations. ERS will analyze this shift for different regions and commodities, and will assess reasons for its continuation. The study will also focus on the attributes of very large U.S. farms using a new top sales class of $10 million or more. ERS will examine size and growth, management, ownership, commodity focus, and financial performance of the largest farms.

Implications of Changing Land Values for Financial Stress and Land Ownership. ERS research will examine the potential vulnerability of the farm sector to changes in agricultural land values, interest rates, and commodity prices. Farm real estate values reached record highs in 2013, but forecasts indicate a slowing rate of appreciation, or possibly even a decline in land values caused in part by lower commodity prices and rising interest rates.

Financial Stress, Bankruptcies, and Loan Delinquencies. After several years of strong growth in farm income, the sectors overall returns have declined, with net farm income now forecast for 2016 to be 45 percent below the $123.8 billion peak in 2013. The decline may lead to increased financial stress within the sector; two possible indicators of financial stress would be increases in farm bankruptcies and in loan delinquencies. ERS is analyzing trends in bankruptcies and loan delinquencies over time in order to understand and identify drivers of financial stress in the sector. Preliminary results using the most recent available data indicate minimal signs of financial stress in the agricultural sector. Both farm bankruptcy rates, considered a lagging indicator of financial stress, and commercial bank delinquency rates for agricultural loans, are low compared to historical levels and to more recent history in the 2000s.

Trends in Mortality Rates among Rural Residents. Preliminary ERS research has identified rising mortality rates among some subgroups in the rural U.S. population during the twenty-first century. This analysis focuses on the largest such group, middle-aged white men, tracing the upward trend in death rates since 2000 and examining possible correlates of this trend, including access to health care and increasing economic distress in some rural regions.

Analysis of the Rural Rental Housing Program. ERS research will examine the current allocation of USDAs housing and the communities served, areas presently underserved or at risk of becoming underserved, the factors contributing to the risk of loss of affordable rental housing, and the communities and populations likely to be affected. Since 1963, USDA has made subsidized direct loans to developers to finance affordable, multi-family rental housing in rural areas for low and moderate income families, elderly people, and persons with disabilities. This research will inform policy makers concerned about the need for affordable rental housing in rural areas.

ERS will conduct the following research on farm and commodity policy:

Analysis of USDA Risk Management Programs. American farmers face risks from weather and markets for the inputs they purchase (e.g., energy, labor) and products they sell. ERS will continue to provide research that analyzes the environment in which farmers operate and USDAs risk management programs. Building on a set of ERS studies completed or to be completed in FY17 on risk management policies and programs under the 2014 Farm Bill programs, ERS will conduct analysis that could have implements for program design. One study will provide a broad overview of the different risk management tools available in different countries, which in turn will inform an empirical analysis for domestic producers of how changes to their agricultural risk management portfolio impacts their downside revenue risk. Motivated by the notion that weather data is rapidly collected for all counties, another study will empirically examine for U.S. crop producers the differences in impacts on risk management of crop insurance policies and other commodity support policies using a weather-based yield index rather than farm yield-based.

Improved Season-Average Price Forecasts. ERS will conduct research on using forward-looking data and methods to improve the accuracy and expand market information provided from USDAs situation and outlook program. The analysis will use public USDA reports and daily futures and options prices to better inform market participants about price uncertainty in major agricultural commodity markets. Ultimately, derivatives markets are a technology that improves the discovery of market price levels given supply and demand fundamentals. To the degree that the latter are well understood, markets function more efficiently.

Feed Grains Database Developments. The ERS Feed Grains Database is an important component in USDA monitoring of the grain, oilseed, and livestock complex, providing data on four feed grains (corn, grain sorghum, barley, and oats), seven foreign coarse grains (feed grains plus rye, millet, and mixed grains), hay, animal unit indexes of grain and roughage, rail rate indexes, and grain shipments. The database serves as an important, timely, accurate, reliable, and official source of information for stakeholders. Planned program enhancements include applications to enhance the delivery of information and expansion to other commodities.

Updated Commodity Cost and Returns Estimates. ERS produces annual cost and returns estimates for nine crop commodities, as well as hogs and milk. The annual estimates update baseline estimates with information on changes in input and commodity prices, while the baselines are set using data on technologies, production processes, and expense shares from commodity-specific questionnaires of the ARMS. ERS will set new baselines for corn and milk with surveys from the 2016 ARMS, and will design a wheat questionnaire for the 2017 ARMS to help set a new wheat baseline estimate (the surveys are completed by spring of the year following the reference year).

Analysis of the Dairy Margin Protection Program. ERS will conduct an ex-post examination of the Dairy Margin Protection Program, which offers dairy producers catastrophic coverage at no cost. The analysis will use the USDA baseline to examine margin expectations and milk output and how margins are likely to increase in nominal terms by the next Farm Bill. This research will further explain how feed efficiency and milk output could impact the national averages calculated for the program.

U.S. Hog Production: Continuing Trends in Productivity Growth. Total factor productivity in the U.S. hog industry will be estimated using Agricultural Resource Management Survey (ARMS) data to determine productivity trends. Information pertaining to changes in industry structure and production practices including changes in the size of operations, the use of production contracts, growth-promoting antibiotics, and innovative technologies are reported and evaluated relative to productivity growth.

ERS will conduct the following activities related to homeland security:

Analysis of Animal Disease Outbreaks. ERS researchers will collaborate with Federal and academic researchers to examine how economic variables and factors affect animal and crop disease outbreak assessments. This work will examine how economic analysis can help to develop clearer views of actual and hypothetical outbreaks, and to more fully identify what factors are significant in measuring the success of a mitigation or prevention effort. This research focuses on efforts to introduce economic components into epidemiological analysis that will allow analysts and decision makers to include social (e.g., impacts on rural communities) considerations and expand the number of criteria that may be used to determine effective outbreak responses. ERS will continue to invest in the data and analytical capacity needed to provide the current market context and data needed to support USDA Homeland Security event assessments and planning efforts, and support the USDA Highly Pathogenic Avian Influenza multiagency coordination. In addition, ERS is contributing expertise as subject matter experts to the Department of Homeland Security, Science and Technology Directorate, for the Agro-terrorism Risk Assessment, and the NSTC Foreign Animal Disease Threats Interagency Working Group.

ERS will conduct the following research on conservation, water, and environmental issues:

Conservation Compliance. To maintain eligibility for most agriculture-related federal programs, Conservation Compliance requires farmers to implement approved conservation systems on highly erodible cropland and refrain from draining wetlands. The Agricultural Act of 2014 eliminated Direct Payments and Countercyclical Payments which previously accounted for a large proportion of compliance incentives but also created shallow loss programs and linked crop insurance premium subsidies to Conservation Compliance requirements. ERS research will investigate the effectiveness of conservation compliance, changes in incentives due to the Agricultural Act of 2014, and the effectiveness of these incentives in protecting highly erodible cropland and wetlands.

Economics of Reducing Nutrient Losses from Agriculture in the Mississippi Atchafalaya River Basin. ERS research will examine the economic consequences of reducing nutrient losses from agriculture to the Gulf of Mexico and its implications for improving environmental quality. Every summer a large hypoxic zone forms in the Gulf of Mexico. Low dissolved oxygen in the Gulf is a serious environmental concern that can impact valuable fisheries and disrupt sensitive ecosystems. Reducing agricultural nutrient losses has been a major conservation goal for USDA and many Mississippi Basin states. However, despite years of investment in conservation measures, most cropland does not meet criteria for good nutrient management. ERS expects to publish a report that examines policy options for reducing nutrient losses in the Mississippi/Atchafalaya River Basin.

Changes in Climate and Crop Insurance. The changing climate has the potential to introduce greater uncertainty into agricultural production, with implications for farm profitability. This can influence the demand for crop insurance products and the costs to government of providing crop insurance premium subsidies. ERS researchers are examining how a changing climate will affect crop insurance premium subsidies in 2080. The ERS analysis combines models of crop risk, land allocation, prices, and crop insurance premiums to simulate total premium subsidy costs under alternative scenarios.

Determinants of Unfinished Conservation Practices. Since 1996, USDA working lands programs have entered into hundreds of thousands of conservation contracts. Many of the practices specified in these contracts are never installed as planned, leading to lost opportunities for additional conservation activity. ERS researchers are examining reasons why practices get dropped, using EQIP program administrative data to ascertain whether changes to conservation plans are due solely to adaptive management (adjusting to unforeseen weather or financial conditions) or to other reasons related to contract design.

Conservation Legacy Effects. An aspect of conservation policy that has received little attention is how financial assistance may provide conservation benefits beyond the specific location and duration of program participation. ERS researchers are using EQIP administrative data along with satellite data to study the extent to which participation leads farmers to retain conservation tillage practices after the contract has expired or to adopt conservation tillage on non-contract fields, or the extent to which participation leads neighboring farmers to adopt conservation tillage on their land. This research improves our understanding of the long-term benefits from conservation, and would help in the development of better metrics for measuring program success.

Herbicide Resistant Weed Management in Corn. Weed resistance to the herbicide glyphosate (popularly known as Round-up) is a growing problem in field crops, and there are also emerging concerns with insect resistance to seeds genetically engineered with the Bt toxin. ERS has elicited information on pesticide use, seed choices, and resistance management practices from farmers in the 2016 Corn Production Practices questionnaire of the ARMS. ERS research will evaluate farm strategies to manage weed and insect resistance, and track how those strategies have changed since the earlier 2010 ARMS corn survey; the research will also draw on related ARMS soybean surveys for 2006 and 2012.

ERS will conduct the following research on global agricultural markets and food security:

Investments in Agricultural Research in High-Income Countries. There is a growing concern that agricultural productivity growth, especially in high-income countries, may be slowing, and that current agricultural R&D levels may not be sufficient to address this concern. Some Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development countries have introduced policy reforms to improve the financing and performance of their public agricultural R&D systems. However, there is a lack of comprehensive and comparable information on these trends and developments, particularly for countries outside of the U.S. ERS is analyzing trends in U.S. agricultural research funding and agricultural research policy reforms in the context of global changes. This analysis will demonstrate the impact of R&D investments on agricultural productivity growth and examine the complementary roles of public and private research, and relate public investments to the size of the agricultural sector and to public science investments across the economy.

The Next Horizon: The Agricultural Trade Policy Landscape in 2016 and Beyond. ERS will quantify the potential for gains from trade reform under existing forms of policies targeted at agriculture. The core of the product would be an estimate of economic impacts of selected current domestic and border intervention policies, focusing on tariffs and tariff-rate quotas and other trade-related policies, domestic support, and non-tariff measures. To examine the impacts of different policy scenarios, the trade modeling framework will remove these policies separately and in combination in the context of multilateral trade liberalization.

Global Price Determination. While price in a given region reflects local (current and expected) supply and demand fundamentals, important agricultural commodities are often traded internationally, meaning that regional prices are also affected by the prices and therefore the fundamentals of their trading partners. ERS research will examine whether shifting production and trading patterns for several major commodities have affected the degree to which U.S. prices inform global prices, and also the influence international production and demand shocks have over prices paid to farmers domestically.

Chinas Commodity Markets and Efficiency. China has become more integrated with global agricultural markets since its accession to the World Trade Organization (WTO) in 2001. China is the worlds largest producer and consumer of most agricultural commodities, so its integration with global markets is an important determinant of the efficiency of those markets. ERS research will evaluate the efficiency of agricultural commodity markets before and after Chinas WTO accession to characterize the countrys degree of global integration.

International Food Security Assessment. ERS produces an annual assessment of the prevalence and depth of food security in low- and middle-income countries. ERS makes available the full historical database used for the model projections on its website. ERS developed new model capabilities, included in the 2017 report, including the ability to assess the impact of changes in food prices and income on demand. This allows ERS analysis to address all four dimensions of food security: availability, access, utilization and stability.

Progress and Challenges in Global Food Security. ERS will analyze progress made in reducing global food security, as well as new areas of challenge, drawing on 25 years of data from the International Food Security database. The analysis will examine progress in food security measurement, agricultural trade and food security, agricultural productivity and food safety nets. It will also highlight emerging issues that create new food security challenges, such as nutrition, risk management, climate change and urbanization. It integrates the analysis with priorities developed in the Global Food Security Act of 2016.

ERS will conduct the following research on production technologies:

Developments in Markets for U.S. Organic Exports. ERS research will examine developments in the U.S. organic export market. In addition to developing absolute and relative measures of organic trade performance over time, by commodity, and by trading partner, ERS will analyze the impact of equivalency agreements on observed trade flows. Results will inform the extent to which observed increases in U.S. organic exports can be attributed to these agreements as compared to changes in market fundamentals.

Evolution of Markets for Genetically Engineered Seeds. Since their commercial introduction in 1996, most acreage planted to genetically engineered (GE) seeds have been planted to three crops: corn, cotton, and soybeans and has featured two traits, one for insect resistance and one for herbicide tolerance. In recent years, GE acreage has expanded to other field crops, such as alfalfa, canola, and sugarbeets, and seed developers have added more complex combinations of the two key traits as well as new traits for drought tolerance. ERS research will draw on questions introduced into the 2016 ARMS to track the spread of new types of GE technologies.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: ERS research on food choices and health outcomes showed the following:

Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) participants are less likely to drive their own car to do their primary food shopping and more likely to get rides from someone else or take public transit. However, these differences in transportation mode do not translate into differences in the types of stores used for grocery shopping among SNAP households. The National Household Food Acquisition and Purchase Survey (FoodAPS) is the first survey to collect unique and comprehensive data about food purchases and acquisitions for a nationally representative sample of U.S. households. In March 2015, ERS published a report that compared shopping patterns of SNAP households to low- and higher income nonparticipant households and found that many households bypass the store that is closest to them to shop at another store. For example, among SNAP households, the nearest store was, on average, 2.0 miles from the household, but the store primarily used for grocery shopping was, on average, 3.4 miles from the household. Multiple intramural and extramural research projects are underway using FoodAPS with reports focusing on general food expenditures and WIC participant shopping behavior planned for release in 2016.

An estimated 86 percent of American households were food secure throughout the entire year in 2014, meaning that they had access at all times to enough food for an active, healthy life for all household members. The remaining households (14 percent) were food insecure at least some time during the year, including 5.6 percent with very low food security because the household lacked money and other resources for food, resulting in reduced food intake and disruptions in eating patterns for one or more household members. Additional research focused specifically on children shows that an estimated 90.6 percent of households with children were food secure throughout the year in 2011, which denotes that all household members had consistent access to adequate food for active, healthy lives. The ERS food security statistics are widely recognized as the benchmark for measuring food security in the U.S., and support decision making on USDA food assistance and nutrition programs.

Following Dietary Guidance need not cost more, but many Americans would need to re-allocate their food budgets to do so. Behavioral changes can improve diet quality, but major improvements would require Americans to change how they allocate their food budgets across food groups. Most Americans across all income levels consume poor diets. Behavior changes, such as preparing food at home instead of eating out, are associated with improvements in diet quality. To realize the much larger improvements in diet quality required to meet the Dietary Guidelines for Americans, ERS research found that many Americans would need to reallocate their food budgets, spending a larger share on fruits and vegetables and a lower share on protein foods and foods high in solid fats, added sugars, and sodium. Briefings on this topic to senior USDA and other policy officials informed discussions of the upcoming release of the 2015 Dietary Guidelines.

An estimated 1,249 calories per capita per day are lost from the food supply. ERS published the latest estimates on the amount and value of food loss in the United States. These estimates are for more than 200 individual foods using ERS's Loss-Adjusted Food Availability data. In 2010, an estimated 31 percent, or 133 billion pounds, of the 430 billion pounds of food produced was not available for human consumption at the retail and consumer levels. This amount of loss totaled an estimated $161.6 billion, as purchased at retail prices. For the first time, ERS estimates of the calories associated with food loss are presented in this report. The top three food groups in terms of the share of the total value of food loss at the retail and consumer levels are meat, poultry, and fish (30 percent), vegetables (19 percent), and dairy products (17 percent). Food loss data from ERS is used to support USDAs Food Waste Challenge initiative and also provides a model for other countries efforts to estimate food loss.

Households living in low-income, low food-access areas have only slightly lower diet quality than other households and this difference is partially alleviated when these consumers travel farther from their homes to purchase food. About 10 percent of the U.S. population lives in low-income areas more than 1 mile from the nearest supermarket. The diet quality of these consumers may be compromised by their food environment. Some may be unable to reach supermarkets regularly or without effort, instead buying food from closer stores that offer less healthy food products. ERS investigated the correlation between households that live in low-income, low-access areas and their purchases of 14 major food groups that vary in dietary quality using supermarket scanner data. Briefings on this topic to senior USDA and other policy officials informed discussions of continuing efforts to improve food access for low-income households across the U.S.

ERS research on USDAs food and nutrition assistance programs found the following:

ERS linked 2008-12 SNAP administrative records to data from the U.S. Census Bureau's American Community Survey (ACS) on the use of SNAP and other public assistance programs to provide better information on SNAP receipt than that which would be estimated by the ACS alone. SNAP provides food and nutrition benefits to low-income households based on a formula that adjusts the benefit amount a household receives based on monthly need. ERS assessed the extent to which SNAP reaches the poorest households, also known as benefit targeting, by estimating benefit receipt by annual household income relative to poverty. Estimates of SNAP targeting toward low-income households improve when using either of two measures of intensity of SNAP participation relative to measures of ever-in-the-year participation. Replacing survey-based data on SNAP benefit receipt with administrative records of SNAP benefit receipt and adjusting the survey households to more closely reflect administrative SNAP units also improves estimates of targeting to low-income participants. Briefings to senior official at FNCS and FNS informed decision makers about the effect of more expansive data on participation measures.

School meal programs are adjusting to stronger nutritional standards, but face challenges in maintaining paid lunch participation to meet revenue goals. School foodservice programs face ongoing tradeoffs between meal cost, student participation, and nutrition quality. Changes mandated by the Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act of 2010 strengthened nutritional standards for meals and competitive foods and set minimum levels for paid meal revenues, while new options allow more schools to offer free meals to all students at reduced administrative burden. An ERS review of recent research results and new data on school lunch participation rates suggests that while many school districts have adjusted to new standards, maintaining paid meal participation remains most challenging for smaller and more rural districts. Briefings to senior USDA officials on this topic have informed USDA efforts to help States meet the challenges related to improving nutrition within allotted budgets.

ERS research on the safety of the nations food supply found the following:

Cost estimates of foodborne illnesses data provide Federal agencies with consistent, peer-reviewed estimates of the costs of foodborne illness that can be used in analyzing the impact of Federal regulations. ERS's Cost of Foodborne Illness data product, produced in collaboration with the Food Safety and Inspection Service, provides detailed data about the costs of major foodborne illnesses in the United States, including identification of specific disease outcomes for foodborne infections caused by 15 major pathogens in the United States, associated outpatient and inpatient expenditures on medical care, associated lost wages, and estimates of individuals willingness to pay to reduce mortality resulting from these foodborne illnesses. It also provides stakeholders and the general public with a means of understanding the relative impact of different foodborne infections in the United States. Cost estimates of foodborne illnesses have been used to help inform food-safety policy discussions, and these updated cost estimates provide a foundation for economic analysis of food safety policy.

New surveys on food safety practices. ERS launched an initiative to collect primary data on current food safety practices for produce growers and post-harvest firms to provide a baseline of compliance costs prior to the full implementation of the Food Safety Modernization Act (FSMA). The surveys will be completed by NASS in January 2016, and ERS will use the data in estimating the potential economic impacts of FSMA provisions on the fresh produce and animal feed sectors.

Consumers respond differently to foodborne disease outbreaks of different severities. A case study of pathogen-related recalls of cantaloupe in 2011 and 2012 suggests consumers food purchase responses take into account the relative risk severity of specific pathogens. Information from news media apparently plays a role. Federal health and safety officials warned consumers away from cantaloupes in 2011 and again in 2012. The warnings occurred under similar market conditions but were for contamination by two different foodborne microorganisms that posed entirely different health risks. After consumers were informed about the risk with the higher fatality rate, the demand for cantaloupes fell and consumers substituted other melons. No such shifts in demand were evident under the lower fatality risk, despite more illnesses attributed to it.

Establishments that bid on contracts to supply the USDAs National School Lunch Program had relatively higher levels of food safety, as measured by fewer samples of meat testing positive for Salmonella, than other establishments supplying ground beef to the commercial market. In December of 2014, ERS published a report that examined the food safety performance of suppliers of ground beef to the National School Lunch Program (NSLP) and found evidence of strategic behavior in which managers use information about their establishments past food safety performance to decide whether to bid on contracts to supply the NSLP. Research results from this report were presented at multiple briefings to senior USDA officials. Fiscal Year 2017: ERS studies the relationship among the many factors that influence food choices and health outcomes. At the household level, research focuses on food price trends, income, and individual characteristics such as age, race and ethnicity, household structure, knowledge of diet and health, and nutrition education. At the industry level, research focuses on the interaction among firms, consumers, and government programs and policies. Childrens food access, food security, and child and adult obesity continue to be important foci of the ERS research program. ERS research related to adult and child obesity includes approaches taken from behavioral economics to investigate how psychological mechanisms related to food choices might contribute to poor dietary quality and obesity.

Through its food assistance and nutrition research and by working closely with USDAs Food and Nutrition Service, ERS studies and analyzes the Nations nutrition assistance programs. These programs receive substantial Federal funding and affect the daily lives of millions of Americas children. Long-term research themes include dietary and nutritional outcomes, food program targeting and delivery, and measurement of program participation. ERS research is designed to meet the critical information needs of USDA, Congress, program managers, policy officials, the research community, and the public at large.

ERS food safety research focuses on enhancing methodologies for valuing societal benefits associated with reducing food safety risks, understanding consumer response to food safety incidents, assessing industry incentives to enhance food safety through new technologies and supply chain linkages, and evaluating regulatory options and change. ERS research also investigates the safety of food imports and the efficacy of international food safety policies and practices. ERS will effectively communicate research results to policy makers, program managers, and those shaping efforts to promote abundant, safe, and healthful food at home and abroad. Providing economic analysis of the food marketing system to understand factors affecting the availability and affordability of food for American consumers.

Providing annual estimates of the quantity of food available for human consumption, and measures of disappearance and loss in the food system. Providing economic analysis of how people make food choices, including demands for more healthful, nutritious, and safer food, and of the determinants of those choices, including prices, income, education, and socio-economic characteristics.

Conducting economic analyses of the impacts of the Nations domestic nutrition assistance programs, including the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP); the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children; and the Child Nutrition Programs.

Conducting research on food program targeting and delivery to gauge the success of programs aimed at needy and at-risk population groups, and to identify program gaps and overlaps.

Conducting research on program dynamics and administration, focusing on how program needs change with local labor market conditions, economic growth and recession, and how changing State welfare programs interact with food and nutrition programs.

Providing food safety information through publications, web materials, and briefings that address the economics of food safety, including consumer knowledge and behavior, industry practices, the relationship between international trade and food safety, and government policies and regulations.

Working with Federal food safety agency partners to evaluate available food borne illness data related to meat, poultry and egg products, and to develop more accurate measures of the effectiveness of regulatory strategies in reducing preventable food borne illness. Fiscal Year 2018: ERS will conduct the following research on USDAs food and nutrition assistance programs:

Food Insecurity in Veteran Households. Food insecurity as a measure of well-being for veterans and their households is relatively unstudied. Previous studies have been restricted to non-nationally representative samples or focused on veterans with disabilities. This study uses a nationally representative sample of veterans to describe the prevalence of food insecurity among veterans, subpopulations of veterans, and veteran households by selected characteristics.

Using Administrative Data to Improve Research on the Causal Effects of the SNAP Program on Labor Supply. This project continues the work on the effects of food assistance program participation on individuals incentives to work. Previous work examined the issue using Current Population Survey (CPS) data from Census that contain labor supply information as well as information on whether the individual participated in the SNAP program. Misreporting of SNAP participation in CPS data is a major issue with uncertain effects on estimates of the effect of participation on outcomes. The goal of the project will be to link administrative data sources to CPS data, examine how estimates of causal effects of SNAP participation on labor supply are affected by SNAP misreporting, and examine possible solutions to bias created by misreporting.

The Food Assistance National Input-Output Multiplier (FANIOM) Model and Stimulus Effects of SNAP. This project will examine the role of SNAP as a stimulus measure during an economic downturn. Using the Food Assistance National Input-Output Multiplier (FANIOM) model, we estimate the multiplier effect of a hypothetical SNAP expansion on economic output and employment. Since the end of the Great Recession, new research and new data sources are available to inform on this topic. Borrowing on these new sources, this project extends the work of ERS researchers in 2012 to provide an updated estimate of the multiplier effect of the SNAP program on the economy. Additionally, we review new literature examining the impact of the SNAP program on the economy during the Great Recession.

The Role of SNAP in the Rural Economy. ERS research will compare the rural impacts of the Supplemental Food Assistance Program (SNAP) to those in urban areas and to impacts of other Federal programs targeted to rural areas, such as agricultural commodity and rural development programs. Although SNAP is the largest USDA program, little research has investigated the economic effects of SNAP in rural areas. The project will examine how SNAP affects household savings and consumption decisions, impacts of SNAP on employment in rural vs. urban communities, and impacts of SNAP compared to impacts of agricultural commodity programs nationally and in selected regions.

Characteristics of School Districts Offering Free School Meals to All Students Through the Community Eligibility Provision. This project will study the determinants of school and district participation in the Community Eligibility Provision (CEP). In 2010, Congress mandated the CEP as a reimbursement option that allows schools serving high percentages of low-income students to offer USDA school meals at no charge to all students with reduced administrative burden. USDA's Food and Nutrition Service expects the CEP to result in expanded participation with most impact on poor or near-poor students who may benefit the most from USDA's child nutrition programs.

Food Costs of Large School Food Authorities in the National School Lunch Program. The Food and Nutrition Service (FNS) reimburses school food authorities (SFAs) for the estimated costs of providing school lunches and breakfasts. Reimbursement rates are based on cost accounting techniques that measure SFA labor, food purchase, and operating material costs. All SFAs in the 48 contiguous states receive the same reimbursement rates regardless of size or geographic location. Thus FNS implicitly assumes that labor and food purchase costs are the same across SFAs. Recent research shows that economies of scale exist in meal service and food costs vary across SFAs. Yet SFAs vary in size from large, urban SFAs serving millions of meals per year to small, rural and suburban SFAs serving less than 10,000 meals. This research will determine if cost differences exist in food purchases and if so, how these differences in costs shape food choices.

WIC and the Retail Markup of Infant Formula. This project will examine the retail markup of the formula purchased through WIC. The number of participants in WIC who can be served within the fixed budget depends heavily on the programs food-package costs, which in turn are significantly affected by the cost of infant formula. Do retailers charge higher markups for the WIC contract brand than for the non-WIC brands of formula? This is an important question because retail markups, along with the net prices, are what WIC and ultimately U.S. taxpayers pay for infant formula. The answer to this question may also have implications for the prices that non-WIC participants pay for infant formula.

ERS will conduct the following research on food safety, foodborne illness, and industry practices:

Estimating Food Attributable Fractions of Foodborne Illness from Time Series Data. Reliable measures of the relative role of different foods in foodborne illness caused by specific pathogens are critical to governments and industry's ability to target food safety interventions effectively. USDA, FDA and CDC have all identified a need for new, more reliable methods to estimate this relationship. This collaborative study between ERS, CDC and the University of California, Berkeley pioneers use of Nielsen HomeScan time series data on food consumption and FoodNet foodborne illness surveillance to estimate the relative contributions of specific foods to illnesses caused by major foodborne pathogens.

Trends in Food Product Recalls: 2004-2013. Food product recalls, the removal of risky food products from the marketplace, can impose significant burdens for consumers, producers, and regulators. This report analyzes trends and patterns of food product recall events from 2004 to 2013. The analysis considers multiple factors, including the types of foods being recalled, the reasons for initiating the recalls, the severity of the risks posed by the recalled products, and the geographic distribution.

The 2011 Food Safety Modernization Act (FSMA) and the Fresh Produce Industry. Using new survey data collected through a joint ERS/NASS initiative, ERS researchers will assess pre-implementation food safety practices relative to several FSMA rules specifically focused on fresh produce. Results will compare food safety practices and costs of adoption for different size farms or post-harvest operations, for different regions of the country, and to the extent possible for different produce commodities. The research will provide a baseline for eventual assessment of effectiveness of FSMA adoption.

Also in FY 2016, an Interagency Agreement between the Food and Nutrition Service (FNS) and the Economic Research Service (ERS) was initiated to provide funding for the recompetition of a grant to establish a Research Center to administer the Research Innovation and Development Grants in Economics (RIDGE) Program. The recompetition was implemented to (1) provide renewed focus on economic aspects of food and nutrition assistance research, (2) stimulate new and innovative research on domestic food and nutrition assistance issues by providing small grants for new analyses of the USDA major food and nutrition assistance programs, food security, and smaller, less studied programs such as the Summer Food Service Program, (3) broaden the support of both established and emerging scholars to increase the number and diversity of researchers who collaborate in tackling the unique food and nutrition challenges that exist across communities, regions, and States, and (4) achieve cost savings through administration of program activities at a single center.

A grant was awarded to Tufts University and the University of Connecticut (Tufts/UConn) to jointly administer a program of sub-awards to investigators at universities and other institutions for research projects conducted during FY 2017-18. Tufts/UConn provides oversight of the application, peer review, sub-grant award, and quality-assurance processes of the RIDGE Program to (1) support food and nutrition assistance research at the national level as well as for specific populations, such as immigrants, Native Americans, people living in rural areas, or residents in areas who experience limited access to healthy foods; and (2) disseminate these research findings to a diverse stakeholder audience, including other researchers, policy and program officials, and the general public. Fiscal Year 2017: The Research Innovation and Development Grants in Economics (RIDGE) Program encourages new and innovative research on food and nutrition assistance issues and broadens the participation of social science scholars in such research. RIDGE is funded by USDAs Economic Research Service and Food and Nutrition Service and administered in partnership with several universities during FY 2016-18:

The RIDGE Center for National Food and Nutrition Assistance Research at the Institute for Research on Poverty, University of Wisconsin-Madison (ended FY 2016), and

The RIDGE Center for Targeted Food and Nutrition Assistance Research at the Center for Regional Development, Purdue University (ended FY 2016); Tufts University, Friedman School of Nutrition Science and Policy, and the University of Connecticut (beginning FY 2017).

The RIDGE partnership institutions oversee the application, peer review, award, and performance processes of the research grants provided through the RIDGE Program. The institutions serve as a hub for mentoring and training researchers interested in food and nutrition assistance issues and provide a source of timely and accessible information on new research findings.

RIDGE Program Activities, FY 2017

The newly established Tufts/UConn RIDGE Program announced a call for research projects in FY 2017. To evaluate the proposals, Tufts/UConn developed an online proposal and submission site through the FluidReview platform, formed an external advisory committee, and established a community of proposal reviewers and project mentors. A diverse set of projects was selected through this competitive review process, with input from ERS and FNS, for research to be conducted during FY 2017-18. Grants were awarded for:

Is Food Assistance Like Cash for Retailers?

The Effects of Disability, SNAP Participation and Changes in Benefits on Food Insecurity
Seungyeon Cho, Texas A&M University, Texas AgriLife Research

Does SNAP Encourage Claiming Disability Insurance Benefits?
Emmanuel Drabo, Stanford University

Understanding the Impact of Changes to the Child and Adult Care Food Program on Food Expenditures, Food Quality, and Young Childrens Dietary Intake in Urban Family Child Care Homes
Erica Kenney, Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health

Food Choices of SNAP/WIC Participants at Convenience Stores and Supermarkets

Fiscal Year 2018: The Research Innovation and Development Grants in Economics (RIDGE) Program encourages new and innovative research on food and nutrition assistance issues and broadens the participation of social science scholars in such research. RIDGE is funded by USDAs Economic Research Service and Food and Nutrition Service and administered in partnership with several universities during FY 2016-18:

The RIDGE Center for National Food and Nutrition Assistance Research at the Institute for Research on Poverty, University of Wisconsin-Madison (ended FY 2016), and

The RIDGE partnership institutions oversee the application, peer review, award, and performance processes of the research grants provided through the RIDGE Program. The institutions serve as a hub for mentoring and training researchers interested in food and nutrition assistance issues and provide a source of timely and accessible information on new research findings.

Projected RIDGE Program Activities, FY 2018

Research projects funded by Tufts/UConn in FY 2017 will be completed during FY 2018 and findings presented at the annual RIDGE Conference scheduled in October 2018. AUTHORIZATION:

Section 406 of the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (AREERA) (7 U.S.C. 7626), as reauthorized by Section 7306 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (FCEA) (Public Law 110-246), authorized the Secretary of Agriculture to establish a competitive grants program that provides funding for integrated, multifunctional agricultural research, extension, and education activities. Subject to the availability of appropriations to carry out this program, the Secretary may award grants to colleges and universities [as defined by section 1404 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (NARETPA) (7 U.S.C. 3103)], as amended, on a competitive basis for projects that address priorities in United States agriculture and involve integrated research, education, and extension activities, as determined by the Secretary in consultation with the National Agricultural Research, Extension, Education, and Economics Advisory Board (NAREEEAB). Section 7129 of the FCEA amended section 406(b) of AREERA (7 U.S.C. 7626(b)), adding Hispanic-serving agricultural colleges and universities (HSACUs) as eligible entities for competitive funds awarded under this authority (see Part III.B. of RFA for more information).

OBJECTIVES:

GENERAL:

NIFA Integrated Programs provide support for integrated research, education, and extension activities. Integrated, multi-functional projects are particularly effective in addressing important agricultural issues through the conduct of problem-focused research that is combined with education and extension of knowledge to those in need of solutions. These activities address critical national, regional, and multi-state agricultural issues, priorities, or problems. Integrated Programs hold the greatest potential to produce and disseminate knowledge and technology directly to end users while providing for educational opportunities to assure agricultural expertise in future generations. See individual program Requests for Applications for additional information about the topics.

SEVERAL PROGRAMS ARE FUNDED UNDER CFDA 10.303. SPECIFIC OBJECTIVES ARE AS FOLLOWS:

(1) Integrated Research, Education, and Extension Competitive Grants Program: National Integrated Water Quality Program
The goal of the National Integrated Water Quality Program is to improve the quality of our Nation's surface water and groundwater resources through research, education, and extension activities. Projects funded through this program will facilitate achieving this goal by advancing and disseminating the knowledge base available to agricultural and rural communities. Funded projects should lead to science-based decision-making and management practices that improve the quality of the Nation's surface water and groundwater resources in agricultural and rural watersheds. See RFA for priority areas.

(2) Integrated Research, Education, and Extension Competitive Grants Program: National Integrated Food Safety Initiative
The purpose of the National Integrated Food Safety Initiative is to support food safety projects that demonstrate an integrated approach to solving problems in applied food safety research, education, or extension. Various models for integration of applied research, education, and extension will be considered for funding. Applications describing multi-state, multi-institutional, multidisciplinary, and multifunctional activities (and combinations thereof) are encouraged. Applicants are strongly encouraged to address at least two of the three functional areas of research, education, and extension (i.e., research and extension, research and education, or extension and education).

(3) Integrated Research, Education, And Extension Competitive Grants Program: Regional Integrated Pest Management Centers
The goal of the Regional Integrated Pest Management Centers (IPM Centers) is to promote the development and implementation of IPM by facilitating collaboration across states, disciplines, and purposes. IPM Centers will establish and maintain information networks, build partnerships to address pest management challenges and opportunities, evaluate the impact of IPM implementation, communicate positive outcomes to key stakeholders, and manage funding resources effectively. Successful applicants to this program will demonstrate the capacity and commitment necessary to advance the goals of the National Roadmap for Integrated Pest Management (www.ipmcenters.org/IPMRoadMap.pdf), and evaluate the progress of this advancement. The IPM Roadmap addresses pest management needs for production agriculture, natural resources and recreational environments, and residential and public areas.

(4) Integrated Pest Management: Crops at Risk Program

The goal of the CAR program is to enhance the development and implementation of innovative, ecologically based sustainable IPM system(s). Preferably, this should involve a diversity of tactics and approaches for a single or specific food or fiber commodity in commercial production for pre- and/or post-harvest system(s). The program addresses either a major acreage or high value crop commodity such as key fruits and vegetables. The primary emphasis is on crop productivity and profitability, while addressing critical environmental quality and human health issues. The CAR program will fund integrated multifunctional/multidisciplinary research, education, and extension projects for crops with high priority IPM needs as identified by stakeholders.

(5) Integrated Pest Management: Risk Avoidance and Mitigation Program

The goal of the Risk Avoidance and Mitigation (RAMP) program is to enhance the development and implementation of innovative, ecologically based sustainable IPM strategies and system(s) for (a) multi-crop food and fiber production systems; (b) an area-wide or a landscape scale agroecosystem; or (c) a documented pesticide impact on water, human or environmental health. RAMP applications may address major acreage agricultural production systems, high value crops such as key fruit and vegetable systems, or other agroecosystems. The primary emphasis of the application should be on productivity and profitability while addressing critical environmental quality and human health issues. The intent of RAMP is to fund medium-term projects that emphasize systems approaches.

(6) Integrated Research, Education, and Extension Competitive Grants

Program: Integrated Pest Management: Methyl Bromide Transitions Program
The goal of the Methyl Bromide Transitions (MBT) program is to support the discovery and implementation of practical pest management alternatives to methyl bromide uses or minimize methyl bromide emissions for which the United States is requesting critical use exemptions. The program is focused on integrated commercial or field scale research that targets short- to medium-term solutions.

(7) Integrated Organic Program

The purpose of the Integrated Organic Program is to solve critical organic agriculture issues, priorities, or problems through the integration of research, education, and extension activities. The Organic Transitions Program (ORG) funds the development and implementation of research, extension, and higher education programs to improve the competitiveness of organic producers and producers who are adopting organic practices. Funding opportunities for the ORG Program is included in the same Request for Applications (RFA) as the Organic Research and Extension Initiative (OREI).

PLEASE NOTE: THIS PROGRAM DOES NOT FUND START UP BUSINESSES.

(8) Regional Rural Development Centers (RRDCs):

The RRDCs play a unique role in USDA's service to rural America. They link the research and educational outreach capacity of the nation's public universities with communities, local decision makers, entrepreneurs, families, and farmers and ranchers to help address a wide range of development issues. They collaborate on national issues that span regions-like e-commerce, the changing interface between rural, suburban, and urban places, and workforce quality and jobs creation. Each tailors programs to address particular needs in its region.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

This research, education, and extension competitive grants program provides funding for integrated, multi-functional agricultural research, extension, and education activities which addresses priorities in United States agriculture. Grant funds must be used for allowable costs necessary to conduct approved integrated research, extension and education objectives to address food and agricultural sciences, in the broadest sense. NIFA has determined that grant funds awarded under this authority may not be used for the renovation or refurbishment of research, education, or extension space; the purchase or installation of fixed equipment in such space; or the planning, repair, rehabilitation, acquisition, or construction of buildings or facilities. Funds may not be used for any purposes other than those approved in the grant award documents. Tuition remission is not allowable.

The following programs are authorized under (Section 406 of the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (AREERA) (7 U.S.C. 7626):

- (1) Water Quality
- (2) Food Safety
- (3) Regional Pest Management Centers

- (7) Organic Transition - Risk Assessment

Other Integrated Program(s):

- (8) Regional Rural Development Centers (7 U.S.C. 450i and 7 U.S.C. 2204a)

Section 1473 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 3319) prohibits indirect costs. Hence, indirect costs are unallowable for this program. Fully discretionary.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

State agricultural experiment stations, State cooperative extension services, all colleges and universities, other research and extension institutions and organizations, Federal agencies, private organizations or corporations, and individuals to facilitate or expand promising breakthroughs in areas of the food and agricultural sciences of importance to the United States.

Credentials/Documentation:

The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

- (i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;
- (ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and
- (iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

- (a) Funds are awarded competitively.
- (b) No formula grants are awarded under Subtitle K of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 [7 U.S.C. 3319e].

SPECIFIC PROVISIONS:

Regarding Critical Issues and Regional Rural Development Centers (Section 2(c)(1)(B) of Public Law 89-106, as amended):

NIFA does not require matching or cost sharing support for the above-referenced programs. However, the provisions indicated below are applicable to the following programs which are authorized under Section 406 of the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (AREERA) (7 U.S.C. 7626):

- (1) Water Quality
- (2) Food Safety

- (3) Regional Pest Management Centers
- (4) Crops at Risk

- (7) Organic Transition - Risk Assessment

Funds are awarded competitively.

No formula grants are awarded under Subtitle K of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 [7 U.S.C. 3319e]. If a grant provides a particular benefit to a specific agricultural commodity, and not of national scope, the grant recipient is required to match the USDA funds awarded on a dollar-for-dollar basis from non-Federal sources with cash and/or in-kind contributions. (See Part IV, B., 6. of the RFA for details.)

NIFA may waive the matching funds requirement for a grant if NIFA determines that:

(1) the results of the project, while of particular benefit to a specific agricultural commodity, are likely to be applicable to agricultural commodities generally; or

(2) the project involves a minor commodity, the project deals with scientifically important research, and the grant recipient is unable to satisfy the matching funds requirement.

MOE requirements are not applicable to this program.

Length and Time Phasing of Assistance:

Regarding the Critical Issues and Regional Rural Development Centers (Section 2(c)(1)(B) of Public Law 89106, as amended), normally, competitive research projects will be supported for periods of up to three (3) years.

In accordance with statutory time limits, project periods, including no-cost extensions of time, are not to exceed five (5) years.

REEport GRANT REPORTING:

All grant reporting must be completed using the Research, Education, and Extension project online reporting tool (REEport). Initial reporting (item a. below) is to be submitted through the REEport system. Annual progress and final reporting (items b. and c. below) also is to be done through the REEport system. Information on REEport can be found on NIFAs web site at <https://nifa.usda.gov/tool/reeport> and the REEport software can be found at <http://portal.nifa.usda.gov>.

a. Initial Documentation in the REEport Database--

b. Annual Progress Reports.

All projects must report annually into REEport. An annual Progress Report is due 90 calendar days after the awards anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day of which the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period. The following information, when applicable, must be included in the Project Modifications section of the annual Progress Report.

1) A comparison of actual accomplishments with the goals established for the reporting period (where the output of the project can be expressed readily in numbers, a computation of the cost per unit of output should be submitted if the information is considered useful);

(2) The reasons for slippage if established goals were not met; and

(3) Additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs.

c. Final Technical Report

The Final Technical Report is required within 90 calendar days after the expiration or termination of the award. The Final Technical Report covers the entire period of performance of the award and must describe progress made during the entire timeframe of the project instead of covering accomplishments made only during the final reporting segment of the project. In addition to supplying the information required under item b. of this article, the final report must include the following when applicable:

Identify equipment purchased with any Federal funds under the award and indicate subsequent use of such equipment.

FINANCIAL REPORTING:

As outlined in 2 CFR 200.327, the recipient must submit financial status reports by the frequency required in the terms and conditions of the award. The following are the financial reporting requirements for NIFA.

A Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due on an annual basis no later than 90 days following the end of the award anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day when the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period.

A final Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due 90 days after the expiration date of this award. The report must be submitted to the Awards Management Division (AMD) as a pdf attachment to an email sent to awards@nifa.usda.gov.

(H) Regional Rural Development Centers

For Fiscal Year (FY) 2017:

NIFA announced the availability of grant funds and requests applications for the Regional Rural Development Centers (RRDC) Competitive Grants Program for fiscal year (FY) 2017 to link the research and educational outreach capacity of the nation's public universities with communities, local decision makers, entrepreneurs, families, and farmers and ranchers to help address a wide range of development issues for prosperity for sustainable and secure communities will always be a matter of public interest. RRDCs leverage land-grant resources in pursuit of USDA's rural development mission by bringing together the most innovative minds from inside and outside universities to address cutting-edge issues without regard to state boundaries. They respond to emerging issues, generate credible science-based information to clarify these issues, and create public-private partnerships to address them.

The amount available for support of this program in FY 2017 is $1,899,520 ($474, 880 per center). The grant deadline was July 7, 2017. Four proposals were reviewed and recommended for funding. Fiscal Year 2018: For Fiscal Year (FY) 2018:

3) Improving Efficacy of Aerosol Applications for Control of Stored Product Insects in Wheat and Rice Mills. This research award for $499,999 focuses on improving the distribution and efficacy of aerosol insecticides for control of stored-product insects in food storage and processing facilities.

4) Investigating the Potential of Ethanedinitrile as a Replacement for Soil Fumigation with Methyl Bromide. This award for $ 472,506 will investigate the potential of ethanedinitrile (EDN) as a pre-plant soil fumigant for vegetable production.

For Fiscal Year (FY) 2016:

2016-06198: Going underground: Digging up the dirt on Metarhizium-plant-pest interactions in an organic cropping system. This study investigates the effects of cover crops and soil characteristics on the novel interactions among the fungus, Metarhizium, an endemic insect pathogen and plant-protective endophyte with crops and cover crops in an organic agronomic cropping system. Objectives include: 1) characterize Metarhizium isolates from on-going organic research-station and on-farm experiments; 2) determine the ability of endemic isolates to form endophytic relationships with cash crops and selected cover crops; 3) determine effects of endophytic Metarhizium in a model system of corn, black cutworm; and Cochliobolus heterostrophus, the causal agent of southern corn leaf blight; and 4) determine the effect of endophytic Metarhizium on the expression of key defense genes that protect plants from crop pests and diseases.

2016-06180: Decision Support to Quantify GHG Mitigation and Ecosystem Services from Organic Production Systems. This project will address ORG Program Priority by improving technologies and tools to document and optimize the environmental services and climate change mitigation ability of organic farming systems. The team will improve two state-of-the-art decision support systems (COMET-Farm and the Cool Farm Tool) for quantifying the impacts of land use and management practices on soil C and greenhouse gas GHG- emissions from agricultural systems at the farm-scale. These improved decision support systems will enable the industry to deliver improved storytelling about organic beyond the label and help to identify opportunity areas for working with farmers to improve both productivity and profitability as well as deliver on corporate commitments to meet GHG reduction goals.

2016-06197: Ensuring the best practical use of microbe-containing crop biostimulants/biofertilizers among (transitional)-organic vegetable growers. The long-term goal of this project is to create resources, tangible and human, ensuring the best practical use of Microbe-containing biostimulants and biofertilizers (MC BSs/BFs) among (transitional)-organic vegetable growers. The team will: a) complete stakeholder-focused experiments on farms and research stations, b) expand and strengthen a growing network of farmers and other professionals while evaluating and reporting on product performance, and c) establish, share, and help stakeholders implement core components of practical guidelines for using MC BSs/BFs during (transitional)-organic vegetable production.

2016-06199: The Development of an Organic Crop Budgeting Tool to Help Advise Producers. Budgets are one of the most important tools producers use when deciding on which crops to grow. Objective in this project is to determine the production practices of organic producers, collect price information about the needed inputs, develop a crop budgeting tool, and produce organic crop budgets so that the profitability of organic crops can be estimated for a producer. This contribution is significant because the team is developing a regionalized database of inputs and prices for organic crop production that doesn't currently exist and integrating this database into an organic crop budgeting tool that will make it significantly easier for producers and Extension personnel to estimate organic profitability.

2016-06181: Developing advanced perennial legume-grass mixtures harvested as stored feeds to improve herd productivity and mitigate greenhouse gas emissions in organic dairies in the Northeast. This project will fill knowledge gaps by advancing the scientific understanding about how potential changes in species persistence and forage botanical composition in various legume-grass mixtures across multiple years affect forage quality and stored feed fermentation characteristics and, consequently, milk production and greenhouse gas emissions when fed to organic dairy cows. The team will partner with three organic dairy farmers in the Northeast who will set up demonstration plots and coordinate field days, thus becoming peer leaders in their rural communities.

For Fiscal Year (FY) 2017:

2017-03405: Going underground: Perennial and Annual Organic Transition Systems to Optimize Soil Health, Carbon Sequestration, and Profitability Production. Farmers interested in transitioning from conventional to organic systems are faced with unique challenges regarding weed control, fertility, improving soil health, and generating income during the transition period. Many transition systems rely on tillage to control weeds and annual crop rotations, which have been associated with soil carbon (C) loss. Intermediate wheatgrass (IWG) is a cool-season grass that is being bred for increased seed yields to become the first perennial grain crop. IWG could help producers overcome the challenges of organic transition, while also simplifying management, reducing tillage-associated C emissions, and improving soil health relative to annual crop-based organic transitions. This study will compare six organic transition systems that include IWG, summer and winter annuals, perennial legumes, and systems with various combinations of grain, forage, and cover crops.

2017-03371: Facilitating improved environmental and soil quality through increased biodiversity and crop/livestock integration on organic farms. Agricultural systems that restore biodiversity improve sustainability and lower dependence on external inputs, which is vital in organic production. The focus of this project is to investigate the effects of integration of cover crops and livestock grazing on soil quality and crop yield. Results will be utilized in the development of educational programs on organic crops, livestock and soil health through university curriculum development, courses on organic principles and practice, open-source learning modules, and producer outreach. The educational programming will improve understanding of organic principles by students who are both today's consumers and tomorrow's farmers and future drivers of agricultural policies and practices. Intermediate and long-term outcomes include producer adoption of practices increasing on-farm biodiversity, leading to greater economic and environmental stability in organic production.

2017-03378: Development of effective biological control of fire blight for the Eastern United States. Fire blight is a devastating disease of apples and pears. The termination of antibiotics in organic production requires alternative management options. Biological control represents an important group of organic management tools. Yet, none of the available biocontrols has provided consistent, high level of control against fire blight under humid climates in the Eastern U.S. This study will perform the first comprehensive search and testing for bacterial and fungal biocontrol strains isolated from apple stigmas under humid climate in Eastern U.S. Using a combined approach of antibiotic screen, crab apple bioassay, and metagenomics, the research team will identify microorganisms with antimicrobial producing abilities and preemptive exclusion properties.

2017-03409: An ecological approach to disease risk management on organic poultry farms. Outdoor poultry are exposed to parasites and pathogens in the soil, or vectored by wild birds. These infections endanger animal and human health. There have been very few holistic studies of factors that make organic poultry farms susceptible or resistant to parasite/pathogen invasion. Growers inability to predict and manage these risks forms a major barrier to organic transition. This study will (1) Measure frequencies of poultry contact with wild birds and soil; (2) Survey pathogen and parasite communities within on-farm wild bird populations, while characterizing transmission routes between wild and domesticated birds; and (3) Characterize properties of soil that affect persistence of fecal-borne poultry parasites and pathogens.

2017-03389: Introducing organic to producers of grain-only and pasture-grain wheat cropping systems of northern Texas. Organic agriculture is nearly absent in the northern Southern Great Plains region of Texas, despite large demand for organic products that could be produced there and low producer incomes. The team proposes to utilize a systems approach to directly compare conventional grain-only and pasture-grain wheat systems to transitional organic systems with management customized to the region. The experiment will occur at a large field scale, which is the only way to provide results directly transferrable to regional stakeholders. We will quantify system management impacts on crop and animal performance; soil microbial properties, nutrient, greenhouse gas emission, and moisture dynamics; and economic outcomes.

In accordance with section 1472(c) of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977, (NARETPA) applicant may be: State agricultural experiment stations, State cooperative extension services, all colleges and universities, other research or education institutions and organizations, Federal and private agencies and organizations, individuals, and any other contractor or recipient, either foreign or domestic, to further research, extension, or teaching programs in the food and agricultural sciences of the Department of Agriculture.

Credentials/Documentation:

The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

(i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;

(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

b. Annual Progress Reports.

All projects must report annually into REEport. An annual Progress Report is due 90 calendar days after the awards anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day of which the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period. The following information, when applicable, must be included in the Project Modifications section of the annual Progress Report.

(1) A comparison of actual accomplishments with the goals established for the reporting period (where the output of the project can be expressed readily in numbers, a computation of the cost per unit of output should be submitted if the information is considered useful);

(2) The reasons for slippage if established goals were not met; and

(3) Additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs.

c. Final Technical Report

The Final Technical Report is required within 90 calendar days after the expiration or termination of the award. The Final Technical Report covers the entire period of performance of the award and must describe progress made during the entire timeframe of the project instead of covering accomplishments made only during the final reporting segment of the project. In addition to supplying the information required under item b. of this article, the final report must include the following when applicable:

Identify equipment purchased with any Federal funds under the award and indicate subsequent use of such equipment.

FINANCIAL REPORTING:

As outlined in 2 CFR 200.327, the recipient must submit financial status reports by the frequency required in the terms and conditions of the award. The following are the financial reporting requirements for NIFA.

Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425:

NIFA uses the SF-425, Federal Financial Report to monitor cash. A Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due on an annual basis no later than 90 days following the end of the award anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day when the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period.

A final Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due 90 days after the expiration date of this award. The report must be submitted to the Awards Management Division (AMD) as a pdf attachment to an email sent to awards@nifa.usda.gov.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: For Fiscal Year 2016:

(A) National Plant Diagnostic Network for the Food and Agricultural Defense Initiative (NPDN):

Six applications were received and awarded. The awards totaled $3,030,660

(B) National Animal Health Laboratory Network (NAHLN) for the Food and Agricultural Defense Initiative (aka FADI):

FADI: For FY 2016, the Food and Agriculture Defense Initiative (FADI) will continued to support three multi-institutional homeland security networks via non-competitively awarded cooperative agreements: The National Plant Diagnostic Network, the National Animal Health Laboratory Network (NAHLN), and the Extension Disaster Education Network. All three networks continued to help prepare, prevent, detect, respond and recover from high-consequence disease threats and other disasters.

NAHLN: During 2016, NIFA disbursed $ 3,018,000 payment to states to the NAHLN. NAHLN implemented a restructure plan that employs enhanced metrics and other semi-quantitative criteria to determine level-specific NAHLN membership eligibility. The agency made 16 new awards to support NAHLN labs. While NIFA reduced the number NAHLN Labs it is supporting in 2016 (compared to 2015), investments are the same as the previous year. The difference is that, due to the NAHLN restructure, there was a reassignment of which NAHLN labs are funded by NIFA and which are funded by APHIS which collaboratively funds NAHLN. APHIS has a larger percentage of the total labs in 2016. For 2016, NIFA supported a larger number of Level-1 labs (largest award size under the NAHLN tier structure), hence the smaller number of total labs in 2016.

Critical surveillance and suspect-sample testing was supported to address the mission of safeguarding public health, enhancing the health of all animals, and improving the economic well-being of livestock producers nationwide. Thousands of samples were processed testing for high-consequence livestock pathogens and tens of thousands of samples for some of more common disease organisms. Member laboratories have completed or maintained proficiency certification for several important endemic and foreign animal diseases, including: avian influenza, Newcastle disease, Johne's disease, classical swine fever, foot and mouth disease, bovine spongiform encephalopathy, leptospirosis, bovine leukemia virus, bluetongue, chronic wasting disease, and equine infectious anemia.

(C) Extension Disaster Education Network (EDEN):

The Extension Disaster Education Network project further integrated and expanded the Cooperative Extension System's educational role before, during and after a disaster, using the all-hazards approach adopted by the U.S. Department of Homeland Security. Fiscal Year 2017: For Fiscal Year 2017: (A) National Plant Diagnostic Network for the Food and Agricultural Defense Initiative (NPDN):

Six applications have been received and are being awarded. The awards totaled $3,030,660

(B) National Animal Health Laboratory Network (NAHLN) for the Food and Agricultural Defense Initiative (aka FADI):

FADI: The Food and Ag Defense Initiative (FADI) will continue to support three multi-institutional homeland security networks via non-competitively awarded cooperative agreements: The National Plant Diagnostic Network, the National Animal Health Laboratory Network (NAHLN), and the Extension Disaster Education Network. New cooperative agreements were established in 2016 for the National Plant Diagnostic and National Animal Health Laboratory Networks; therefore, 2017 represents the first award renewal cycle under the new cooperative agreement.

NAHLN: Overall, NIFA is supporting 16 laboratories (10 level 1 labs; 2 level 2 labs; and, 4 level 3 labs) with $4,278,540 payment to states. This amount represents an increase of $ 1,260,540 (from 2016) provided in the FADI appropriation and designated by Congress specifically for NAHLN.

NIFA is funding two new labs (MI; PA-Harrisburg) and 14 renewal labs in 2017. The Wyoming lab moved up from a level 3 lab (2016) to a level 2 lab (2017). Other labs being supported by NIFA in 2017 maintained their same level as in 2016. Award recommendations are being processed with start dates anticipated to be September 1, 2017.

(C) Extension Disaster Education Network (EDEN):

This program continues to support three multi-institutional homeland security networks via non-competitively awarded cooperative agreements: The National Plant Diagnostic Network, the National Animal Health Laboratory Network, and the Extension Disaster Education Network. The agency is in the process of making awards. EDENs allocation is anticipated to be $370,800. Fiscal Year 2018: For Fiscal Year 2018:

(A) National Plant Diagnostic Network for the Food and Agricultural Defense Initiative (NPDN):

It is anticipated that six applications were received and awarded a total amount of $3,030,660

(B) National Animal Health Laboratory Network (NAHLN) for the Food and Agricultural Defense Initiative (aka FADI):

FADI: It is projected that the Food and Ag Defense Initiative (FADI) will continue to support three multi-institutional homeland security networks via non-competitively awarded cooperative agreements: The National Plant Diagnostic Network, the National Animal Health Laboratory Network (NAHLN), and the Extension Disaster Education Network.

NAHLN: It is anticipated that changes in lab membership from 2017 into 2018 will be minor since continuity is an important consideration in sustaining agrosecurity preparedness. The agency expects to make about 16 NAHLN renewal awards.

(C) Extension Disaster Education Network (EDEN):

This program is projected to continue support for EDEN.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: No Current Data Available Fiscal Year 2017: For Fiscal Year 2017:

(A) National Plant Diagnostic Network for the Food and Agricultural Defense Initiative (NPDN):

The IT & Data Management Center and 5 regional centers were funded. These centers enhance agricultural security by protecting the health and productivity of agricultural plants and natural ecosystems through the U.S. They provide a cohesive, distributed system to quickly detect and identify pests and pathogens of concern. Results are reported to appropriate responders and decision-makers. The centers have the appropriate laboratory infrastructure and training, they have developed an extensive network of first detectors and have enhanced communication among public agencies and stakeholders in order to respond to and mitigate new outbreaks of pest and diseases of importance.

(B) National Animal Health Laboratory Network (NAHLN) for the Food and Agricultural Defense Initiative (aka FADI):

For FY 2017 The Food and Agriculture Defense Initiative (FADI) is expected to continue to support three multi-institutional homeland security networks via non-competitively awarded cooperative agreements: The National Plant Diagnostic Network, the National Animal Health Laboratory Network, and the Extension Disaster Education Network. The agency expects to make 20 to 30 award renewals.

Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

(C) Extension Disaster Education Network (EDEN):

EDEN is strategically planning for continuing to address disasters through education. Funding level will determine how and whether the network is able to expand to further combat reducing the impact of disasters through education.

Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date. Fiscal Year 2018:

No Current Data Available

CRITERIA FOR SELECTING PROPOSALS:

In Fiscal Year (FY) 2002, a panel of USDA scientists knowledgeable in the Nation's plant and animal disease diagnostic capability, recommended to the Secretary a plan of initiating a comprehensive national network of laboratories for the rapid detection and diagnosis of plant and animal diseases. The institutions selected by the panel for initial inclusion in the network were recommended using the following criteria:

- (1) Existing scientific capacity;
- (2) Existing laboratory capacity which could be modified to meet Biosafety Level 3 requirements;
- (3) Both animal and plant diagnostic capabilities;
- (4) Geographical location meeting one or more of the following requirements: located in an area with a high risk of disease/pest incursions; located in an area with high concentration of vulnerable agricultural activity; complements or supplements regional Federal laboratory activity or is in an area not effectively served by an existing Federal facility;
- (5) State-of-the-art communication and information technology systems. Must be capable of managing secure communications with other laboratories and central reporting unit; and
- (6) An effective outreach/extension system.

These recommendations were utilized to select the original cooperative agreement recipients and are annually evaluated by USDA/NIFA in network planning.

10.306 BIODIESEL

(Biodiesel Fuel Education Program)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

Section 9006 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (Public Law 110-246), amended the Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002 (7 U.S.C. 8101 et seq.) to re-establish the Biodiesel Fuel Education Program which requires that the Secretary make competitive grants to eligible entities to educate governmental and private entities that operate vehicle fleets, other interested entities (as determined by the Secretary), and the public about the benefits of biodiesel fuel use. The Secretary delegated this authority to the Chief Economist, who in turn delegated this authority to the Director of the Office of Energy Policy and New Uses (OEPNU). OEPNU has joined with NIFA for assistance in administering Biodiesel Education under the authorities found in the Economy Act (31 U.S.C. 1535) and Section 1472 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 3318). Specific Biodiesel Education administrative provisions are found in 7 CFR 2903., 7 U.S.C. 3318.

OBJECTIVES:

The goals of the Biodiesel Fuel Education Program as originally established in Section 9004 of the Farm Security Investment Act of 2002 (7 U.S.C. 8104) were to stimulate biodiesel consumption and to stimulate the development of a biodiesel infrastructure. The information and outreach activities to raise awareness of the benefits of biodiesel fuel use complemented the incentives provided by the Energy Policy Act of 2005 (EPA) (Public Law 109-58), and the Energy Independence and Security Act of 2007 (Public Law 110-140). As a result of increased awareness and consumption of biodiesel over the past 5 years, the FY 2008 Biodiesel Education program will focus on educational programs which will support advances in infrastructure, technology transfer, fuel quality, fuel safety and increasing feedstock production.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

This funding is used for education and outreach activities. Program funds may not be used for renovation or refurbishment or research space; the purchase or installation of fixed equipment in such space; or the planning, repair, rehabilitation, acquisition or construction of buildings or facilities. Grant funds must be used for allowable costs necessary to conduct approved research and extension objectives. Funds may not be used for any purposes other than those approved in the grant award documents.

Section 720 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2012 (Pub.L. No. 112-55) limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

Funds made available under Biodiesel Education shall not be used for the construction of a new building or facility or the acquisition, expansion, remodeling, or alteration of an existing building or facility (including site grading and improvement, and architect fees).

Applicant Eligibility:

Eligibility is restricted to nonprofit organizations or institution of higher education (as defined in section 101 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1001)).

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Nonprofit organizations or institutions of higher education (as defined in section 101 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1001)).

Credentials/Documentation:

The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

- (i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;
- (ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and
- (iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable

DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

(3) Additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs.

c. Final Technical Report

The Final Technical Report is required within 90 calendar days after the expiration or termination of the award. The Final Technical Report covers the entire period of performance of the award and must describe progress made during the entire timeframe of the project instead of covering accomplishments made only during the final reporting segment of the project. In addition to supplying the information required under item b. of this article, the final report must include the following when applicable:

Identify equipment purchased with any Federal funds under the award and indicate subsequent use of such equipment.

FINANCIAL REPORTING:

10.307 ORGANIC AGRICULTURE RESEARCH AND EXTENSION

INITIATIVE

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

Section 7206 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (FCEA) amended section 1672B of the Food, Agriculture, Conservation, and Trade (FACT) Act of 1990 (7 U.S.C. 5925b) amending and re-authorizing the Organic Agriculture Research and Extension Initiative (OREI). The FACT Act, as amended, authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture, in consultation with the National Agricultural Research, Extension, Education, and Economics Advisory Board (NAREEEAB), to make competitive grants to support research and extension activities regarding organically grown and processed agricultural commodities for eight legislatively-defined goals. See RFA Part I.B. for further general information and specific details. , 7 U.S.C 5925b.

OBJECTIVES:

Facilitate the development of organic agriculture production, breeding, and processing methods.
Functionally identify soil microbial communities and ways to manage microbial dynamics to enhance nutrient cycling and disease suppression;
Develop systemic approaches to weed, insect and disease management;
Prevent, control, and treat internal and external parasites in various livestock species; and Breed crops for disease and insect resistance, good yield in a biologically diverse system, compatibility with intercrops, good response to organic fertility sources, horizontal resistance (traits determined by multiple genes).
Evaluate the potential economic benefits to producers and processors who use organic methods.
Analyze potential economic costs, returns and risks of organic production systems;
Use environmental valuation tools to quantify externalities of producing food, and compare externalities of producing organic and conventional food; -
Analyze price and market structures, including ability of small, medium-, and large-scale growers to access different markets, in order to frame policies that minimize concentration within the industry; and Analyze marketing channels to document how organic food is distributed, what share of the organic food dollar is returned to the farmer, and the implications of large-scale manufacturers entering the organic market.
Explore international trade opportunities for organically grown and processed agricultural commodities.
Compare compatibility of certification standards used in different parts of the world, with the ultimate goal of harmonization and reciprocity;
Undertake marketing studies of international consumer demand for U.S. produced organic goods; and Perform Welfare analyses (quantified gains and losses for producers and consumers) of trade policies affecting international competitiveness, including implementation of the National Organic Program, domestic support programs such as the Conservation Security Act, country of origin labeling, GMO labeling, etc.
Determine desirable traits for organic commodities.
Examine relationships between nutrients in the soil and nutrients in the food grown on that soil, including long-term soil nutrient and crop nutrient profiles under conventional and organic management;
Perform comparisons of nutrient levels between organic and conventional crops and relationship, if any, between taste and nutrient profile; Investigate the role of post-harvest handling and treatment in the maintenance of quality in fresh market organic products; and Determine the reasons for consumer preferences for organic goods. Identify marketing and policy constraints on the expansion of organic agriculture.
Analyze opportunities and constraints to organic agriculture resulting from provisions of the Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002;
Investigate specific barriers to markets, such as scale-based regulations that restrict family farm access to processors and/or markets;
Study negative lender perception of organic farming and ways to change this; and Analyze regulatory barriers, such as lack of access to Federal farm programs, and developing solutions to these challenges.

Conduct advanced on-farm research and development that emphasizes observation of, experimentation with, and innovation for working organic farms, including research relating to production and marketing and to socioeconomic conditions.

(Note: Many topics from other goal areas can be conducted on working farms.)

Develop rigorous on-farm systems research designs; and Conduct long-term, interdisciplinary systems research.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

The Integrated Organic Program is particularly interested in proposed projects that emphasize research and outreach that assist farmers and ranchers with whole farm planning and ecosystem integration.
Projects should plan to deliver applied production information to producers. Fieldwork for both program areas must be done on certified organic land or on land in transition to organic certification, as appropriate to project goals and objectives. Refer to the USDA National Organic Program (<http://www.ams.usda.gov/nop>) for organic production standards. NIFA has determined that grant funds awarded under this authority may not be used for the renovation or refurbishment of research, education, or extension space; the purchase or installation of fixed equipment in such space; or the planning, repair, rehabilitation, acquisition, or construction of buildings or facilities.
Section 7132 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act amended section 1462 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 3310), increasing the limit on recovery of indirect costs from 19 percent to 22 percent of total Federal funds provided under the award.
Therefore, the recovery of indirect costs on awards made by NIFA under this program area may not exceed the lesser of the institution's official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 22 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

*Special Note on Indirect Costs as in-kind matching contributions. Indirect costs may be claimed under the Federal portion of the award budget or, alternatively, indirect costs may be claimed as a matching contribution (if no indirect costs are requested under the Federal portion of the award budget). However, unless explicitly authorized in the RFA, indirect costs may not be claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution, unless the total claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. An awardee may split the allocation between the Federal and non-Federal portions of the budget only if the total amount of indirect costs charged to the project does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. For example, if an awardee's indirect costs are capped at 22 percent pursuant to section 1462(a) of NARETPA (7 U.S.C. 3310(a)), the awardee may request 11 percent of the indirect costs on both the Federal portion of the award and as a matching contribution. Or, the awardee may request any similar percentage that, when combined, does not exceed the maximum indirect cost rate of 22 percent.

Applicant Eligibility:

Applications may be submitted by State agricultural experiment stations, all colleges and universities, other research institutions and organizations, Federal agencies, national laboratories, private organizations or corporations, and individuals. For both ORG and OREI, all award recipients may subcontract to organizations not eligible to apply provided such organizations are necessary for the conduct of the project.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

State agricultural experiment stations, all colleges and universities, other research institutions and organizations, Federal agencies, national laboratories, private organizations or corporations, and individuals.

Credentials/Documentation:

The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM

(the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

(i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;

(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

SPECIAL NOTE:

Please refer to the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs) for further specific and pertinent details. The most current RFAs are available as follows: <https://nifa.usda.gov/funding-opportunity/organic-agriculture-research-and-extension-initiative>

RELATED PROGRAMS:

10.303 Integrated Programs

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: Building Resilience in the Northeast through Double Cropping and Diverse Forage Crop Mixtures.

The goal of this project is to meet the dry matter and forage nutrient needs of dairy farmers. Increasing cropping system diversity can increase yield stability and reduce the negative impact of variable weather. Guided by a stakeholder advisory board, the team will conduct farmer-focused socioeconomic research and field experiments on-farm and at research stations in NY, VT, and NH. They will quantify the productivity and economic viability of intercropping with intra- and interspecific mixtures of winter and summer annual forage crops as part of a double cropping system, and compare this double cropping system to perennial-based forage production. The research team will develop farmer resources on organic forage crop production and disseminate the information this new information through innovative extension strategies.

CIOA 2- Carrot Improvement for Organic Agriculture With Added Grower and Consumer Value.

Organic growers need vegetable varieties that are adapted to organic growing conditions and have market qualities demanded by organic consumers. In carrots, weed competition, nutrient acquisition, nematodes, and disease pressure are particularly critical challenges to both fresh market carrots and carrot seed production, while flavor, appearance, and nutrition are key market qualities. This project will deliver improved carrot varieties for organic producers and consumers; improved understanding of cultivar performance in organic systems; improved understanding of how carrot genotypes interact with the root microbiome to access key nutrients under limiting environments and avoid heavy metal uptake; and a breeding model that may be adapted to other crops for organic cultivar development. Organic farmers, students, and industry stakeholders in six (6) states participate in the breeding, variety trials, and planning aspects of the project. Project results are disseminated nationally.

Multi-regional risk analysis of farm manure use: Balancing soil health and food safety for organic fresh produce production.

Certified organic producers rely on manure-based soil amendments for crop nutrients and to maintain soil health. However, use of untreated animal manure in fresh produce cropping systems may introduce foodborne pathogens and increase the risk of foodborne illness for consumers. The project uses an integrated research-extension risk-based approach to address an urgent and critical need to assess current manure use by organic growers and evaluate pathogen survival time relative to soil health status. The long-term goal is to improve the microbial food safety of fresh organic produce (e.g., leafy greens, tomatoes, root vegetables) grown in soils amended with raw manure. The overall objective is to develop a customized risk-assessment based on good agriculture practices, rigorous microbial testing, self-assessment of soil health, and environmental factors.

Strengthening Organic Farming Infrastructure through Consumer Education, Market Development, and Integrated Extension and Research Programs in the Southeastern Region.

The project brings together a strong team of economists, extension educators, agronomists and horticulturists in the southeast region of the US to expand organic agriculture in the region. The southeast lags behind the rest of the US in production and sales of organically produced products. Tuskegee University, Auburn University, Mississippi State University and North Carolina State University will work together to double the number of certified organic operations in Alabama. This will be accomplished by creating market demand through consumer education and increased marketing efforts. Growth of organic agriculture in the region will be supported and expanded through effective participatory extension activities, which will deliver regionally specific research based production practices.

Understanding Parasite Resistance in Organic Livestock and Using a Systems Approach for Control.

One (1) of the greatest barriers to organic production of ruminant livestock is the control of gastrointestinal nematodes (GIN) or parasites. The goals of this project are to:

- (1) understand host mechanisms involved in GIN resistance/resilience by examining differences in immune response among susceptible, resilient, and resistant individuals and breed types;
- (2) identify genetic loci associated with resistance/resilience;
- (3) further examine successful systems approaches of GIN control, including fall lambing to minimize summer exposure of GIN to lambs, diverse forage and grazing systems to minimize GIN exposure and use secondary plant compounds for control; and
- (4) work with farmers enrolled in the National Sheep Improvement Program to understand tools for selection for GIN resistance.

Participating farmers are providing 5,000 DNA samples and phenotypes. Fiscal Year 2017: Developing Multi-use Naked Barley for Organic Farming Systems.

The long-term goal of this study is to provide organic gardeners, growers, processors, and consumers with an alternative crop, food, and raw material that will be economically rewarding and sustainable. The team will breed for naked barley and a modest level of β -glucan to create varieties suitable for brewing, feed use, and that will meet FDA guidelines for soluble fiber in human diets. The work will be conducted in five (5) representative regions/states - Pacific Northwest (OR, WA), Upper Midwest (MN, WI) and North East (NY). The outreach efforts will familiarize students, gardeners, growers, processors, and consumers with the benefits of naked barley varieties and provide guidance for capitalizing on the advantages these varieties can offer.

Economic and environmental sustainability of heifer development strategies in pasture-based organic dairy systems.

Dairy products constitute the second largest sector of the organic agriculture industry in the US. And dairy cow replacement costs are second only to feed costs in magnitude for the average dairy farm: between one-third (1/3) and one-fourth (1/4) of the entire herd is replaced every year. Given the National Organic Program requirement that ruminant animals be managed on pasture and graze daily throughout the grazing season, heifer development within organic systems is more challenging, and more costly than in confinement systems. The primary objective of the project is to innovate new strategies for organic forage-based dairy heifer development, and then to inspire widespread adoption of these practices for enhanced farm sustainability.

One-two punch for Organic Poultry Processing: Knocking out foodborne pathogens with plant derived antimicrobials and farmer training.

Both conventional and organic poultry products have been identified as major sources of Salmonella and Campylobacter, the two (2) most common food-borne pathogens in the US. This study aims to reduce Salmonella and Campylobacter on poultry meat/ eggs using plant-derived antimicrobials applied as wash, spray, fumigation or coating treatment at critical post-harvest control points.

Managing the Most Significant Biotic Challenges for Organic Onion Production Across the Great Lakes Region.

Organic onions are a highly valuable commodity in the Great Lakes region and their economic viability has been critically threatened by pests and pathogens that are difficult to manage. Stakeholders have identified onion thrips, Thrips tabaci, as the most serious insect pest and Stemphylium leaf blight (SLB), which is caused by Stemphylium vesicarium, as the most important foliar pathogen in this region. The long-term goal of this project is to develop and implement an effective IPM program for onion thrips and SLB that will ensure the sustainability and profitability of organic onion production in the Great Lakes.

Participatory Breeding and Testing Networks: A Maize Based Case Study for Organic Systems.

This integrated Multi-Regional Project will conduct advanced on-farm research to identify biophysical and social/legal factors influencing the performance of organic maize cultivars and dependent businesses. Objectives are to:

- (1) build capacity that supports a participatory testing and breeding program;
- (2) conduct a maize-based case study to explore on-farm factors influencing crop fitness and grain quality; and
- (3) identify and communicate how organizational structures, sharing and intellectual property agreements can promote client-oriented breeding programs to improve our organic seed supply. Important inputs include promising cultivars, experienced advisors, and significant farmer input. Fiscal Year 2018: We anticipate making about 20 awards in 2018. Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

- (ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and
- (iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: The final eight (8) RIIA Awards ranged from the lowest of $120,979 to the highest of $175,000.

Developing Resident Instruction in Food & Agricultural Related Sciences

The purpose of this project is to:

- (1) increase the number and diversity of students who will pursue and complete a 2- or 4-year postsecondary degree in the food and agricultural related sciences;
- (2) enhance the quality of postsecondary instruction in order to help meet current and future national food and agricultural sciences workplace needs;
- (3) to provide off-island scholarships for students pursuing Bachelors degrees in food and agricultural related sciences; and
- (4) to provide financial assistance for faculty and staff professional development.

The goal is to increase the enrollment or the number of students who declare a major. The number of students who continue to use the student lab is at a steadily increasing rate.

The project will increase in the number of graduates, continue the funding source for faculty and staff, and increase in the number of students continuing their education at the Bachelors level. They will be funding: summer internships and summer institute financial assistance.

Working in Agricultural Training: Education by Research (WATER)

The main objective of the this project is to enhance the agriculture, natural sciences and engineering curriculum through the involvement of students and faculty in research projects related to reuse of water resources for agriculture, including experiential learning and K-12 outreach and extension activities.

Audience: Five (5) undergraduates and one graduate student will participate including seven faculty and one-extension personnel. An estimated of 100 K-12 students and 30 K-12 students and teachers will be impacted by the outreach and extension activities.

Activities/Products WATER products involves outreach materials, workshops for training students in research projects, research projects related to wastewater reuse, summer research experiences for undergraduate and graduate students for participating institutions, students internships at USDA, K-12 teachers workshops, K12 students motivational career workshops. Envisioned activities will be aimed at students development as well as the consolidation of a robust pipeline to attract, retain and graduate talented minority students from PR and USVI while preparing them for placement in Agriculture-related positions.

Promoting local research and internship experiences in the US for undergraduate students

This project will address the need to provide new learning paradigms and research skills through an undergraduate research program (URP), and a summer internship what will continue increasing the number of applications, enrollments and the retention rates on two campuses of the University. This institution has the capacity (faculty, laboratory space and equipment) to admit additional students and increase enrollments in the graduate programs, especially in food, agriculture, renewable natural resources and environment fields. Students from UPR-Ag majoring in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM) disciplines will be exposed to the opportunities of applying their basic knowledge to research problems related to FARNRE. Two mid-career young faculty members will be given the opportunity to renew their theoretical and applied knowledge and skills in the areas of assisted reproductive techniques, one, and food science microbiology, the other. They will be able to incorporate the obtained knowledge in their courses and research as well as in their activities as mentors of the institution funded by the project as well as enhance professional relations with the hosting institution. This project is aligned with the institutions long range goals as they are contained in its mission statement. The present tight fiscal situation at the campus, which is expected to continue, poses a challenge for the funding needed to accomplish the institutional goals established. This project will facilitate the development of inter-institutional partnerships and collaborations between at least three institutions.

Integrated Sustainable Small Farm Training in the Pacific Islands

The project will train students by establishing a field-based experiential learning program with utilization of the existing demonstration farm. Five (5) objectives of the project are:

- (1) Increase in students knowledge and skills of farm management and sustainable agriculture;
- (2) Increase in opportunities for students and public to gain knowledge of sustainable agriculture by attending workshops;
- (3) Develop students leadership skills, service learning, and oral communication skills of farm management and sustainable agriculture;
- (4) Develop students written communication skills of farm management and sustainable agriculture; and
- (5) Increase the number of deliverables for agriculture education and extension program.

The project addresses the following Educational Need Areas (ENA): Curricular Design, Materials Development, Library Resources; Student Experiential Learning; and Student recruitment, retention, and education equity.

For ENA, the manual and handouts created in the proposed project will be used as instructional materials to learn about sustainable agriculture as a farm tour guide or in classroom. For ENA, the proposed project offers the farm-based work study practicum and experiential learning by interaction of trainees with faculty to produce extension materials. The proposed project will also address ENA, student recruitment and retention by providing students job opportunities as financial supports.

Enhancing career opportunities in agricultural sciences for Pacific Islanders

The project will enhance agriculture education at secondary schools by offering workshops to secondary school teachers in Guam and delivering agricultural related STEM instruction materials. The proposed project will increase undergraduate students opportunities to conduct agricultural research projects and participate in experiential learning programs. The proposed project will also provide support for Pacific Island students to pursue advanced degrees in agriculture by offering scholarships to qualified recipients. The proposed project supports University of Guam's long-term goals in two Educational Need Areas: (# e) Student Experiential Learning: to develop student scientific and professional competencies through experiential learning programs that provide students with opportunities to solve complex problems in the context of real world situations; and (# f) Student Recruitment, Retention, and Educational Equity: to strengthen student recruitment and retention programs to ensure the future strength of the Nations scientific, professional, and technical work force in the food and agricultural sciences. Fiscal Year 2017: The final eight (8) Awards will range from the lowest of $138,686 to the highest of $145,750.

RIIA project: Engineering Teams Optimizing Agricultural Technology

Work proposed herein takes advantage of the strong engineering programs available at the institution to foster the optimization of agricultural technology. Such goal will be achieved by preparing and focusing teams of two (2) to four (4) engineering students to work on specific agricultural science problems impacting the island. Attainment of such objective requires the establishment of a curricular sequence in Agricultural Science that allows Engineering students to grasp fundamental knowledge of agriculture. The curricular sequence includes a capstone/design course that requires application of the Engineering tools to a current problem of the islands agriculture. Student capstone design project will be identified after interaction with stakeholders (e.g., Extension agents, farmer or professional associations, government officials, industry representatives).

The project starts by testing the strategy at Industrial and Mechanical Engineering with the long-term goal of institutionalizing the improved approach to the various engineering departments at the institution. By intersecting engineering know-how with agricultural opportunity areas, the initiative should impact the islands economic activity.

RIIA Project: Developing Resident Instruction in Food & Agriculture Related Sciences at Community College.

RIIA funding will continue to support three (3) full-time instructors, which has resulted in increase in enrollment, number of graduates, students receiving scholarships and stipends, and students participating in experiential learning programs. Continued support from RIIA will help to ensure further successes in the institutions long-term measures. The project goals focuses on three (3) Educational Need Areas (ENA) ENA (2) Faculty Preparation & Enhancement for Teaching, ENA (5) Student Experiential Learning, and ENA (6) Student Recruitment, Retention, and Educational Equity. With the ENAs as a guiding tool, the objectives of the project are: to maintain a funding source for faculty; to participate in a Summer Internship project with insular area colleges/universities; to provide local and regional summer internships; to provide Summer Institute scholarships; to provide off-island scholarships for students pursuing Bachelors degrees in food and agricultural related sciences; and to provide financial support for faculty and staff professional development. These objectives will help the institution meet its outcomes and overall NIFA objectives of increasing the number and diversity of students pursuing degrees in food and agricultural sciences, and enhancing the quality of postsecondary instruction to help meet current and future workplace needs

RIIA project: Engaging Prebaccalaureate Students in Educational Agricultural Research

The project will engage undergraduate students in educational agricultural research opportunities. Research faculty at the Agricultural Experiment Station will engage students through mentoring them in educational agricultural research within their programs. One (1) of the challenges faced by institutions operating in insular areas is having sufficient resources for many aspects of everyday life and education. In addition to much needed financial support, this RIIA grant will provide undergraduate students with opportunities to develop their problem solving and decision making capabilities and their level of technical expertise to enhance their overall college experience in leadership and to broaden the scope of their education. Students can use their experience in an Agriculture Extension Station (AES) research program to excel in subsequent academic ventures. A student will also be given an opportunity to participate in a summer internship in 2018 at another Insular Area Institution. The select student will be able to learn and experience tropical agriculture from a different region and share their experience upon return with other undergraduate students. Four students will also be selected to visit a continental US university's main campus and off campus research stations focusing on tropical agriculture to expose them to other students and research institutions.

AGEFEI Project: Rainwater Harvesting, Storage, and Micro-Irrigation for Water Self-Sufficiency

This project will merge existing irrigation infrastructure with rainwater catchment, distribution, and irrigation technologies that provide state-of-the-art solutions to water conservation and agricultural sustainability in the hot, humid tropics. They will construct a farm equipment building for storage and maintenance that will enhance the rainwater catchment capacity of the green water system. The green water system will utilize rainwater catchment, storage, and distribution at the AES field research site that incorporates micro-irrigation technologies. The goal of this proposal is that water use at the AES field research programs (irrigation and livestock consumption) will become self-sufficient from harvested rainwater.

AGEFEI Project: A Science Hub Facility for Agriculture and Plant Protection

The project aims to substantially upgrade and modernize the facilities located in a Center for Excellence in Quarantine and Invasive Species, with a view to strongly enhancing the technological aspects of agricultural education and training in the island. The Center for Excellence possesses lab space, greenhouses and a quarantine facility for the study of invasive pests and pathogens, constituting a front line initiative for their control, before they affect the mainland US. The Center is currently host to 12 undergraduate and graduate students, being trained in modern techniques of pest and pathogen detection, monitoring (GIS) and biological and biomolecular characterization, including Next Generation Sequencing (NGS) techniques. The project goals are to: Firstly, to develop networking capability, involving the creation of an improved multimedia classroom in the Library, which will act as hub for live teaching and seminars, teleconferencing, and the creation of online content in both Spanish and English. This will enable groups in diverse parts of the island to easily access and contribute expertise and knowledge. An important function will be to establish connectivity with groups outside the island, in the mainland US, Caribbean region, and rest of the world. Secondly, to implement computational infrastructure that will facilitate high throughput analyses, in particular genomics that may be used as a training tool in undergraduate and graduate research and education. Thirdly, to upgrade existing experimental equipment to the state of the art. This will include digitization and improvement of microscopic equipment, acquisition of high throughput sample processing equipment such as DNA automated extraction for sampling screening and biological process documentation. Fiscal Year 2018: For FY 2018, it is projected that approximately 15-20 applications will be received, and approximately seven (7) to eight (8) awards will be made.

Specific data is not yet available. Pertinent data to be provided by Program at a future date.

10.309 SPECIALTY CROP RESEARCH INITIATIVE (SCRI)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

The Specialty Crop Research Initiative (SCRI) is authorized by Section 7311 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008, which added section 412 to the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (AREERA). Section 412 of AREERA establishes a specialty crop research and extension initiative to address the critical needs of the specialty crop industry by developing and disseminating science-based tools to address needs of specific crops and their regions. . Public Law 105-185, 7 U.S.C 7632.

OBJECTIVES:

The Specialty Crop Research Initiative (SCRI) was established to solve critical industry issues through research and extension activities. SCRI will give priority to projects that are multistate, multi-institutional, or trans-disciplinary; and include explicit mechanisms to communicate results to producers and the public. Projects must address at least one of five focus areas: research in plant breeding, genetics, and genomics to improve crop characteristics; efforts to identify and address threats from pests and diseases, including threats to specialty crop pollinators; efforts to improve production efficiency, productivity, and profitability over the long term; new innovations and technology, including improved mechanization and technologies that delay or inhibit ripening; and methods to prevent, detect, monitor, control, and respond to potential food safety hazards in the production and processing of specialty crops including fresh produce.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

PROJECT GRANTS

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Grant funds must be used for allowable costs necessary to conduct approved research and extension objectives. Funds shall not be used for the construction of a new building or facility or the acquisition, expansion, remodeling, or alteration of an existing building or facility (including site grading and improvement, and architect fees). Funds may not be used for any purposes other than those approved in the grant award documents. INDIRECT COSTS: Not to exceed 22% of Federal Funds awarded. Applicants may use both the unrecovered indirect costs associated with the Federal Budget and the unrecovered indirect costs associated with the Non-Federal Budget to meet their matching requirements.

Indirect costs may not be recovered on third-party matching contributions.

Applicant Eligibility:

Applications may be submitted by Federal agencies, national laboratories, colleges and universities, research institutions and organizations, private organizations or corporations, State agricultural experiment stations, individuals, or groups consisting of two or more of these entities.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Applications may be submitted by Federal agencies, national laboratories, colleges and universities, research institutions and organizations, private organizations or corporations, State agricultural experiment stations, individuals, or groups consisting of two or more of these entities.

Credentials/Documentation:

The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

(i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;

(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one-time basis, with updates on an as-needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: For the Fiscal Year (FY) 2016 award cycle, approximately $48,250,396 million was available for the Specialty Crop Research Initiative (SCRI) program and $21,947,099 million was available for the Emergency Citrus Research and Extension Program (CDRE).

Pre-applications were solicited separately for each program and subject to separate stakeholder relevancy reviews.

A total of 120 pre-applications were received for SCRI and 38 pre-applications were received for CDRE.

Following the relevancy review processes, 61 full applications were solicited for SCRI and 21 for CDRE.

Separate scientific merit panels were then convened to evaluate the scientific quality of the applications and to combine that evaluation with the results of the relevancy review. Panelists included faculty from land grant and non-land grant colleges and universities, industry scientists, and practitioners from the food and agricultural sciences community.

NIFA made 18 new SCRI awards (approximately $37 million), which translates into a 30% success rate for full applications. When the pre-application success rate is included, the combined success rate for applicants is 15%.

In addition, seven (7) SCRI continuation awards were made for approximately $12 million.

NIFA made five (5) new CDRE awards (approximately $18.4 million), which translates into a 24% success rate for full applications.

When the pre-application success rate is included, the combined success rate for CDRE applicants is 13.2%. Fiscal Year 2017: For the Fiscal Year (FY) 2017 award cycle, approximately $47,927,218 million was available for the SCRI program and approximately $21,653,967 million for CDRE.

Pre-applications were solicited separately for each program and subject to separate stakeholder relevancy reviews.

A total of 155 pre-applications were received for SCRI and 42 pre-applications were received for CDRE.

Following the relevancy review processes, 83 full applications were solicited for SCRI and 25 for CDRE.

Separate scientific merit panels were then convened to evaluate the scientific quality of the applications and to combine that evaluation with the results of the relevancy review. Panelists included faculty from land grant and non-land grant colleges and universities, industry scientists, and practitioners from the food and agricultural sciences community.

NIFA made 12 new SCRI awards (approximately $35 million), which translates into a 14% success rate for full applications. When the pre-application success rate is included, the combined success rate for applicants is 7%.

In addition, five (5) SCRI continuation awards were made for approximately $13 million.

For CDRE, the FY 2017 merit review panel has not convened, so information is not yet available for new awards. Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date. NIFA anticipates funding one (1) continuation award (approximately $6 million). Fiscal Year 2018: For the Fiscal Year (FY) 2018 award cycle, approximately $48,082,084 million is projected to be available for the SCRI program and $21,724,816 million for CDRE.

Relevancy review of pre-applications will be followed by a scientific merit review of solicited full applications. These sequential review steps are conducted separately for SCRI and CDRE.

NIFA anticipates funding five (5) continuation awards for SCRI (approximately $16 million) and two (2) continuation awards for CDRE (approximately $4 million).

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: MANAGEMENT OF BROWN MARMORATED STINK BUG IN US SPECIALTY CROPS

The brown marmorated stink bug (BMSB) is an invasive insect that first appeared as a severe economic pest of specialty crops in the Mid-Atlantic in 2010. It has since spread to 43 states and is now a threat to specialty crops across much of the US. This project will improve our knowledge of BMSB risk to crops through enhanced understanding of agroecology and landscape ecology, implement widespread biological control of BMSB with an exotic Asian parasitoid and native natural enemies, and develop management tools and strategies compatible with biological control and informed by risk from landscape factors. We will continue to determine the economic consequences of BMSB damage and how it is reduced by specific management strategies, and deliver science-based information with a robust and diversified outreach program.

PROTECTING POLLINATORS WITH ECONOMICALLY FEASIBLE AND

ENVIRONMENTALLY SOUND ORNAMENTAL HORTICULTURE

Recent scientific and public awareness about the status of domesticated and native pollinators in North America has led to consumers intentionally planting pollinator-friendly plants. Identifying ornamental horticulture plants that support pollinator populations will open new markets for growers. This address threats to specialty crop pollinators by:

- (1) identifying pollinator attractiveness of top selling crops;
- (2) filling specific regulatory data gaps for pollinator risk assessment of systemic insecticide residues within ornamental horticulture crops;
- (3) comparing current pest management practices with alternative strategies;
- (4) providing guidance to growers and landscape managers with updated Best Management Practices; and
- (5) developing outreach tools for multiple stakeholder audiences. Ultimately, this project will aid in reaching the President's goal of seven (7) million acres of restored or enhanced pollinator habitat by providing growers and landscape managers the knowledge to address pests while producing high quality plants for pollinator forage.

SOLID SET CANOPY DELIVERY SYSTEMS: AND EFFICIENT, SUSTAINABLE AND SAFER SPRAY TECHNOLOGY FOR TREE FRUIT

This multi-region project has a national scope completing the development and delivery of Solid Set Canopy Delivery Systems (SSCDS) for high-density tree fruit production and evaluate SSCDS spray coverage for additional perennial fruit crops. SSCDS consist of a network of microsprayers positioned in the tree canopy/trellis and connected to a pumping/mixing station. SSCDS application virtually eliminates applicator exposure common to tractor-based sprayers, while increasing farmers ability to apply sprays during critical weather periods. SSCDS would make frequent applications at low rates possible for modern agricultural chemicals, including nutrients and reduced-risk pesticides, to improve efficacy of soft impact IPM programs and reduce soil fertilizer levels. The specific objectives for this proposal are:

- (1) Optimize SSCDS technologies for modern orchard architectures for improved spray material application efficacy;
- (2) Determine and test SSCDS applications for standard and novel fruit production operations;
- (3) Determine the economic benefits and costs associated with SSCDS and identify non-economic barriers to grower adoption of SSCDS; and
- (4) Develop and deliver extension and outreach activities and materials including field scale and on-farm demonstrations to increase producer knowledge and adoption of SSCDS technologies.

FOOD SAFETY INNOVATIONS AND PREVENTIVE CONTROLS DURING FRESH AND FRESH-CUT PRODUCE WASHING, PACKING, AND RETAIL DISPLAY

Foodborne illness outbreaks associated with contaminated produce negatively impact public health, consumer confidence, the produce industry's economic well-being, and progress toward national nutritional goals. To reduce food safety risk, this project holistically addresses key steps in the supply chain where risk factors profoundly impact food safety, and controls are also feasible. Specifically, we will:

- (1) develop and validate preventive controls for cross-contamination during packinghouse and fresh-cut processing operations;
- (2) evaluate food safety improvement in nonimmersive fresh-cut washing;
- (3) advance scientific understanding of fresh-cut washing and sanitizing processes, and develop novel technologies to improve efficacy;
- (4) field-test, in cooperating retail stores, an energy-efficient approach to improve temperature control and prevent pathogen proliferation in fresh-cut leafy greens; and
- (5) perform cost-benefit analysis and outreach to stakeholders to facilitate technology adoption.

Project outcomes will enable development, validation, and adoption of science- and risk-based food safety standards and control limits, support implementation of the Food Safety Modernization Act, and benefit consumers, processors, packers, and retailers.

ACCELERATING THE DEVELOPMENT, EVALUATION, AND ADOPTION OF NEW APPLE ROOTSTOCK TECHNOLOGIES TO IMPROVE APPLE GROWERS PROFITABILITY AND SUSTAINABILITY

The deficiencies of current apple rootstocks create an urgency to develop and adopt new improved rootstocks. Through this project, we seek to accelerate the development, evaluation and adoption of improved apple rootstocks by targeting research areas, not currently being addressed, which will result in more efficient rootstock development and improved implementation by growers and nurseries. We will focus on both evaluating new candidate rootstocks and identifying genetic makers for difficult to phenotype complex root traits like replant disease tolerance, nutrient uptake and partitioning (especially calcium), low/high soil pH and salinity to improve tolerance of rootstocks to these biotic and abiotic stresses, and improve fruit quality of high value cultivars such as Honeycrisp. Fiscal Year 2017: VitisGen2: Application of Next Generation Technologies to Accelerate Grapevine Cultivar Development Recent analyses have emphasized the economic and environmental importance of developing new grape cultivars with high fruit quality (FQ) and resistance to powdery mildew (PM). An Advisory Panel of table, juice, raisin and wine grape industry members concurs that high-quality, PM-resistant cultivars are a top priority. The proposed project (VitisGen2) will: i) expand on VitisGen progress in developing novel economic, phenotyping and genetics knowledge and tools related to new grape cultivars; and ii) translate these and previous VitisGen innovations into new applications for improving grape breeding programs and managing existing vineyard plantings.

The Economics team will evaluate the consequences of introducing new grape traits, including impacts upon cost, yield, revenue, profit, pesticide use, and the environment. The Phenotyping team will develop novel high-throughput methods, and apply these along with proven approaches to characterize a range of phenotypes, such as PM resistance durability and undesirable fruit qualities, as well as locally important traits. The Genetics team will couple phenotyping results with high-resolution genetic maps, which can be combined with genome assembly and RNA-Seq analyses to develop inexpensive, high-resolution markers spanning key genes. Finally, the Outreach team will communicate scientific opportunities and discoveries, and provide stakeholders with knowledge of the benefits of adopting new high-quality PM-resistant cultivars along with new tools for characterizing PM and FQ in their existing plantings. The proposed work aligns with SCRI program goals by utilizing plant breeding and genomics approaches to improve grape characteristics and enhance the economic and environmental sustainability of grape production.

Table to Farm: A sustainable, systems-based approach for a safer and healthier melon supply chain in the U.S.

This project aims to improve the safety and quality of U.S.-produced melons (Cucumis melo L.) and therefore addresses SCRI goals by: strengthening the competitiveness and sustainability of the U.S. specialty crop industry and bolstering consumption of regionally produced specialty crops, expanding the diversity of adapted varieties through breeding, and improving production practices. It is anticipated that this stakeholder-driven approach will lead to development of unique cultivars (with improved quality, safety, and sensory attributes) and increase consumer loyalty and repeat purchasing (SCRI focus areas 1, 3, and 5).

The proposed project has five (5) objectives:

- (1) Identify and analyze factors influencing consumer behaviors related to melon purchase and consumption;
- (2) Develop cultivars that address producer and consumer needs using genomics-assisted selection and breeding to harness genetic diversity of melon varieties and improve nutritional quality, flavor, safety, and stress resistance;
- (3) Develop region- and cultivar-specific agronomic practices and technologies to improve production efficiency, nutritional quality and safety attributes;
- (4) Identify critical control points and develop pre- and post-harvest strategies to minimize microbial contamination; and
- (5) Establish a Center of Excellence Research, Extension, and Outreach Program for Melons with a focus on improving consumer awareness and meeting the consumer demand for safe, high-quality melons that exceed minimum quality standards thereby resulting in profitability for producers and retailers.

The CAP team spans 13 disciplines and institutions from seven (7) states. We expect that enhancing melon quality, nutrition, and safety, while providing elite cultivars well-suited to regional production and distribution, will benefit producers, processors, distributors, and consumers nation-wide.

Increasing Low-Input Turfgrass Adoption Through Breeding, Innovation, and Public Education

The public desires lower-input turfgrasses that provide functional turf areas while reducing inputs of water, fertilizer, mowing, and pesticides. Our surveys of consumer and public land managers, along with information from industry partners, suggests that having knowledge about the positive benefits of fine fescues, an important group of grasses well suited for low-input environments, is not enough to increase adoption. The long-term goal of this project is to increase the use of well-adapted fine fescue cultivars in sustainable landscapes. In our first objective, we will survey consumers, land managers, and seed producers to identify the barriers preventing them from using fine fescues. In the second objective, we will lead a sustained effort of cultivar development focused on improving important traits utilizing new molecular technologies and proven breeding approaches. The third objective will generate new knowledge about complex interactions between turfgrass genetics and management. Our approach in the fourth objective will use 30 years of publicly available data in an innovative way to improve consumer turfgrass purchasing decisions for improved fine fescue cultivars. Our fifth objective will identify solutions to several turfgrass management barriers that are preventing stakeholders from seeding fine fescues in landscapes and seed producers from growing this specialty crop. Finally, and most importantly, our sixth objective will deliver research-based information to consumers, seed producers, and land managers using new and innovative outreach methods. We will use plant breeding to improve low-input characteristics and increase the production and profitability of this specialty crop over the long-term.

Developing a sustainable stevia industry in the United States

Stevia rebaudiana (stevia) is a rapidly emerging new crop in the U.S., grown for the extraction of sweet-tasting steviol glycosides used as non-caloric sweeteners. Most stevia is currently produced in China, though production is increasing rapidly in the U.S. The combination of a favorable climate and existing infrastructure necessary for stevia production in the southeastern U.S. make this an ideal region for production of high quality stevia needed to meet the increasing demand for steviol glycosides. However, U.S. stevia growers confront multiple challenges, including a lack of varieties developed for U.S. conditions, a paucity of information on optimizing production practices, such as planting density, fertilization, weed and disease control, and a lack of information on costs of production, consumer preferences, and potential profitability. The specific objectives of this proposal, which were developed with stakeholders through an SCRI Planning Grant, are to:

- (1) Develop Best Management Practices to optimize stevia biomass and glycoside production in the southeastern U.S.;
- (2) Develop germplasm and genetic/genomic resources to enable selection and breeding of stevia cultivars adapted to U.S. growing conditions and producing consumer-desired steviol glycosides;
- (3) Develop consumer profile and market potential analyses for U.S. stevia products and determine consumer-preferred combinations of steviol glycosides;
- (4) Develop cost of production estimates for stevia in different cropping systems; and
- (5) Conduct outreach programs for producers, extension service providers, and industry professionals.

Completing these objectives will contribute substantially to filling the knowledge gaps, and the fostering development of new varieties to meet industry demand for next-generation sweeteners.

Integrating anaerobic soil disinfestation, crop rotation and variety for disease management in strawberry production

Strawberry production is a $2.8 billion industry that provides livelihoods for many hundreds of growers and employs over 80,000 workers in the US. The industry was built around the use of fumigants to manage soil borne diseases and pests. Increasing restrictions on fumigant use due to health and environmental concerns make the development of effective reduced/non-fumigant based management systems critical for survival of the industry in the US. This SREP project brings together a national team of researchers and stakeholders to develop and implement effective non/reduced fumigant management systems tailored for specific regions, pathogens and pests.

Biologically-based techniques, notably anaerobic soil disinfestation (ASD), crop rotation and cultivar resistance are promising alternatives to fumigation in strawberries; but their efficacy is dependent on environmental and biological variables. Improved understanding of management/environment/ pathogen/pest interactions with ASD is needed to develop site and pathogen specific management strategies. Any single biological technique is unlikely to provide efficacy in all situations, but combining multiple strategies should increase the reliability of pathogen control. Here we propose to optimize ASD in terms of carbon sources, combined use with biological agents and herbicides, reduced water use, nitrogen dynamics and genotypes, then put these together with crop rotation to design integrated systems targeted for specific regions in California, Florida, North Carolina and Tennessee.

Findings from this project will benefit other specialty crops where fumigants are used, and address SCRI priorities: identify and address threats from pests and diseases; improve production efficiency; and research on plant breeding. Fiscal Year 2018: Information is not yet available. Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

To establish a competitive grants program to provide funding for fundamental and applied research, extension, and education to address food and agricultural sciences.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Grant funds must be used for allowable costs necessary to conduct approved fundamental and applied research, extension and education objectives to address food and agricultural sciences. The competitive grants program shall address the following areas:

- A) Plant health and production and plant products;
- B) Animal health and production and animal products;
- C) Food safety, nutrition, and health;
- D) Renewable energy, natural resources, and environment;
- E) Agriculture systems and technology; and
- F) Agriculture economics and rural communities.

Funds shall not be used for the construction of a new building or facility or the acquisition, expansion, remodeling, or alteration of an existing building or facility (including site grading and improvement, and architect fees). Funds may not be used for any purposes other than those approved in the grant award documents. Funds shall not be used for the construction of a new building or facility or the acquisition, expansion, remodeling, or alteration of an existing building or facility (including site grading and improvement, and architect fees).

Funds may not be used for any purposes other than those approved in the grant award documents.

Indirect cost is not allowable if awarded as an equipment, conference, or post-doc fellowship grant.

Section 720 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2012 (Pub.L. No. 112-55) limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded. Special Note on Indirect Costs as in-kind matching contributions:

Indirect costs may be claimed under the Federal portion of the award budget or, alternatively, indirect costs may be claimed as a matching contribution (if no indirect costs are requested under the Federal portion of the award budget). However, unless explicitly authorized in the RFA, indirect costs may not be claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution, unless the total claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less. An awardee may split the allocation between the Federal and non-Federal portions of the budget only if the total amount of indirect costs charged to the project does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less.

For example, if an awardee's indirect costs are capped at 30 percent pursuant to FY 2012 appropriated funds, Section 720 of the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2012 (Division A of Pub. L. 112-55), the awardee may request 15 percent of the indirect costs on both the Federal portion of the award and as a matching contribution.

Or, the awardee may request any similar percentage that, when combined, does not exceed the maximum indirect cost rate of 30 percent. Fully discretionary.

the most recent one-year period. The following information, when applicable, must be included in the Project Modifications section of the annual Progress Report.

1) A comparison of actual accomplishments with the goals established for the reporting period (where the output of the project can be expressed readily in numbers, a computation of the cost per unit of output should be submitted if the information is considered useful);

(2) The reasons for slippage if established goals were not met; and

(3) Additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs.

c. Final Technical Report

The Final Technical Report is required within 90 calendar days after the expiration or termination of the award. The Final Technical Report covers the entire period of performance of the award and must describe progress made during the entire timeframe of the project instead of covering accomplishments made only during the final reporting segment of the project. In addition to supplying the information required under item b. of this article, the final report must include the following when applicable:

Identify equipment purchased with any Federal funds under the award and indicate subsequent use of such equipment.

FINANCIAL REPORTING:

As outlined in 2 CFR 200.327, the recipient must submit financial status reports by the frequency required in the terms and conditions of the award. The following are the financial reporting requirements for NIFA.

Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425:

NIFA uses the SF-425, Federal Financial Report to monitor cash. A Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due on an annual basis no later than 90 days following the end of the award anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day when the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period.

A final Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due 90 days after the expiration date of this award. The report must be submitted to the Awards Management Division (AMD) as a pdf attachment to an email sent to awards@nifa.usda.gov.

(D) AFRI: Sustainable Bioenergy

A total of seven (7) awards were made in FY 2016 for the Bioenergy Challenge Area in various program areas. Examples included but not limited to:

NEWBio: Northeast Woody/Warm-season Biomass Consortium

NEWBio aims to build robust, scalable and sustainable value chains for biomass energy in the Northeast growing short rotation woody crops and perennial grasses on underutilized or marginal lands.

System For Advanced Biofuels Production From Woody Biomass In The Pacific Northwest

This project is to ready the Pacific Northwest (PNW) for a 2015 introduction of a 100% infrastructure compatible biofuels industry that meets the region's pro-rata share of Renewable Fuels Standard (RFS2) targets using sustainably grown regionally appropriate woody energy crops, thereby helping to revitalize the region's agriculture/forestry sectors with establishment of a sustainable advanced biofuels industry that supports both large and small growers and brings jobs to rural communities in the region.

(E) AFRI: Food, Agriculture, Natural Resources and Human Sciences Education and Literacy Initiative (ELI)

REEU: Projects were funded that promote research and extension learning experiences for undergraduates such that upon graduation they may enter the agricultural workforce with exceptional skills. Successful proposals enhanced the capacity of institutions to produce graduates with skills needed to address challenges of the 21st Century in the Food, Agricultural, Natural Resources, and Human (FANH) sciences.

PD-STEP: Projects were funded that increase the number of K-14 teachers and educational professionals trained in the FANH sciences. Successful proposals developed pathways to identify and replicate best practices to engage youth in science, technology, engineering and mathematics (STEM) fields within the FANH sciences

Predocctoral and Postdoctoral Fellowships: Projects were funded that will develop the next generation of leaders who will be actively engaged in agriculture, forestry, and food related research, education, and extension careers. Successful proposals focused on developing the next generation of scientists who will lead agriculture into the future by solving current and future challenges facing our society. The awarded projects also targeted talented, highly-motivated doctoral candidates and postdoctoral trainees that demonstrate remarkable promise and demonstrated the ability to increase the number of gifted agricultural scientists in the United States.

(F) AFRI: Childhood Obesity Prevention:

Starting Early: Expansion of a Primary Care-Based Early Child Obesity Prevention Program

This proposal is a multi-functional integrated research, education and extension project to evaluate the long term impacts of the Starting Early Program (STEP) and to develop and evaluate a two-fold expansion of this novel approach to preventing early child obesity. This proposal fully integrates research to determine the efficacy of the STEP intervention and key factors causing early childhood obesity, education of pregnant women and mothers as well as dietetic/nutrition and primary health care providers and extension into:

- (1) the Families, Food and Fitness eXtension community of practice;
- (2) primary health care setting; and
- (3) Supplemental Nutrition Programs for Women, Infants and Children (WIC).

Advancing and Expanding HomeStyles: Shaping HOME Environments and LifeSTYLES to Prevent Childhood Obesity

This multi-disciplinary, multi-institutional, multi-state, integrated Research, Education, and Extension project will advance and expand the progress of HomeStyles toward reducing risk of childhood overweight and obesity. HomeStyles, an in-home family intervention, enables and motivates English- and Spanish-speaking parents to shape home environments and weight-related lifestyle practices to prevent childhood obesity. Segment 1 of HomeStyles focused families with preschoolers (ages 2-5).

Summer Harvest Adventure: A garden-based obesity prevention program for children residing in low-resource communities

This novel proposal is in direct response to the AFRI Childhood Obesity Prevention Challenge Area aligning with the USDA Strategic Plan. The long-term goal of our enhanced Team Nutrition-based intervention, "Summer Harvest Adventure," is to promote obesity prevention strategies (improve diet, physical activity) and help fill the summer meal gap for children, ages 8-11 years, residing in low-resource communities. The healthcare cost of every obese child in the U.S. over a lifetime is $19,000 more than his/her normal-weight counterpart.

1) A comparison of actual accomplishments with the goals established for the reporting period (where the output of the project can be expressed readily in numbers, a computation of the cost per unit of output should be submitted if the information is considered useful);

(2) The reasons for slippage if established goals were not met; and

(3) Additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs.

c. Final Technical Report

The Final Technical Report is required within 90 calendar days after the expiration or termination of the award. The Final Technical Report covers the entire period of performance of the award and must describe progress made during the entire timeframe of the project instead of covering accomplishments made only during the final reporting segment of the project. In addition to supplying the information required under item b. of this article, the final report must include the following when applicable:

Identify equipment purchased with any Federal funds under the award and indicate subsequent use of such equipment.

FINANCIAL REPORTING:

As outlined in 2 CFR 200.327, the recipient must submit financial status reports by the frequency required in the terms and conditions of the award. The following are the financial reporting requirements for NIFA.

A Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due on an annual basis no later than 90 days following the end of the award anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day when the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period.

A final Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due 90 days after the expiration date of this award. The report must be submitted to the Awards Management Division (AMD) as a pdf attachment to an email sent to awards@nifa.usda.gov.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: Approximately 35 projects were funded in Fiscal Year (FY) 2016 with a 24% success rate for a total of $17,777,572 after legislatively mandated set-asides.

Funds were utilized to address unique training, education, outreach and technical assistance needs of beginning farmers and ranchers, such as land acquisition, business and financial management, farming and ranching practices, natural resource conservation, risk management, legal strategies, marketing strategies, and more. Funds were also utilized for educational team efforts to train the trainers and help enhance other beginning farmer and rancher education programs in the nation. Fiscal Year 2017: Approximately 36 projects will be awarded in Fiscal Year (FY) 2017 with a 25% success rate for an estimated total of $17,758,724. These funds were authorized in the 2014 Farm Bill.

The projects funded will work towards increasing the number, success and sustainability of beginning farmers and ranchers in the United States by providing them with the knowledge, skills, and tools needed to make informed decisions. Anticipated accomplishments would include growing new farmers. The topics addressed by Beginning Farmer and Rancher Development Program (BFRDP) projects are diverse, driven by the needs of the audiences they serve. Most projects provide education, mentoring, and technical assistance on a variety of topics spanning production, marketing, business management, and legal and human resource issues. Fiscal Year 2018: It is projected that $17,790,396 will be available to support between 35 and 38 projects in Fiscal Year (FY) 2018. FY 2018 represents the last year of funding for the mandatory 2014 Farm Bill Beginning Farmer and Rancher Development Programs 5-Year Funding of $100 million.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: The BFRDP program encourages projects that address a range of topics rather than a narrow focus, by stating Most successful standard grant applicants provide training and assistance with business and financial management, as well as production and marketing topics aligned with the BFRDP priorities.

Five (5) exemplary projects funded are as follows:

(1) A project funded in the North Central region worked with 56 beginning Hispanic, socially disadvantaged and limited resource farmers; 53% of these farmers developed enterprise plans suitable for FSA loan applications; 61% gained skills on sustainable production and food safety techniques.

(2) The Women in Agriculture project in Michigan worked on conducting and evaluating training programs with 194 participants in the program. 14% of these participants learned how to project cash flow, 14% improved on loan readiness, and about 1% tried out direct seeding.

(3) A project in the South working with 100% African American participants focused on specialty crop production. Of the 45 participants in the program, 100% completed business plans. 95% launched farm enterprises; and 56% increased their annual income by 15-85% from their enterprises.

(4) Two (2) projects farming for cash had 175 participants. They were trained to start farming production and business planning. 46% of these participants learned about marketing; 100% of these farmers learned about vegetable production for local markets; 44% of the participants started farming.

(5) One (1) comprehensive training program taught 92 participants how to start farming; 15% learned about fruit and vegetable production; 11% learned farm business planning; 24% learned small ruminant livestock production. Fiscal Year 2017: Projects scheduled to be funded in FY 2017 will address the concerns of socially disadvantaged, veteran farmers, new and beginning farmers, refugees, immigrants, urban farmers, women farmers and small farmers. Fiscal Year 2018: It is projected that projects funded in FY 2018 will be similar to prior years projects.

10.312 BIOMASS RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT INITIATIVE COMPETITIVE GRANTS PROGRAM (BRDI)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

Collaboration between Department of Energy (DOE) and Department of Agriculture (USDA) on a Biomass Research and Development Initiative is directed under various statutory authorities, primarily the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (FCEA) (Public Law 110-246) and the Energy Policy Act of 2005 (EPAct 2005)(Public Law 109-58; Section 941). USDA's authorization appears in Section 9008 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (FCEA) (Public Law 110-246) which replaced section 9008 of the Farm Security, and Rural Investment Act of 2002 (FSRIA) (Public Law 107-171) [7 U.S.C. 8108]; thereby amending section 307 of the Biomass Research and Development Act of 2000 (BRDA) (7 U.S.C. 7624 note, and 7 U.S.C. 8101 note; Public Law 106224). Pursuant to Executive Order 13134, BRDA can be found at (7 U.S.C. 8601 et seq). BRDA authorizes the Biomass Research and Development, Public Law 109-58, 7 U.S.C 8606.

OBJECTIVES:

To carry out research on and development and demonstration of:

(A) biofuels and biobased products; and
(B) the methods, practices, and technologies, for the production of biofuels and biobased products.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Grant funds must be used for allowable costs necessary to conduct approved research and extension objectives. Funds shall not be used for the construction of a new building or facility or the acquisition, expansion, remodeling, or alteration of an existing building or facility (including site grading and improvement, and architect fees). Funds may not be used for any purposes other than those approved in the grant award documents. Indirect costs may not exceed 22% of Federal Funds Awarded.

Special Note on Indirect Costs as in-kind matching contributions:
Indirect costs may be claimed under the Federal portion of the award budget or, alternatively, indirect costs may be claimed as a matching contribution (if no indirect costs are requested under the Federal portion of the award budget).

However, unless explicitly authorized in the RFA, indirect costs may not be claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution, unless the total claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less.

An awardee may split the allocation between the Federal and non-Federal portions of the budget only if the total amount of indirect costs charged to the project does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less.

For example, if an awardee's indirect costs are capped at 30 percent pursuant to FY 2012 appropriated funds, Section 720 of the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2012 (Division A of Pub. L. 112-55), the awardee may request 15 percent of the indirect costs on both the Federal portion of the award and as a matching contribution.

Or, the awardee may request any similar percentage that, when combined, does not exceed the maximum indirect cost rate of 30 percent. Matching Requirements: 20% for Research and Development Projects / 50% for Demonstration and Commercial Projects.

Credentials/Documentation:

The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

Qualified individuals interested in participating in the VMLRP should visit the VMLRP website for all application forms and requirements.

The application will be evaluated by a peer review panel, convened for this purpose by the NIFA. In selecting applicants for participation in the VMLRP, the panel will consider eligibility status, quality of the applicant, and the applicants career plan focus. All selections are subject to final approval by the VMLRP manager.

10.318 WOMEN AND MINORITIES IN SCIENCE, TECHNOLOGY, ENGINEERING, AND MATHEMATICS FIELDS

WAMS; Women and Minorities in Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics Fields (STEM) program

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

Section 7204 of the Food Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (FCEA) (Public Law 110-246) amends section 1672 of the Food, Agriculture, Conservation and Trade Act of 1990 (FACT) (7 U.S.C. 5925) to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to make competitive grants to support research and extension activities. The Secretary shall make these grants in consultation with the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education, and Economics Advisory Board.

OBJECTIVES:

The Women and Minorities (WAMS) in Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics (STEM) Fields program was authorized to increase participation by women and underrepresented minorities from rural areas in the fields of science, technology, engineering and mathematics, with priority given to eligible institutions that carry out continuing programs funded by the Secretary.

The goal of the WAMS program is to develop and implement robust partnerships to increase the representation, participation, and entrepreneurship of women in STEM careers, thereby contributing to national economic prosperity.

The purpose of the grant program is to support projects that: Provide STEM knowledge, skills and competency to Women and Minorities from Rural Areas with successful placement (a) in the workforce in STEM fields, or (b) as innovators and entrepreneurs adding value to the STEM fields in areas that have relevancy to the USDA Secretary's priorities.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Grant funds must be used for allowable costs necessary to conduct approved fundamental and applied research and extension grants to increase participation by women and underrepresented minorities from rural areas in the fields of science, technology, engineering and mathematics, with priority given to eligible institutions that carry out continuing programs funded by the Secretary. Program funds may only be used for research and extension activities in the training, outreach and mentoring of rural women and underrepresented minorities from rural areas in STEM fields relevant to USDA mission.

Funds may not be used for any purposes other than those approved in the grant award documents.

Funds made available for grants in this program shall not be used for scholarship or fellowship purposes, the construction of a new building or facility or the acquisition, expansion, remodeling, or alteration of an existing building or facility (including site grading and improvement, and architect fees).

Section 720 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2012 (P.L. 112-55) limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

Special Note on Indirect Costs as in-kind matching contributions:
Indirect costs may be claimed under the Federal portion of the award budget or, alternatively, indirect costs may be claimed as a matching contribution (if no indirect costs are requested under the Federal portion of the award budget). However, unless explicitly authorized in the RFA, indirect costs may not be claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution, unless the total claimed on both the Federal portion of the award budget and as a matching contribution does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less.

An awardee may split the allocation between the Federal and non-Federal portions of the budget only if the total amount of indirect costs charged to the project does not exceed the maximum allowed indirect costs or the institutions negotiated indirect cost rate, whichever is less.

For example, if an awardee's indirect costs are capped at 30 percent pursuant to FY 2012 appropriated funds, Section 720 of the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2012 (Division A of Pub. L. 112-55), the awardee may request 15 percent of the indirect costs on both the Federal portion of the award and as a matching contribution.

Or, the awardee may request any similar percentage that, when combined, does not exceed the maximum indirect cost rate of 30 percent. Fully discretionary.

Applicant Eligibility:

State agricultural experiment stations; colleges and universities; university research foundations; other research institutions and organizations; Federal agencies; national laboratories; private organizations or corporations; individuals; or any group consisting of 2 or more of these entities.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

State agricultural experiment stations; colleges and universities; university research foundations; other research institutions and organizations; Federal agencies; national laboratories; private organizations or corporations; individuals; or any group consisting of 2 or more of these entities.

Credentials/Documentation:

The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR

25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

(i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;

(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026. Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

Section 1672D of the Food, Agriculture, Conservation and Trade Act of 1990 (7 U.S.C. 5925f), 7 U.S.C 5925f.

OBJECTIVES:

To establish a competitive research and extension grants program for the purpose of: (1) improving the farm management knowledge and skills of agricultural producers; and (2) establishing and maintaining a national, publicly available farm financial management database to support improved farm management.

Section 720 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2012 (Pub.L. No. 112-55) limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded. Fully discretionary.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Applications may be submitted by qualified public and private entities.

Pursuant to 7 U.S.C. 450i(7), this includes:

- (A) State agricultural experiment stations;
- (B) colleges and universities;
- (C) university research foundations;

An applicant's failure to meet an eligibility criterion by the time of an application deadline may result in the application being excluded from consideration or, even though an application may be reviewed, will preclude NIFA from making an award.

Credentials/Documentation:

The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

[Formerly: Distance Education Grant (DEG)]

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

Distance Education Grants for Insular Areas (Distance Education Grants for Institutions of Higher Education in Insular Areas), 7 U.S.C 3362; Distance Education for Insular Areas (Resident Instruction Grants for Insular Area Activities), 7 U.S.C 3363.

OBJECTIVES:

To strengthen the capacity of Institutions of Higher Education in Insular Areas to carry out resident instruction, curriculum, and teaching programs in the food and agricultural sciences through distance education technology.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

The purpose of Distance Education Grants for Institutions of Higher Education in Insular Areas is to strengthen the capacity of Institutions of Higher Education in Insular Areas to carry out resident instruction, curriculum, and teaching programs in the food and agricultural sciences through distance education technology.

Grant funds must be used for allowable costs necessary to conduct approved fundamental and applied research, extension and education objectives to address food and agricultural sciences.

The use of grant funds to plan, acquire, or construct a building or facility is not allowed under this program. With prior approval, and in accordance with the cost principles set forth in OMB Circular No. A-21, some grant funds may be used for minor alterations, renovations, or repairs deemed necessary to retrofit existing teaching or research spaces in order to carry out a funded project.

However, requests to use grant funds for such purposes must demonstrate that the alterations, renovations, or repairs are essential to achieving the major purpose of the project. Grant funds may not be used for endowment investing. Section 720 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act, 2012 (Pub.L. No. 112-55) limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award.

Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their requests for recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded. Fully discretionary.

Applicant Eligibility:

Individual land-grant colleges and universities, and other institutions that have secured land-grant status through Federal legislation, and which are located in Insular Areas are automatically eligible for awards under the DEG grants program, either as direct applicants or as parties to a consortium agreement.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Individual land-grant colleges and universities, and other institutions that have secured land-grant status through Federal legislation, and which are located in Insular Areas are automatically eligible for awards under the DEG grants program, either as direct applicants or as parties to a consortium agreement.

Credentials/Documentation:

The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

(i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;

(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

RELATED PROGRAMS:

10.308 Resident Instruction Grants for Insular Area Activities

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: Developing Distance Education in Food & Agriculture Related Sciences

This projects will:

- (1) Encourage use of Distance Education (DE) and computer-lab equipment;
- (2) Enhance capacity of ACNR student lab and quality of instruction program;
- (3) Provide distance education scholarships; and
- (4) Provide funding for faculty & staff professional development.

Audience: Insular Area students, faculty & staff Products:

- a) Increase in the number and diversity of students who will pursue and complete a two (2) or four (4) year postsecondary degree in the food and agricultural sciences, or other science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM) fields closely related to the food and agricultural sciences. Also to encourage study in areas that contribute to any of the five (5) NIFA Priority Areas listed above; and
- b) Enhance the quality of postsecondary instruction in order to help meet current and future national food and agricultural sciences workplace needs

Promoting Distance Education by Offering Out-of-Classroom Experiences for Students

This project will improve wireless networking capability at the institution and acquire distance education technology (mobile and portable videoconference systems, respectively). On- and off-campus faculty will be trained in the use of portable videoconference systems, and instructional material will be developed for synchronous delivery of agricultural practices to supplement our courses from the Agriculture Experiment Station (AES). In addition, the portable systems will be used to increase off-campus mentoring in our undergraduate research program, and to promote AES learning experiences at open houses. This project perfectly aligns with DEG goals because it will contribute to better undergraduate students education and research experiences by providing support for the proposed DE technology. Use of DE technology during open houses for online synchronous promotion of agricultural experiences (e.g. AES) will motivate more high school students to apply to our academic programs; therefore, increasing student recruitment to agricultural sciences. Collectively, this proposal will also improve efficient use of resources (faculty, facilities and transportation); therefore, enhancing cost-effectiveness at both institutions.

Developing a High Quality Human Capital in Agribusiness through a Long Distance Program

This project supports the design of a Long Distance Program in agricultural economics and agribusiness. This project is based on Goal 2 of the DEG RFA: Develop and enhance educational services (including faculty development) to prepare students or faculty seeking a degree or certificate that is approved by the State or a regional accrediting body recognized by the Secretary of Education.

This project works on the Needs Areas such as Curricula Design, Materials Development, and Library Resources and Instruction Delivery Systems. This project will develop inter-institutional and inter-disciplinary cooperative linkages with the Department of Economics and the College of Business Administration (hereafter, CBA) of the institution and the Chamber of Marketing, Industry and Distribution of Food in order to develop sound online master degrees in agricultural economics and agribusiness. Hispanics are underrepresented in graduate student population in the U.S. (American Community Survey, 2015).

Developing Distance Education Capacity in Food and Agricultural Related Sciences

The Insular Institution will provide a resource base of at least 30 agriculture and food science related training materials for students, agents and the lifelong learners of the region through training lessons made available on-line.

Training programs based on tropical small island examples is not readily available. In addition, the training programs would add to the eXtension resource base. The institution requires a strong internet service to facilitate instructional sharing across the six (6) campuses. The project will provide web management assistance and improved connectivity at the two (2) most limited campuses. Through the improved internet services, the institution will be able to provide distance learning capacity to faculty and teachers of the local schooling system. For this, the project also designates scholarships for qualified professionals.

Innovative Educational Approaches to Addressing Climate Change in the Caribbean

This project will develop an innovative hybrid online/in-class course addressing climate change in the Caribbean. It will facilitate communication and collaboration among a multidisciplinary mix of faculty and outside experts working in consultation with the regional and local agencies working on climate change adaptation. The course will develop a cadre of students well versed in the issues of climate change and how agricultural, marine, and environmental sciences can help inform the development of adaptation strategies. These students will be prepared to help their communities respond and adapt to the impacts of climate change in the Caribbean. The course will be offered as an undergraduate and graduate level course, developed as a multidisciplinary and multidepartment collaboration with faculty at the institution in agriculture, marine, and environmental sciences. The course will be developed in consultation with leading subject matter experts across the U.S., including leading scientific organizations such as the American Society for the Advancement of Sciences. The course will be developed in interactive consultation with local and regional stakeholders. Fiscal Year 2017: Water Ambassador Program

This project seeks funding for two (2) years to create a Water Quality Ambassadors Pilot Program through Distance Education that promotes a synergy between researchers, youth in a public high school on and Institutions staff. STEM centered DE seminars and presentations will focus on active research so youth may understand issues related to water quality, technology, agriculture and nutrition and weather and climate. This proposal will bridge other projects into one (1) pilot project to advance STEM education for youth and create DE pilot program. Its connected to the Institutions Observatory which uses climate data to build models when the observatory telescope should be opened and closed, and to the Department of Agriculture which is building a set of similar stations for data collection and water management prediction. Youth will be trained in Citizen Science research.

Improving Distance Education

The supporting objectives of the proposed project are to:

- (1) train five (5) (representing 30 percent, 30%) faculty members in online education methods and technologies;
- (2) develop six (6) agricultural sciences online courses;
- (3) evaluate the effectiveness of online courses in advancing agricultural education at the institution;
- (4) educate teachers and other faculty members about online education methods and technologies; and
- (5) improve wireless access to all laboratory areas assigned to the Department of Agricultural Technology.

Developing Interactive Distance Education Curricula for Delivery with or without the Internet

This project will address the following four (4) objectives, as follows:

- (1) develop curricula for online delivery;
- (2) develop a portable LMS/Moodle server;
- (3) assisting Online Science and Math Course Development; and
- (4) support teaching students and teachers about technology in the classroom.

An online tropical arboriculture course will be developed that be delivered on a portable LMS server that does not require high-speed bandwidth. Lack of high-speed bandwidth is a bottleneck for delivering courses in the Western Pacific. Faculty in the Math and Science Programs at the Institution will be given technical support for developing online course materials.

Increase capacity in the field of food and agriculture science by providing resident instruction, curriculum, and teaching programs through distance learning education

The Institutions will use the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) National Institute of Food and Agriculture (NIFA) grant funding to accomplish its goal in placing food and agriculture science courses online. This will be the first time in the institutions history that food and agriculture science courses will be offered in an online environment. The courses are scheduled to be offered in the Fall 2018 semester through Spring 2020 semester.

USDA-NIFA grant funding will be used in the development of courses, recruitment and hiring of instructors, staff training, and procuring necessary supplies to successfully launch the online courses. The main objective of this project is to give students the option to enroll in online food and agriculture science courses while achieving college credit. Additionally, the development of online food and agriculture science courses may provide a gateway for students interested in pursuing a career in food and agriculture science.

Developing Distance Education (DE) in Food and Agricultural Related Sciences in the Insular Area

The project goals are to encourage use of DE and computer-lab equipment; enhance capacity of the institutions student lab and quality of instruction program, provide scholarships for students pursuing degrees in food and agricultural and related sciences, and to provide financial support for faculty and staff professional development. These objectives will help the institution meet its outcomes and overall NIFA objectives of increasing the number and diversity of students pursuing degrees in food and agricultural sciences, and enhancing the quality of postsecondary instruction to help meet current and future workplace needs. Fiscal Year 2018: For Fiscal Year (FY) 2018, it is projected that approximately 10-15 applications will be received, and approximately four (4) to five (5) awards will be made.

Specific data is not yet available. Pertinent data to be provided by Program at a future date.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: LCI PROPOSAL TO BUILD AGRICULTURE CAPACITY THROUGH REGIONAL EDUCATION AND OUTREACH INITIATIVES.

The project will administer a Large Scale Comprehensive Initiative that will invest in human capital and integrate education and outreach to assist rural a rural county in creating posterity to become self-sustaining, re-populating and economically thriving. The project will focus on:

- (1) creating educational equity for under-represented students through high school educational outreach and recruitment;
- (2) building leaders by integrating training within experiential learning;
- (3) building agriculture career pathways for high school students;
- (4) support agriculture business development through legal services, micro-credentialing and by building a regional farm and food asset map; and
- (5) leading and facilitating economic development efforts. Project goals will be accomplished by working closely with regional K-12 educators to expand agriculture educational opportunities through College in the High School, distance learning and targeted recruitment activities and focus on improving academic support services to increase retention among freshman agriculture students.

The project will train students engaging in community-based experiential learning projects to be effective leaders and will assist agriculture entrepreneurs to develop new products and/or businesses by providing training and legal and business development technical assistance.

INTEGRATING AGRICULTURAL EDUCATION AND OUTREACH TO INCREASE PROFITABILITY THROUGH LOCAL FOOD MARKETING CHANNELS

The overall purpose of this capacity building project is to develop a new Education Program that is built around a new instructional unit on local food marketing to train future agricultural business managers (students) and to develop a new Outreach Program that will train current agricultural business managers about local food marketing opportunities. This project leverages an interdisciplinary and collaborative relationship between the university sector, the business community and the private sector in an effort to advance the quality of education and outreach designed to remove the barriers in local food marketing channels and increase agricultural profitability. This is accomplished by

- (1) developing new curriculum to increase the College of Agriculture faculty and student knowledge of the profit opportunities in local food marketing channels,
- (2) using targeted outreach and training workshops to increase producer knowledge of local food marketing opportunities, and
- (3) developing and distributing a local food buyers guide to increase consumer knowledge of local food purchasing opportunities.

Providing local food marketing training to students/producers and creating a new local food buyers guide will expand the institutions capacity to assist future and current agricultural business managers to become more profitable and resilient.

BUILDING CAPACITY FOR CLIMATE CHANGE EDUCATION (CCE) AND EXPANDING RESEARCH OPPORTUNITIES IN RURAL COMMUNITIES

The primary objective is to incorporate climate change education in the curriculum for undergraduate and graduate agriculture classes in two (2) partnering. This will be achieved by means of developing new in-class and web-based course offerings. Specific course offerings will focus on the following priority areas:

- (1) Basic and advanced understanding of the science of climate;
- (2) Basic and advanced understanding of climate change;
- (3) Evaluating and measuring economic impacts of climate change on agriculture;
- (4) Policy issues in climate change and agriculture - U.S./ Global Market related impacts of climate change on agriculture and risk management.

A second objective is to build capacity in the partnering institutions for developing both face-to-face and online teaching interfaces to deliver specific course offerings related to climate change, and include professional development of faculty for both campuses especially in design, development, and delivery of online courses.

The third objective is to encourage undergraduate and graduate level student involvement in teaching and research related to understanding of the science of climate, and its impact on agriculture. This will also be extended to student research in the partnering institutions by conducting a willingness to pay survey study among students with a focus on financial implications for dealing with climate change.

Finally, the fourth objective is to introduce climate change education in high school curriculum in the respective areas of the collaborating institutes by means of courses/ web-based materials with a focus on climate and impacts of climate change on agriculture, and by conducting a two (2) to three (3) day workshop for stakeholders. This will broaden the dissemination of the outreach materials to a much broader audience. The ability to develop online materials that can be accessed by anyone will also help to further disseminate the information to a wider audience beyond the service area for each university.

BRIDGING THE GAP BETWEEN FARMERS AND CONSUMERS THROUGH RESEARCH, EDUCATION AND OUTREACH

This research, outreach, and education project is designed to achieve two (2) goals:

- (1) to bridge the gap between agricultural producers/farmers and consumers by analyzing how farmers markets in urban communities could play a role in improving both farmer livelihoods and the nutrition of low-income consumers with limited access to fresh fruits and vegetables; and
- (2) to strengthen food and agricultural research, education, and outreach through community engagement and Service-Learning.

Specifically, the project will achieve the following objectives:

- (1) Identify the factors that influence farmer behavior in Direct-to-Consumer (DTC) marketing channels, including their financial incentives, revenue targets for farmers markets, and why they choose certain DTC channels over others;
- (2) Assess the consumer preferences of low-income community residents and their willingness to pay for local fruits and vegetables at farmers markets; and
- (3) Expand educational opportunities in food and agricultural sciences by creating curricular materials and by promoting higher education and careers in food and agricultural sciences to underrepresented students and underserved communities.

BUILDING CAPACITY OF FOOD SCIENCE CLUSTER TO CONTROL PATHOGENS ON FRESH PRODUCE AT FARMERS' MARKETS

The number of foodborne illnesses linked to fresh produce has increased in the last few years, causing significant economic losses, which are especially damaging to small farmers. The specific objectives of this project are to:

- (1) Conduct a survey to determine consumer perceptions of food safety of locally grown fresh produce sold at farmers markets in two (2) States;
- (2) build a research capacity of a novel mobile automated electro-chemical activation system to control food borne pathogens on fresh produce from those States farmers markets; and
- (3) train small farmers and farmers market vendors through workshops and webinars on proper handling of fresh produce from field to market.

Training workshops for producers, handlers, and sellers of fresh produce will be held both in person and also as online and paper modules to be completed anytime. The main purpose of these workshops is to educate small produce farmers and other stakeholders on the use of good agricultural and management practices to minimize microbial food safety hazards. Fiscal Year 2017: Projects for FY 17 will not be awarded until the third quarter of the fiscal year due to the late receipt of appropriations. We anticipate projects will address current and emerging issues in agricultural research, Extension/outreach, and education. Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date. Fiscal Year 2018: This program is subject to congressional budget approval for FY 2018. At this time, the projected funding level is Zero ($0). However, if funding is provided, it is anticipated that similar projects will be awarded.

However, it is projected the number of applications will continue to increase into the future and funding may increase to more than $5 million.

Information is not yet available. Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

CRITERIA FOR SELECTING PROPOSALS:

2 CFR part 200, Uniform Administrative Requirements, Cost Principles, and Audit Requirements for Federal Awards and 2 CFR part 400 USDA's Uniform Administrative Requirements, Cost Principles, and Audit Requirements for Federal Awards apply to this program.

10.328 NATIONAL FOOD SAFETY TRAINING, EDUCATION, EXTENSION, OUTREACH, AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE COMPETITIVE GRANTS PROGRAM

National Food Safety Training, Education, Extension, Outreach, and Technical Assistance

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

Drug Cosmetic Act, 21 U.S.C. 391 et seq. Section 209 of FSMA added section 1011, Subsection (d) entitled National Food Safety Training, Education, Extension, Outreach and Technical Assistance Program. Paragraph (d)(1) requires the Secretary of Health and Human Services to enter into a Memorandum of Understanding or cooperative agreement with the Secretary of Agriculture to establish a competitive grant program within the National Institute of Food and Agriculture. This program will award competitive grants to organizations to provide food safety training, education, extension, outreach, and technical assistance to owners and operators of small and medium-sized farms, beginning farmers, socially-disadvantaged farmers, small processors, or small fresh fruit and vegetable merchant wholesalers. The authority for the National Food Safety Training, Education, Extension, Outreach, and Technical Assistance Competitive Grants Program is under Section 405 of the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (7 U.S.C. 7625).

OBJECTIVES:

The National Food Safety Training, Education, Extension, Outreach, and Technical Assistance Program will award grants that increase the understanding and adoption of established food safety standards, guidance, and protocols. Grants awarded through this program will be carried out in a manner that facilitates the integration of food safety standards and guidance with a variety of agricultural production and processing systems, including conventional, sustainable, organic, and conservation and environmental practices carried out by the eligible entities. The assistance provided by these programs shall be coordinated with and delivered in cooperation with similar services or assistance by other federal agencies or programs serving those eligible entities.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants (Discretionary)

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

The new National Food Safety Training, Education, Extension, Outreach, and Technical Assistance proposals are expected to describe Regional Centers that have a leading role in coordinating the development of FSMA-related training, education, and outreach programs and resources for small and medium-sized farms, beginning farmers, socially disadvantaged farmers, small processors, and/or small fresh fruit and vegetable merchant wholesalers. An outreach plan for conducting education and training to a cadre of regional FSMA trainers must be developed, along with an implementation plan for extending both training and technical assistance to the targeted audiences of farmers, processors and vendors in the respective regions.

In addition, the Regional Centers must work collaboratively with a National Coordination Center for Food Safety Training, Education, Extension, Outreach, and Technical Assistance to ensure that training curricula and resources cover core competencies across all funded regional centers, and to provide annual reports to NIFA on overall program objectives. Section 716 of the Consolidated Appropriation Act, 2014, limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. Therefore, when preparing budgets, applicants should limit their request for the recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of the institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

When NIFA is not the cognizant Federal agency. The applicant should use the current negotiated indirect cost rate established by its cognizant Federal agency (the agency that provides the most funds). If awarded, the applicant will be required to produce a negotiated indirect cost rate agreement from the cognizant agency in order to recover indirect costs. Applicants may request (i.e., budget) indirect costs using the lesser of: (a) the negotiated rate; or (b) the maximum statutory rate stated in the Request for Application, if any. If unable to obtain a negotiated rate from its cognizant agency, the applicant is not permitted indirect cost reimbursement. Rather, the applicant may only be reimbursed for allowable direct costs. Violation of Cost Accounting Standards is not permitted when re-budgeting or charging costs to awards.

When NIFA is the cognizant Federal agency. If the applicant does not have a negotiated rate, and NIFA is the cognizant agency, the applicant must calculate an indirect cost rate in order to request indirect costs. NIFAs indirect cost website provides several sample indirect cost rate calculations. NIFAs website is found at: http://nifa.usda.gov/business/indirect_cost_process.html.

During the application process, the applicant is not required to complete the entire indirect cost package identified on NIFAs website. Rather, the applicant need only calculate an indirect cost rate to serve as a basis for requesting indirect costs. If awarded, the applicant will be required to submit a complete Indirect Cost Proposal (ICP) package as explained on NIFAs indirect cost website.

Grantees may not use grant funds awarded under this authority to renovate or refurbish research, education, or extension space; purchase or install fixed equipment in such space; or the plan, repair, rehabilitate, acquire, or construction of buildings or facilities. Fully discretionary.

Credentials/Documentation:

The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

(i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;

(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: Prior year funding was provided to establish the national infrastructure in FY 2015 as the National Food Safety Training, Extension, Outreach, and Technical Assistance Program and in FY 2016 for the inaugural Food Safety Outreach Program including continuation awards.

There were 64 applications received of which 10 pilot, 10 community outreach, and 4 multistate education projects have been funded at the level of $4,758,326. Fiscal Year 2017: The anticipated amount available for Fiscal Year (FY) 2017 to support the Program is $4,770,750. We received 43 proposals: [ten (10) pilot, 17 community outreach and 16 multistate projects]. NIFA anticipates funding approximately 28 total awards.

The Food Safety Outreach Program was funded at $4.8 million in which it has an investment of projects focused on the delivery of customized training for owners and operators of small farms, food processors, small fruit and vegetable wholesalers, food hubs, farmers markets, terminal markets, and farms that lack access to food safety training and other educational opportunities.

The request for applications was published with a closing date of June 6, 2017. A total of 43 applications were received and were subjected to the peer panel review process. Twenty-eight (28) awards in the amount of up to $50K for each pilot award, up to $150K for each community award, and up to $400K for each multi-state award. We anticipate funding: six (6) Pilots, 12 Community & Outreach, and seven (7) Multi-state and education projects.

The estimated success rate for the program is approximately 40% -50%.

In FY 2017 the AFRI Food Safety Outreach Program invested in the following priority areas:

- (1) Pilot projects to support the development and implementation of new and potentially high-risk, high-impact food safety education and outreach programs in local communities.
- (2) Community Outreach Projects that focus on the growth and expansion of already-existing food safety education and outreach programs currently offered in local communities; and
- (3) Multistate Education and Training Projects that will develop and implement multi-county, state-wide, or multi-state food safety education and outreach programs. Fiscal Year 2018: The projected amount available for FY 2018 is approximately $4,761,150.

We anticipate receiving approximately 70 proposals and project funding success rate of approximately 25%.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: NIFA has built upon the national infrastructure with a focus on the delivery of customized training to a very specific target audience. In FY 2016, we solicited for 30 pilot, 10 community outreach, and 4 multistate education and training projects.

Example projects include the following:

SEEDS FOR INCREASING TRIBAL KNOWLEDGE IN FOOD SAFETY (PILOT)

This pilot project will work over the course of one (1) year to:

- (1) identify the specific training and education needs within Arizona-based Tribal communities focusing on the Gila River Indian Community (GRIC);
- (2) develop culturally sensitive food safety training materials; and
- (3) implement a food safety education and outreach program that meets the very specific needs of GRIC Tribal members and is also transferable to other Tribal entities across the State of Arizona.

HAWAII ROOTS FOOD SAFETY OUTREACH PROJECT (PILOT)

Kokua Kalihi Valley (KKV) Hawaii Roots Food Safety Outreach Project will work towards the goal of enabling Hawaii's small and beginning producers, processors, and wholesalers to enhance the safety of their food products (including complying with FSMA regulations), while maintaining profitability, sustainability, and equity. Additionally, project activities will help to build the long-term capacity of our local food system to disseminate best practices through robust culturally-tailored outreach strategies. Objectives assess the specific food safety education/training needs, learning preferences, and knowledge sharing networks of Hawaii's ethnically diverse, small and beginning farmers, processors, and wholesalers. Develop a community-based, FSMA-consistent food safety curriculum and pilot its delivery to 80 individuals through on-farm training sessions facilitating peer networking and knowledge sharing. Disseminate five (5) new food safety education/training materials and delivery methodology to ten (10) local stakeholder organizations and 300 individuals for broader implementation throughout Hawaii.

BRIDGING THE GAP: EFFECTIVE RISK MITIGATION THROUGH ADOPTION OF AGRICULTURAL WATER TREATMENT SYSTEMS (MULTI-STATE)

This project's goal is to equip growers with the knowledge to successfully implement water treatment systems on their farms. Fruit and vegetable growers are continually evaluating new practices to mitigate food safety risks in their operations. The finalization of the Produce Safety rule has set in motion many activities to help growers become compliant with this regulation. The project team has long-standing relationships with the produce growing community in our roles as extension specialists. They have received numerous questions and have had many discussions with growers who currently use surface water for irrigation or application of foliar sprays (e.g. herbicides and pesticides).

They understand that surface water can become contaminated with foodborne pathogens and do not want to rely upon monitoring via water testing or die-off rates to assure the safety of the produce they are growing. While there are in-line water treatments (chlorine, peroxyacetic acid, UV-light) to inactivate pathogens, there isn't a curriculum to educate growers about each technology; determine what would work best in their operation; validate effectiveness; and conduct ongoing verification activities (e.g. record-keeping). This project seeks to: Develop stakeholder-driven curriculum to educate growers of all sizes and background about agricultural water treatment systems; Share the curriculum with growers and train-the-trainers; and lastly evaluate the short-term and medium-term outcomes through knowledge gained and adoption of this technology. This curriculum would help growers of all sizes make educated decisions on how to mitigate risk for their farms within the context of the Produce Safety regulation. Additionally, the team will coordinate hosting a Project Directors meeting for Pilot, Community Outreach and Multi-state projects in year one (1) with the Southern Regional Center.

EXPANSION AND INTEGRATION OF FSMA EDUCATION AND OUTREACH FOR BEGINNING AND SOCIALLY DISADVANTAGED SUSTAINABLE ORGANIC PRODUCERS (COMM)

This project goal is to expand bilingual food safety education and outreach while integrating new guidelines established under the Food Safety Modernization Act (FSMA) for beginning and socially disadvantaged sustainable organic producers. The target audience requires access to customized Bilingual Land Based Experiential Food Safety Education, Training and TA that integrates FSMA guidelines to improve the success of their beginning farm businesses. Access includes services being offered in both English and Spanish by trusted educational partners in multiple formats. For beginning and socially disadvantaged farmers, an audience adapted and comprehensive approach to Food Safety Training is appropriate. This training (a proposed 3-week short course) would cover general topics such as Traceability and Worker Health and Hygiene, followed by Farm Reviews, Field Harvest and Packing, Packing Shed Facility, Storage and Transportation. This resource would also be incorporated into the ongoing onsite cohort practicum training and incubator TA, and also two (2) bilingual outreach and educational videos using course material and clips for all topics. This goal will be achieved through four (4) objectives:

- (1) enhance partnerships of local non-profit Viva Farms, a land-grant university, a State University County Extension and Washington State Department of Agriculture (WSDA);
- (2) develop, adapt and implement food safety education and outreach integrating FSMA guidelines that can be utilized nationally;
- (3) increase coordination and access to food safety education and outreach that removes barriers to participation of the target audience; and
- (4) increase food safety knowledge, skills and practices consistent with FSMA guidelines of target audience. Outreach and Promotion Plan.

Partners will coordinate bilingual outreach using social media, network partners, list serves, print and radio marketing to reach the greatest percentage of our target audience. Use existing curriculum and resources: We will utilize existing education and training material such as "Bridging the GAP's", "Handbook for Small and Direct Marketing Farms", and "Wholesale Success" to develop and deliver curriculum and make course materials and delivery bilingually accessible. Outcomes: The project is expected produce the following outputs:

- (1) increased and effective partnerships between non Viva Farms, WSU, WSDA, Regional Centers, NCC, USDA and FDA;
- (2) expansion, Development and delivery of new two (2) three-week short courses, and curriculum inclusion in ongoing practicum courses and Incubator TA;
- (3) increase in number of trainers with the knowledge and experience to effectively train our target audience during and after the grant period;
- (4) increased bilingual materials and resources available in several delivery methods including Spanish Versions of "Bridging the GAP's";
- (5) increase the number of target audience producers receiving education and improving knowledge, are committed to, or have implemented Food Safety Practices; and
- (6) two (2) Outreach and Educational Food Safety Videos. Adaptation and Availability of communities.

Other similar farming communities will be able to access, learn from and adapt their approaches as a result of this project. If we are able to achieve our goals and objectives with the close collaboration of our key partners, communities can look to our activities, outputs and outcomes for strategic planning. Fiscal Year 2017: In fiscal year 2017, NIFA will expand the goals of the food safety outreach program to reach additional pilot, community outreach and multi-state education projects.

To date, 43 applications were received in which six (6) pilots, 12 community outreach, and seven (7) multi-state education projects are projected for funding.

Example projects include the following:

Preventative Controls Training For Small Alabama Fruit and Vegetable Processors subject to FSMA (COMM)

The long-term goal for this project is to prepare at least 75 percent (75%) of "small" and "very small" Alabama produce processors (required to be compliant by 2017 and 2018, respectively) for the Preventive Controls portion of FSMA by expanding an existing food safety-training program, aligning with NIFA Community Outreach Project goals. A key component of the Food Safety Modernization Act (FSMA) is the Preventive Controls for Human Food rule, which is meant to ensure safe processing, packing, and holding of U.S. food products. Among those affected by the rule are off-farm produce processors, who have historically had limited oversight and for whom Preventive Controls regulations may be unfamiliar and confusing. The goals for this program are to:

- (1) reaching out to all small and very small produce processors in Alabama who are required to establish a Preventive Controls program;
- (2) utilizing existing curriculum and certified instructors to teach 12 Preventive Controls courses at locations throughout Alabama, which will be free for processors;
- (3) evaluating participants understanding and retention of course material through built-in course assessments and follow-up surveys; and
- (4) overseeing nine (9) ACES regional Extension agents (REAs) as they work one-on-one with the produce processors, providing extra assistance in meeting Preventive Controls guidelines if needed.

The team will leverage strong relationships with organizations such as the Alabama Department of Public Health to connect with processors and use their combined wealth of food safety training experience to effectively lead the training sessions.

Revision And Expansion Of The Florida "Build Your Own Farm Food Safety Manual" Program

Extension collaborators in Florida have been offering a Build Your Own Farm Food Safety Manual workshop since 2010 to assist small and beginning farmers develop food safety plans to improve food safety practices and expand market access through meeting third-party audit standards. In 2011, the Food Safety Modernization Act (FSMA) was signed into law which gave FDA new authority to regulate on-farm produce safety. These training materials were updated upon the initial passage of FSMA but well before the proposed Produce Safety Rule (PSR) was released and they have not undergone significant revisions since 2011. Due to the continued demand for the Florida Build Your Own Farm Food Safety Manual workshops along with the impending implementation of the PSR, there is a clear need to revise the now severely outdated curriculum to aid in the development of FSMA-compliant food safety documentation and practices. We propose to:

- (1) revise the existing workshop materials and develop two training demonstration sites,
- (2) deliver the revised training to expanded audiences, and
- (3) develop evaluation tools and assess short- and medium-term learning and impact.

Participants will develop an improved understanding of foundational food safety principles and practices that support the production of safe food, as well as FSMA compliance, through the visualization of key food safety issues discovered through hands-on, problem-based exercises at a demonstration farm and packinghouse and they will be equipped with the framework of a personalized farm food safety plan to organize records required by the PSR and meet buyer requirements. Fiscal Year 2018: In addition to continuing to solicit pilot, community outreach and multistate projects. A stakeholder listening session was held in January, 2017 for consideration of future recommendations to the FY 2018 program priority. As a result, we intend to incorporate a technical assistance component that will provide support to small and mid-sized producers and processors.

CRITERIA FOR SELECTING PROPOSALS:

10.329 CROP PROTECTION AND PEST MANAGEMENT

COMPETITIVE GRANTS PROGRAM

Crop Protection and Pest Management (CPPM)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

The Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2014 (H.R. 3547) provided NIFA with funding for competitive grants programs authorized under section 406 of the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (7 U.S.C. 7626), including the Crop Protection and Pest Management Program. These funds are available to support integrated, multifunctional agricultural research, extension, and education activities. Subject to the availability of appropriations to carry out this program, the Secretary may award grants to colleges and universities (as defined by section 1404 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (NARETPA) (7 U.S.C. 3103)), as amended, on a competitive basis for projects that address priorities in United States agriculture and involve integrated research, education, and extension activities, as determined by the Secretary in consultation with the National Agricultural Research, Extension, Education, and Economics Advisory Board. , 7 U.S.C 7626.

OBJECTIVES:

CPPM was created to consolidate five previous NIFA programs with related purposes. CPPM will provide funding to address critical state, regional and national integrated pest management (IPM) needs to ensure food security and effectively respond to other major societal challenges.

The CPPM program supports projects that address high priority IPM challenges with coordinated state, regional, and national research and extension efforts. The impact of these research and extension efforts will be increased by the establishment of communication networks and stakeholder participation in setting priorities.

Effective FY 2014, the CPPM program provided support for projects to conduct applied research and development, extension implementation, and regional coordination.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants (Discretionary)

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

The new CPPM program provides support for three linked programs that emphasize research (discovery), extension (translation) of that knowledge, and enhanced coordination, collaboration and communications among related CPPM programs and grantees. The three program areas are:

Applied Research and Development Program Area (ARDP)

To enhance the development and implementation of innovative, ecologically-based, sustainable IPM tactics and strategies that address regional and/or national IPM priorities.

Extension Implementation Program Area (EIP)

To assure the implementation of IPM through extension activities and coordination with other EIP grantees and other CPPM program areas based on defined state, multi-state, regional, national, or international needs.

Regional Coordination Program Area (RCP)

To increase coordination and improve efficiency of IPM research and extension efforts; facilitate collaboration across states and disciplines; and promote further development and adoption of IPM through regional pest management information networks, collaborative team building and broad-based stakeholder participation. Section 716 of the Consolidated Appropriation Act, 2014, limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. Therefore, when preparing budgets, you should limit your request for the recovery of indirect costs to the lesser of your institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 30 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

When NIFA is not the cognizant Federal agency. The applicant should use the current negotiated indirect cost rate established by its cognizant Federal agency (the agency that provides the most funds). If awarded, the applicant will be required to produce a negotiated indirect cost rate agreement from the cognizant agency in order to recover indirect costs. Applicants may request (i.e., budget) indirect costs using the lesser of: (a) the negotiated rate; or (b) the maximum statutory rate stated in the Request for Application, if any. If unable to obtain a negotiated rate from its cognizant agency, the applicant is not permitted indirect cost reimbursement. Rather, the applicant may only be reimbursed for allowable direct costs. Violation of Cost Accounting Standards is not permitted when re-budgeting or charging costs to awards.

When NIFA is the cognizant Federal agency. If the applicant does not have a negotiated rate, and NIFA is the cognizant agency, the applicant must calculate an indirect cost rate in order to request indirect costs. NIFAs indirect cost website provides several sample indirect cost rate calculations. NIFAs website is found at: http://nifa.usda.gov/business/indirect_cost_process.html.

During the application process, the applicant is not required to complete the entire indirect cost package identified on NIFAs website. Rather, the applicant need only calculate an indirect cost rate to serve as a basis for requesting indirect costs. If awarded, the applicant will be required to submit a complete Indirect Cost Proposal (ICP) package as explained on NIFAs indirect cost website.

Grant funds awarded under this authority may not be used to renovate or refurbish research, education, or extension space; purchase or install fixed equipment in such space; or the plan, repair, rehabilitate, acquire, or construction of buildings or facilities. Fully discretionary.

Applicant Eligibility:

Colleges and universities (as defined in section 1404 of NARETPA) (7 U.S.C. 3103) are eligible to submit applications for the CPPM program. For the purposes of this program, the terms college and university mean an educational institution in any state which (1) admits as regular students only persons having a certificate of graduation from a school providing secondary education, or the recognized equivalent of such a certificate; (2) is legally authorized within such state to provide a program of education beyond secondary education; (3) provides an educational program for which a bachelors degree or any other higher degree is awarded; (4) is a public or other nonprofit institution; and (5) is accredited by a nationally recognized accrediting agency or association. Applications also may be submitted by 1994 Land-Grant Institutions (see Part VIII, E), HSACUs, and research foundations maintained by eligible colleges or universities.

Section 7206 of the Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002 amended section 406(b) of AREERA to add the 1994 Land-Grant Institutions as eligible to apply for grants under this authority.

Credentials/Documentation:

The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

RELATED PROGRAMS:

10,200 Grants for Agricultural Research, Special Research Grants

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: Awards in Fiscal Year (FY) 2016 included projects for three (3) program areas in the Crop Protection and Pest Management Program: the Regional Coordination Program Area, the Extension Implementation Program Area, and the Applied Research and Development Program Area.

The following are examples of funded projects:

(1): Regional Coordination Program Area Award. A $1 million award, A Western IPM Center Led by California, Oregon, and Arizona, will bring together the expertise needed to successfully address high-priority pest-management issues confronting farmers, pest managers, communities, and others in the West. The Center obtains ongoing stakeholder input on IPM needs and provides extensive regional coordination for addressing IPM priorities and integrating IPM research, extension, and education in the West. The Center will continue to facilitate partnerships among researchers, pest managers, communities, and others in the West.

(2): Extension Implementation Program Area Award. A $186,000 continuation award, Crop Protection and Pest Management Extension Implementation for South Carolina to Advance Stakeholder Adoption in Key Commodities, will focus on economically important commodity and IPM priority areas for South Carolina including IPM in Agronomic Crops (corn, cotton, soybean and sorghum) and IPM in Specialty Crops (peaches, strawberries and vegetables including those produced on limited resource and minority-owned farms, and nursery crops). The main program focus will be on Extension activities to transfer scientific research and new knowledge to state stakeholders through a combination of formal and informal training methods, including field demonstrations and experiential learning.

(3): Applied Research and Development Program Area Award. A $323,491 award, Developing and Delivering IPM Strategies to the Rapidly Expanding U.S. Hop Industry, will develop and implement IPM strategies against pests and diseases for hop growers across the United States.

(4): An Applied Research and Development Program Area Award. A $324,880 award, Remote Scouting for Soybean Pests Using Spectral Reflectance and Unmanned Aerial Systems, will develop "remote scouting" for soybean pests by utilizing spectral sensors deployed on UAS to assess and distinguish pest infestations in soybean fields.

(5): An Applied Research and Development Program Area Award. A $324,940 award, Development of Integrated Pest Management Strategies for Commercial Dairies: Formulating Dairy Total Mixed Rations that are Resistant to Bird Depredation, develop a new integrated pest management tool to mitigate invasive European starling damage in commercial dairies. Fiscal Year 2017: Awards for projects for Fiscal Year (FY) 2017 are anticipated to include projects on integrated pest management topics for the three (3) program areas in the Crop Protection and Pest Management Program: Regional Coordination Program Area, Extension Implementation Program Area, and the Applied Research and Development Program Area.

NIFA anticipates awarding the four (4) continuation awards for the Regional Coordination Program Area as described above to fund Regional Integrated Pest Management Centers at approximately $1,000,000 each. NIFA will provide pertinent data of these awards at a future date.

NIFA anticipates competitively awarding approximately 53 continuation awards for the Extension Implementation Program Area at approximately $300,000 each.

NIFA anticipates awarding 15 new competitive proposals for the Applied Research and Development Program Area for an approximate total of $4.1 million. These awards will fund integrated pest management research (single-function), research-led, or extension-led projects. Applied Research (single-function) projects will develop innovative, ecologically-based, sustainable IPM strategies and systems that address regional and/or national IPM priorities. Research-led projects enhance the adoption of innovative, ecologically-based, sustainable IPM strategies and systems. Extension-led projects extend implementation of innovative, ecologically-based, sustainable IPM strategies and systems by IPM practitioners and growers.

NIFA will provide pertinent data of these awards at a future date. Fiscal Year 2018: Awards for projects for Fiscal Year (FY) 2018 are anticipated to include projects on integrated pest management topics for three (3) program areas included in the Crop Protection and Pest Management Program: Regional Coordination Program Area, Extension Implementation Program Area, and the Applied Research and Development Program Area.

NIFA anticipates awarding the four (4) competitive awards for the Regional Coordination Program Area as described above to fund four (4) Regional Integrated Pest Management Centers at approximately $1,000,000 each.

NIFA anticipates awarding approximately 53 continuation awards for the Extension Implementation Program Area at approximately $300,000 each.

NIFA anticipates soliciting new competitive proposals for the Applied Research and Development Program Area for an approximate total of $4.1 million.

These awards, projected at approximately 13-20, will fund integrated pest management research (single-function), research-led, or extension-led projects. Applied Research (single-function) projects will develop innovative, ecologically-based, sustainable IPM strategies and systems that address regional and/or national IPM priorities. Research-led projects enhance the adoption of innovative, ecologically-based, sustainable IPM strategies and systems. Extension-led projects extend implementation of innovative, ecologically-based, sustainable IPM strategies and systems by IPM practitioners and growers.

Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

RELATED PROGRAMS:

10.310 Agriculture and Food Research Initiative (AFRI)

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: 1. Impact of Microbial Inoculants on the Quality and Fermentation Stability of Alfalfa Round-bale Baleage

Alfalfa is a high protein and highly digestible forage for beef cattle producers and dairies. This project looks at microbial inoculant technologies to improve fermentation of alfalfa grass baleage to improve the appeal of alfalfa to beef and dairy producers. To date the program has successfully trained local producers on improving the establishment of alfalfa acreage as evidenced by increased skill by producers in producing high quality alfalfa and alfalfa-mixed baleage. In addition the team has trained county agents in successful management practices. Three (3) field days have been held.

2. Forage Quality Improvement in Reduced-Lignin Alfalfa Monoculture and Alfalfa-Grass Binary Mixtures

Alfalfa provides multiple ecosystem services in addition to being an important rotation crop. Reduced lignin alfalfa is a more digestible feed and therefore will increase the value of alfalfa as a feed. This project will look at using new varieties of reduced lignin alfalfa grown in both monoculture and mixed stands. To date this study has established their plots of alfalfa in addition to mixed stand plots with orchardgrass and meadow fescue. In addition, one (1) sample cutting was harvested and photos have been taken to analyze grass stands. The team has also begun doing educational extension presentations at forage specific meetings in throughout New York State.

3. Potato Leafhopper Threshold Revised for Alfalfa Host Resistance and Alfalfa Grass Mixtures

Potato Leafhopper is a pest that has a high negative impact on alfalfa crops and therefore alfalfa economics. This study will look at resistant varieties and potential mixtures that can decrease damage by leafhopper. In addition, this study will also create guidelines that establish threshold values so producers will know when it is economically advantageous to apply insecticide. This study will look at leafhopper in three (3) states: Maryland Ohio and Wisconsin. To date, the project has established field plots in all locations. Samples from the first year have been collected but no results have been attained yet.

4. Reestablishing IPM Recommendations for Aphids in Alfalfa Hay in the Low Desert.

Currently aphids are a serious pest for alfalfa, but most of the time broad spectrum insecticides are used to control them. An economic threshold of aphid has never been established or alternatives looked at in the low desert. This project will establish an economic threshold and investigate the efficacy of selective insecticide management for aphids in alfalfa. Guidelines have been shared with growers and the team sees them using these management practices. Survey data showed 25% of producers are using targeted insecticides relative to broad spectrum. In addition, the team identified a natural biological control agent, and entomopathogenic fungi that infects aphids, and are starting to develop communication about this.

5. Developing Molecular Markers for Enhancing Resistance to Drought and High Salinity in Alfalfa

Alfalfa, the fourth most widely produced crop in the US, yield is limited by water. Much of the crop is irrigated and with climate change effects, adaptation to drought and salt tolerance will be beneficial traits. This project will identify germplasm with drought and salt resistance and develop populations with a high percentage of resistance. The project has identified 20 traits of interest and evaluated. Greenhouse plants were tested for four (4) traits related to salt stress: Dry weight, plant height, chlorophyll content and stomatal conductance and plant performance was assessed. 24 potential molecular markers have been identified that will be used for marker-assisted breeding in the future. Fiscal Year 2017: 1. Developing Regionally-adapted, resilient alfalfa germplasm pools

This project develops germplasm pools selected to improve various traits and targeted to Northern and Southern regions of the US. The pools give breeders access to unique genetic material. Last, the team will access this diversity and share results through field days.

2. Proximal and remote sensing of alfalfa canopies for early detection of insect stress and rapid integrated pest management decision making

This project looks at detecting alfalfa pest injury early through radiation technology. Specific focus is on the potato leafhopper. Technologies will be used to locate stress which will allow for targeted management.

3. Determining Genetic Factors that Influence Forage Quality in Alfalfa

This project uses Total Track Neutral Detergent Fiber Digestibility (TTNDFD) to determine the utilization and digestibility of hay by dairy animals. TTNDFD will be assessed on 200 selected alfalfa varieties and/or accessions from throughout the world. Quality differences in the varieties will be determined and linked to the plant genetics. Information on the best varieties will be disseminated to growers and plant breeding programs.

4. Developing an attractant for Lygus hesperus derived from host plant volatile compounds

This project will improve alfalfa management practices by studying the chemical communication between alfalfa and an emerging pest, L. hesperus. The project will develop alfalfa stink bug attractants by isolating a biological compound. The approach will decrease the use of pesticide used in alfalfa seed production.

5. Development of grazing recommendations and on-farm decision tools for managing alfalfa-grass mixtures in the Southeastern US

This project looks at alfalfa management in the Southeast. Strategies for grazing and decision tools to support efficient forage utilization and stand survival in mixed alfalfa pastures will be developed. Alfalfa can help producers improve efficiency without expanding acreage. Fiscal Year 2018: This program is subject to congressional budget approval for FY 2018. At this time, the projected funding level is Zero ($0). However, if funding is provided, it is anticipated that similar projects will be awarded.

Data is not yet available. Pertinent information will be provided by program at a future date once received.

10.331 FOOD INSECURITY NUTRITION INCENTIVE GRANTS PROGRAM

Food Insecurity Nutrition Incentive Program (FINI)

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

The Agricultural Act of 2014 (Pub. L. 113-79) amended Section 4405 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (7 U.S.C. 7517) and established the competitive grant program, the Food Insecurity Nutrition Incentive program (FINI).

OBJECTIVES:

The Food Insecurity Nutrition Incentive (FINI) grant program is a competitive program. Projects funded under this program provide incentives to low-income consumers participating in the supplemental nutrition assistance program (SNAP) to purchase fruits and vegetables at the point of sale. The projects supported by this program have the support of State agencies and include use of effective and efficient benefit redemption technologies that can serve as a replicable model for benefit redemption.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

The FINI grant program projects will provide incentives to low-income consumers participating in SNAP to increase their purchase of fruits and vegetables. These projects will be evaluated for their success in increasing the purchase of fruits and vegetables and improving nutrition and health outcomes. Proposals must have the support of the State agency, provide incentives at the point of sale, and include effective and efficient technologies for benefit redemption systems that could be replicated.

All FINI grant program recipients will be required to participate in a comprehensive FINI program evaluation conducted by an independent evaluator and conduct a self-evaluation of their own project. The applicant shall perform a substantive portion of the project and no more than 50 percent of FINI Projects (FP), FINI Pilot Projects (FPP), and FINI Large Scale Projects (FLSP) as determined by budget expenditures, may be subawarded.

NIFA will allow applicants to indicate in their proposal if they intend to subgrant more than 50% of the award. This deviation will require NIFA approval.

Projects may divide their budget allocations between partners as it fits their work plan. (For additional knowledge or expertise that is not available within the applicant organization, funds for expert consultation may be included in the All Other Direct Costs section of the proposed budget.)

When preparing budgets, applicants should limit their request for the recovery of indirect costs to the official negotiated indirect cost rate or the de minimis rate of 10% of modified total direct costs (MTDC).

Any non-Federal entity that has never received a negotiated indirect cost rate may elect to charge a de minimis rate of 10% of modified total direct costs (MTDC). (2 C.F.R. 200.414(f)).

When NIFA is not the cognizant Federal agency. The applicant should use the current negotiated indirect cost rate established by its cognizant Federal agency (the agency that provides the most funds). If awarded, the applicant will be required to produce a negotiated indirect cost rate agreement from the cognizant agency in order to recover indirect costs. Applicants may request (i.e., budget) indirect costs using the lesser of: (a) the negotiated rate; or (b) the maximum statutory rate stated in the RFA, if any. If unable to obtain a negotiated rate from its cognizant agency, the applicant is not permitted indirect cost reimbursement. Rather, the applicant may only be reimbursed for allowable direct costs. Violation of Cost Accounting Standards is not permitted when re-budgeting or charging costs to awards.

When NIFA is the cognizant Federal agency. If the applicant does not have a negotiated rate, and NIFA is the cognizant agency, the applicant must calculate an indirect cost rate in order to request indirect costs. NIFAs indirect cost website provides several sample indirect cost rate calculations. NIFAs website is found at: http://nifa.usda.gov/business/indirect_cost_process.html.

During the application process, the applicant is not required to complete the entire indirect cost package identified on NIFAs website. Rather, the applicant need only calculate an indirect cost rate to serve as a basis for requesting indirect costs. If awarded, the applicant will be required to submit a complete Indirect Cost Proposal (ICP) package, as explained on NIFAs indirect cost website

In the case of a for-profit entity, the non-Federal share of the award cannot include services of an employee, including salaries paid or expenses covered by the employer.

Applicant Eligibility:

Eligible entities include governmental agencies and nonprofit organizations.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Eligible entities include governmental agencies and nonprofit organizations.

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: Double UP Food Bucks Flint: The Double Up Food Bucks in Flint, continues to enable any fruit, vegetable or milk purchase with Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) benefits to earn customers matching Double Up Food bucks that can be spent on additional fresh produce. The new transaction technology pioneered in Flint is allowing shoppers to carry their benefits on a Double Up card between the farmers market and participating stores in Flint. This technology is being expanded to additional sites that will launch in Flint in 2017, as well as two (2) new regions statewide. From June 1, 2016 through June 30th, 2017, in Flint, SNAP customers have brought home $277,689 worth of additional fresh fruits and vegetables. A 141% increase compared to the same time-period a year earlier. Fiscal Year 2017: The fresh Checks for Fresh Produce in the Takoma/Langley Crossroads Food Insecurity Nutrition Incentive (FINI) Project aims to bring affordable, fresh fruits and vegetables to the Takoma/Langley Crossroads community, a primarily immigrant, low-income area that straddles Maryland's Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties just outside Washington, D.C. The goal of the project is to increase purchases of locally grown, culturally appropriate, fresh fruits and vegetables among 1,000 SNAP shoppers at the established Crossroads Farmers Market and in the markets growing Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) program through expansion of the Fresh Checks incentive program. By providing incentives to double the amount of produce low-income shoppers can buy, they will increase consumption of fruits and vegetables, leading to improved nutrition, and thereby, health.

The FARMACY Health Improvement Program will provide vouchers at a dollar per day per household member to qualifying patients at the MCHC clinic facilities to be redeemed at local farmers markets for the purchase of fresh, locally-produced fruits and vegetables in Southeast Kentucky. In order to qualify for the program, patients will have one (1) of the following medical conditions: pregnant; juvenile onset diabetes; adult onset diabetes; hypertension; and/or obesity.

The program is also working closely with the Bell County University of Kentucky agricultural extension office. Fiscal Year 2018: Information is not yet available. Pertinent details to be provided by Program at a future date.

Housing Act of 1949, as amended, Sections 514 and 516, Public Laws 89-117 and 89-754, 42 U.S.C 1484 and 1486.

OBJECTIVES:

To provide decent, safe, and sanitary low-rent housing and related facilities for domestic farm laborers.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

GUARANTEED/INSURED LOANS; PROJECT GRANTS

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

The loans and grants may be used for construction, repair, or purchase of year-round or seasonal housing; acquiring the necessary land and making improvements on land for housing; and developing related support facilities including central cooking and dining facilities, small infirmaries, laundry facilities, day care centers, other essential equipment and facilities or recreation areas. Funds may also be used to pay certain fees and interest incidental to the project. Restrictions on the use of funds are: Developers' fees, resident services, cost of unrelated commercial space, costs associated with other lenders/grantors. Housing financed with labor housing loan or grant funds must be occupied by domestic farm laborers, individuals who derive a substantial portion of their income from farm labor, and their families. The occupants must also be a U.S. citizen or permanent resident.

Applicant Eligibility:

Loans are available to farmers, family farm partnership, family farm corporations, or an association of farmers. Loans and grants are available to States, Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, political subdivisions of States, broad-based public or private nonprofit organizations, federally recognized Indian Tribes and non-profit corporations of farm workers. Grants are available to eligible applicants only when there is a pressing need and when it is doubtful that such facilities could be provided unless grant assistance is available.

Beneficiary Eligibility:

A domestic farm laborer is any person who receives a substantial portion of his/her income as a laborer on a farm in the United States and is either (1) a citizen of the United States, or (2) has been legally admitted for permanent residency.

Credentials/Documentation:

The applicant must furnish factual evidence of the following: (a) The number of domestic farm laborers currently being used in the area; (b) the kind of labor performed; (c) the future need for domestic farm labor in the area; (d) the kind, condition, and adequacy of housing presently used for such labor; (e) ownership of presently occupied housing; (f) ability of workers to pay necessary rent; and (g) with the exception of State and local public agencies, be unable to provide housing from its own resources or credit on terms and conditions that would enable the applicant to provide labor housing. Costs will be determined in accordance with 7 CFR part 3015 or 3016 for State and local governments. 2 CFR 200, Subpart E - Cost Principles applies to this program.

Preapplication Coordination:

Preapplication coordination is required. An environmental impact statement is required for this program. This program is excluded from coverage under E.O. 12372.

Application Procedures:

2 CFR 200, Uniform Administrative Requirements, Cost Principles, and Audit Requirements for Federal Awards applies to this program. The Section 514/516 Program is awarded through Notice of Solicitation of Applications (NOSA) announced in the Federal Register.

Award Procedure:

Applications will be scored on the following factors: (1) The presence and extent of leveraged assistance for the units that will serve RHS income-eligible tenants at basic rents comparable to those if RHS provided full financing, computed as a percentage of the RHS total development cost. A minimum of ten percent leveraged assistance is required to earn points; however, less than ten percent and the proposal includes donated land, two points will be awarded for the donated land, (0 to 20 points); (2) Seasonal, temporary, migrant housing (5 points for up to and including 50 percent of the units; 10 points for 51 percent or more); National Office initiative will be based on the presence of and extent to which a tenant services plan exists that clearly outlines services that will be provided to the residents of the proposed project. Two points will be awarded for each resident service included in the tenant services plan up to a maximum of 10 points (0 to 10 points). Application selection process: (1) States will review and score the applications and submit a list of applications in rank and point score order to the National Office; (2) the National Office will rank applications on a nation-wide basis and will advise States of the results.

Deadlines:

Contact the headquarters or regional office, as appropriate, for application deadlines.

Range of Approval/Disapproval Time:

From 60 to 90 days. RHS uses a two-stage application process for the Farm Labor Housing Program. First, applicants submit preapplications, which are used to determine preliminary eligibility and feasibility. RHS then invites some applicants to submit formal applications. Section 514/516 funds are divided between off-farm housing and on-farm housing. The off-farm program provides loans and grants to organizations that assist farm workers at off-farm locations with no restrictions that workers be employed on a particular farm. Under new regulations effective June 1999, preapplications for the off-farm program funds must be submitted in response to a Notice of Solicitation of Applications (NOSA) published in the Federal Register every year. RHS scores the preapplications, using a ranking process to determine which applicants will be invited to submit formal applications. The on-farm program makes loans to eligible farmers (or a group of farmers) to provide Housing, usually for their own laborers. Preapplications for on-farm units, or for repair and rehabilitation of existing off-farm units, may be submitted at any time and are processed on a first-come, first-served basis.

Appeals:

From 15 to 30 days. A person or organization who is directly and adversely affected by an administrative decision by Rural Development should follow the procedures found in 7 CFR part 1900, Subpart B of "Rural Development Administrative Appeal Procedures."

Renewals:

Not Applicable.

Formula and Matching Requirements:

Statutory formulas are not applicable to this program.

Matching Requirements: Percent: 10%. Section 516 grants for off-farm FLH may not exceed the lesser of 90 percent of the total development cost (TDC) as provided in 7 CFR 3560.562(c)(1).

MOE requirements are not applicable to this program.

Length and Time Phasing of Assistance:

Loans are usually made for 33 years at 1 percent interest. Grants may cover up to 90 percent of development cost. The balance may be (and usually is) a Section 514 loan. RHS rental assistance (RA) subsidy can be used to limit tenant payments to 30 percent of their income. RA can be used as an operating subsidy for projects or units with Section 516 funding that serve migrants. It is RHS policy to attempt to use less than a 90 percent grant when RA is utilized. Method of awarding/releasing assistance: lump sum.

Reports:

Not Applicable.

Audits:

In accordance with the provisions of 2 CFR 200, Subpart F - Audit Requirements, non-Federal entities that expend financial assistance of $750,000 or more in Federal awards will have a single or a program-specific audit conducted for that year. USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

Loans can be used to construct, or to purchase and substantially rehabilitate rental or cooperative housing or to develop manufactured housing projects. Housing as a general rule will consist of multi-units with two or more family units and any appropriately related facilities. Funds may also be used to provide approved recreational and service facilities appropriate for use in connection with the housing and to buy and improve the land on which the buildings are to be located. Loans may not be made for nursing, special care, or institutional-type homes. Grants are in the form of rental assistance for some units within the underwritten property. The term for an initial Section 515 loan is 30 years with a 50-year amortization period. However, the term for subsequent loans and loans for special types of properties, such as manufactured housing, may be made for a shorter term based on the projects expected useful life. Each loan is made at a note rate established by the Agency as prescribed in RD Instruction 440.1. Borrowers approved for initial and/or subsequent loans receive interest credit, which reduces the effective interest rate for the Agency's financing, thereby lowering the property's rents. In return for this below-market rate financing, the borrower agrees to lease the projects rental units to income-eligible households at rents approved by the Agency. Borrowers operate on a nonprofit or limited-profit basis.

Applicant Eligibility:

The following basic formula criteria are to allocate program loan funds to various States: $(A \times .50 + B \times .50) \times \text{funds available} = \text{State basic formula allocation}$. Where "A" is State's percentage of national number of rural occupied units; and "B" is State's percentage of national number of rural households below 50 percent of area median income. The formula for grants is: $(A \times 1/3 + B \times 1/3 + C \times 1/3) \times \text{funds available} = \text{State basic allocation}$. Where "C" is State's percentage of national rural population 62 years of age and older. The data source for each of these criteria are based on the latest census data available. MOE requirements are not applicable to this program.

A grant will not exceed 70 percent of the total fiscal year funds that a qualifying State requires to operate and administer its mediation program, or $500,000, whichever is less. Eligible costs are limited to those that are reasonable and necessary to carry out the mission of the State's mediation program and may include activities related to the intake and scheduling of cases, the provision of background and selected information regarding the mediation process, financial advisory and counseling services, and the mediation session.

OBJECTIVES:

Risk Management Agencies (RMA) mission is serving Americas agricultural producers through effective, market-based risk management tools and solutions to strengthen the economic stability of agricultural producers and rural communities. To carry out this mission, RMA operates and manages the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation (FCIC). FCIC provides crop insurance and risk management strategies to American producers. Private sector insurance providers, approved by FCIC, sell and service the policies. RMA develops and/or approves premium rates, administers the premium and expense subsidies, approves and support products, and reinsures the Approved Insurance Providers (AIPs). In addition, RMA sponsor educational programs and seminars on risk management.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

INSURANCE

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation (FCIC) is a wholly owned government corporation created February 16, 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1501.) The program was amended by Public Law (P.L.) 96-365, dated September 26, 1980, to provide for nationwide expansion of a comprehensive crop insurance plan. FCIC is administered by the Risk Management Agency (RMA), and promotes the national welfare by improving the economic stability of agriculture through a secure system of crop insurance. FCIC provides an actuarially sound risk management program that protects against agricultural production losses due to unavoidable causes such as drought, excessive moisture, hail, wind, hurricane, tornado, lightning, and insects. In addition to these causes, revenue insurance programs are available under which producers of certain crops are protected against loss of revenue stemming from low prices, poor yields, or a combination of both. Federal crop insurance is available to producers through private insurance companies that market and service policies and also share in the risk. Thus, the program delivery is a joint effort between the Federal government and the private insurance industry. Federal government subsidizes insurance premiums at a variety of levels depending on level of insurance coverage.

(a) Renewable Resources Extension Act

The Renewable Resources Extension Act of 1978 (P.L. 95-306, 92 Stat. 349, 16 U.S.C. 1671 et seq.) provides for an expanded and comprehensive extension program for forest and rangeland renewable resources. The majority of the appropriated funds are distributed to eligible institutions based on a formula that considers the geographic extent, ecosystem productivity, economic contribution, and population for each state.

Since FY 2002, a small amount of these funds have been used to fund National Focus Fund Projects which have served to expand comprehensive extension programs for forest and rangeland renewable resources on a national, regional, or multi-institutional scale through better program coordination, innovative technologies, and extension models that can be easily duplicated.

(b) Rural Health and Safety
The authority for this program is under Section 502 (i) of Title V of the Rural Development Act of 1972, as amended (7 U.S.C. 2662). The Omnibus Appropriations Act, 2009 (Pub. L. 111-8) appropriates funds under Division A, Title I. The Rural Health and Safety Education Competitive Program addresses the Individual and Family Health Education component of the authorization.

(c) Extension Services at the 1994 Institutions
This program is authorized under Section 534(b) of the Equity in Educational Land-Grant Status Act of 1994 (7 U.S.C. 201 note), as amended by the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (AREERA) (7 U.S.C. 7601). This section amends Section 3 of the Act of May 8, 1914 (Smith-Lever Act) (7 U.S.C. 341 et seq.), as amended. Under this authority, appropriated funds are to be awarded to the 1994 Land-Grant Institutions (hereinafter referred to as 1994 institutions) for Extension work and funds are to be distributed on the basis of a competitive application process.

(d) Grants to Youth Serving Institutions
Title IV of the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (7 U.S.C. 7630) authorized the Secretary of Agriculture to make grants to the Girl Scouts of the United States of America (GSUSA), the Boy Scouts of America (BSA), the National 4-H Council (4-H Council), and the National FFA Organization (FFA). Section 7309 of the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act (FCEA) of 2008 reauthorized 7 U.S.C. 7630, which was also amended to provide additional flexibility in content delivery to each organization receiving funds and to allow recipients to redistribute all or part of the funds to individual councils or local chapters without further need of approval from the Secretary. In FY 2009, Terms and Conditions of these awards should facilitate the redistribution without further need of approval. The Omnibus Appropriations Act, 2009 (Pub. L. 111-8) appropriates funds under Division A, Title I for grants to youth organizations pursuant to 7 U.S.C. 7630.

(e) Food Animal Residue Avoidance Database Program (FARAD)
Title VI Section 604 of the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (7 U.S.C. 7642) states that -The Secretary of Agriculture shall continue operation of the Food Animal Residue Avoidance Database program (referred to in this section as the FARAD program) through contracts, grants, or cooperative agreements with appropriate colleges or universities.

OBJECTIVES:

GENERAL: [As reflected in Part I.B. of the Request for Applications (RFA) or Capacity Requests for Applications (Capacity RFA)]

1. Smith-Lever (3b) & (c) Capacity Grants (formerly known as Formula Funds)

a) Cooperative Extension Programs at 1862 Land-Grant Institutions (formerly known as 3b & c Formula Funds)

These funds are used by institutions eligible to receive funds under the Act of Congress approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, entitled An Act donating public lands to the several States and Territories which may provide colleges for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanic arts (Twelfth Statutes at Large, page five hundred and three) (1862 Land-grant Institutions), for the development of practical applications of research knowledge and giving of instruction and practical demonstrations of existing or improved practices or technologies in agriculture, uses of solar energy with respect to agriculture, home economics, and rural energy, and subjects relating thereto to persons not attending or resident in 1862 Land-grant Institutions in the several communities, and imparting information on those subjects through demonstrations, publications, and otherwise and for the necessary printing and distribution of information in connection with the subjects.
The purpose of this funding is to conduct agricultural extension work.

(b) Cooperative Extension Programs at 1862 Land-Grant Institutions (Special Needs)

The purpose of this funding is to increase the level of agricultural extension work. These funds are used to support extension activities identified in the eligible institutions approved 5-Year Plan of Work. Special Needs funds are allocated to a State Cooperative Extension Service to fulfill a purpose or overcome a condition peculiar to the State, as compared to the country as a whole, or for a purpose not normally a part of the continuing extension program.

(c) Smith-Lever Special Needs Program

Funds support innovative extension education approaches to addressing risks, hazards and disasters. The Cooperative Extension Service (CES) has an important role in reducing the impact of disasters through extension education.

The Extension Special Needs program sponsors targeted projects that enable CES to assist in preparing for, providing an educational response to, and recovering from disasters. Education programming funded by this program will help communities, families and individuals become more self-sustaining by strengthening and increasing their resiliency to disaster. Some types of hazards and disaster related events funded in previous years include uncertainties caused by losses of economic infrastructure, severe weather or other natural disasters, security breaches, human disease, or high consequence animal diseases and plant pests.

There has been an increase in public awareness regarding the number and severity of disaster type critical incidents involving earthquakes, tsunamis, tornadoes, wildfire, drought, contagious disease, and terrorist events. The National Academy of Sciences Committee on Environment and Natural Resources and the Subcommittee on Disaster Reduction of the National Science and Technology Council have acknowledged the many effective roles that the Cooperative Extension System (CES) has played in disaster preparedness, response and remediation.

Within the states and territories, the CES has repeatedly served as the trusted community organization that has helped to enable families, communities, and businesses to successfully prepare for, respond to and cope with disaster losses and critical incidents. Once a disaster has occurred, the local extension outreach includes: 1) Communicating practical science-based risk information, 2) Developing relevant educational experiences and programs, 3) Working with individuals and communities to open new communication channels, and 4) Mitigating losses and facilitating recovery. Never was this more evident than after hurricanes Katrina, Rita and Wilma in 2005 and during the 2008 Midwestern Summer flooding. During and after these incidents, local Extension agents served as a critical communication node throughout affected urban and rural areas, particularly when traditional communication systems were temporarily overwhelmed or destroyed.

The Extension Special Needs RFA encourages proposals that specifically address one or more of the following six key target areas:

1. Education and Technical assistance through inter-disciplinary and multi-state disaster training programs and demonstration projects for problem solving, especially those which build upon already existing strengths, contribute to or expand the EDEN and/or eXtension educational materials related to disaster preparation, mitigation, response and recovery;
2. Collaboration with Federal, state and local agencies and other disaster relief organizations to support education and service activities that enhance recovery of impacted rural communities, schools, businesses and agricultural-based activities;
3. Long range family, community and regional planning projects that will enhance implementation of programs that serve public needs in preparation for, during and after emergency situations within impacted States and across impacted regions;
4. Communication delivery of key information that meets end-users needs in a timely fashion with consideration of potentially limited communication channels due to disaster situations;
5. Dissemination of credible, science-based information that is reliable and easily accessible even if electronic access is compromised; and
6. Integrated Research and Extension Planning Projects (up to $15,000) are intended to provide assistance to applicants in bringing together teams for the development of highly competitive grant proposals where extension personnel would apply for large grants (in excess of $250,000) from other grant programs (e.g., the Agriculture and Food Research Initiative and etc) and lead nationally important disaster prevention, protection and mitigation projects.

Fundable projects should support education and extension activities which:

1. Reduce risk through planning, disaster preparedness and emergency response by improving communication between the public, community leaders, state and Federal agencies;

2. Develop strategies and educational materials and/or programming in the area of emergency planning, infrastructure design and disaster recovery operation;
3. Develop community networks that provide real-time disaster education information; and/or
4. Develop or expand educational materials regarding disaster issues suitable for use and distribution by the Extension Disaster Education Network (EDEN) or the eXtension Community of Practice working with disaster planning.

4. OTHER EXTENSION ACTIVITIES - - Funding Restrictions:

(a) Renewable Resources Extension Act (RREA)

The majority of the appropriated funds are distributed to eligible institutions based on a formula that considers the geographic extent, ecosystem productivity, economic contribution, and population for each state.

Since FY 2002, a small amount of these funds have been used to fund National Focus Fund Projects (RREA-NFF).

NIFA does not require matching support for this program and matching resources will not be factored into the review process as evaluation criteria.

For Fiscal Year 2017 appropriated funds, Section 713 of the Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2017 (Pub. L. 114-113) stipulates that indirect costs are not to exceed 30% of total Federal Funds provided under each award.

(b) Rural Health and Safety

The Rural Health and Safety Education Competitive Grants Program provides funds to meet national goals for addressing the health and access needs of rural Americans.

NIFA does not require matching or cost sharing support for this program and matching resources will not be factored into the review process as evaluation criteria.

NIFA has determined that grant funds awarded under this authority may not be used for the renovation or refurbishment of research, education, or extension space; the purchase or installation of fixed equipment in such space; or the planning, repair, rehabilitation, acquisition, or construction of buildings or facilities.

For Fiscal Year 2017 appropriated funds, Section 713 of the Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2017 (Pub. L. 114-113) stipulates that indirect costs are not to exceed 30% of total Federal Funds provided under each award.

(c) Extension Services at the 1994 Institutions

Appropriated funds are to be awarded to the 1994 Land-Grant Institutions for Extension work and funds are to be distributed on the basis of a competitive application process.

NIFA does not require matching support for this program, and matching resources will not be factored into the review process as evaluation criteria.

Under the TCEP, the use of grant funds to plan, acquire, or construct a building or facility, or to acquire land, is not allowed. With prior approval, in accordance with the cost principles set forth in OMB Circular No. A-21, grant funds may be used to purchase equipment, or for improvements, alterations, renovations, or repairs to land, buildings, or equipment, deemed necessary to retrofit existing spaces and resources in order to carry out a funded project under this grant. However, requests to use grant funds for such purposes must demonstrate that such expenditures are incidental to the major purpose for which the grant request is made and no more than twenty-five percent of the project budget may be used to purchase equipment. Any equipment purchased with Federal funds is the property of the grantee or the subgrantee, as appropriate.

Indirect costs are unallowable costs, and no funds will be approved for this purpose. Costs that are a part of the institutions indirect cost pool may not be reclassified as direct costs for the purpose of making them allowable.

(d) Grants to Youth Serving Institutions (aka Rural Youth Development or RYD Grants)

This Program has not been funded for several years.

(e) Food Animal Residue Avoidance Database Program (FARAD)

Pursuant to Sec. 604 of the Agricultural research extension and Education Reform Act of 1998 [7 USC 7642(d)], applicants requesting recovery of indirect costs should limit their requests to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect costs rate or the equivalent of 19 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

(f) Federal Administration (DIRECT APPROPRIATION) - Extension Activities

For Fiscal Year 2017 appropriated funds, Section 713 of the Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2017 (Pub. L. 114-113) stipulates that indirect costs are not to exceed 30% of total Federal Funds provided under each award.

Other pertinent details will be provided at a future date.

(g) 1890 Facilities (Section 1447):

In Fiscal Year (FY) 2009 NIFA assessed four percent (4%) of the appropriated amount for Federal Administration, distributed sixty percent (60%) of the balance equally, and distributed the remaining forty percent (40%) based on the formula found in Section 1444 of NAREPTA of 1977, as amended (Pub. L. No. 95-113).

Within each institution, the research, teaching and extension programs must each receive at least 20 percent of the annual allocation. The remaining 40 percent may be allocated based on institutional needs for research, teaching, or extension. No more than 60 percent of the total allocation should be directed to research, teaching, or extension. However, if there are unique situations in your institution which warrant a deviation from these guidelines, we will consider requests for reallocation. Such reallocations must be justified by the submission of a situation statement which describes the research, teaching, and extension facilities needs in your institution and how previously available Federal funds were utilized.

NIFA does not require matching support for this program and matching resources will not be factored into the review process as evaluation criteria.

The obligation and expenditure of funds awarded under these grants are limited to equipment, land, buildings and other related costs which are or will be used in the administration and conduct of approved research, teaching and extension activities.

In accordance with NAREPTA Section 1447 (e), funds provided for this program may not be used for the payment of any overhead costs of the eligible institutions.

Further, in accordance with Section 7129 of the Agricultural Act of 2014 (House Conference Report 113-333, to accompany H.R. 2642), Central State University has the Designation as 1890 Institution.

(h) Agriculture Risk Management Education Partnerships Grants Program (aka ARPA, ERME & RME)

For Fiscal Year 2017 appropriated funds, Section 713 of the Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2017 (Pub. L. 114-113) stipulates that indirect costs are not to exceed 30% of total Federal Funds provided under each award.

Other pertinent details will be provided at a future date. Some funds are Fully Discretionary. Some funds are Mandatory. Some funds are formula-based.

GENERAL PERTINENT DETAILS:

1. SMITH-LEVER 3(b) & (c):

(a) Cooperative Extension Programs at 1862 Land-Grant Institutions [(aka 3b & c Capacity Funds), formerly known as "Formula" funds]

Pre-award form submissions must be submitted to the Cooperative Extension Programs at 1862 Land-grant Institutions program as a new application on the www.grants.gov website. As noted in the Capacity Request for Applications (Capacity RFA), these application packages complement, rather than duplicate, the information collected via the Plan of Work (POW) system, and together satisfy all legislative and regulatory pre-award requirements.

Section 202 of the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (AREERA) amended the Smith-Lever Act and the Hatch Act to require approved plans of work for agricultural extension and research activities at 1862 Land-grant Institutions in order to receive Federal funding. Therefore, each 1862 Land-grant Institution must submit both a 5-Year Plan of Work Update (i.e., submitted each year as an update) and an Annual Report of Accomplishments and Results. Both reports were due by April 1.

(b) Cooperative Extension Programs at 1862 Land-Grant Institutions (Special Needs) :

Pre-award form submissions must be submitted to Special Needs Program as a new application on the www.grants.gov website. As noted in the Capacity Request for Applications (Capacity RFA), these application packages complement, rather than duplicate, the information collected via the Plan of Work (POW) system, and together satisfy all legislative and regulatory pre-award requirements.

Section 202 of the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (AREERA) amended the Smith-Lever Act and the Hatch Act to require approved plans of work for agricultural extension and research activities at 1862 Land-grant Institutions in order to receive Federal funding. Therefore, each 1862 Land-grant Institution must submit both a 5-Year Plan of Work Update (i.e., submitted each year as an update) and an Annual Report of Accomplishments and Results. Both reports were due by April 1.

This program is no longer funded by NIFA. The deadline for the FY 2015 Request for Applications (RFA) was October 15, 2014.

(e) FERS Retirement Contributions Program (aka ERET FERS Retirement):

This program is no longer funded by NIFA. The deadline for the FY 2016 RFA was July 20, 2015.

As stated in the Preface to the Federal Register Notice at 71 FR 4107, Although the District of Columbia receives extension funds under the District of Columbia Postsecondary Education Reorganization Act, Public Law 93471, as opposed to the Smith-Lever Act, NIFA has determined that it should be subject to the POW requirements imposed under these guidelines except where expressly excluded. Therefore, the University of the District of Columbia must submit both a 5-Year Plan of Work Update (i.e., submitted as an annual update) and an Annual Report of Accomplishments and Results. Both reports were due April 1.

2. Agricultural Extension at 1890 Land-Grant Institutions, Including Tuskegee University and West Virginia State University (Section 1444):

Pre-award form submissions must be submitted to the Section 1444 Program as a new application on the www.grants.gov website. Section 225 of the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (AREERA) amended NARETPA to require an approved Plan of Work for agricultural extension and research activities at 1890 Land-Grant Institutions in order to receive Federal funding. Therefore, each 1890 land-grant institution, including Tuskegee University and West Virginia State University, must submit both a 5-Year Plan of Work Update and an Annual Report of Accomplishments and Results. Both reports are due April 1.

Further, in accordance with Section 7129 of the Agricultural Act of 2014 (House Conference Report 113-333, to accompany H.R. 2642), Central State University has the Designation as 1890 Institution.

1. SMITH-LEVER 3(b) & (c):

(a) Cooperative Extension Programs at 1862 Land-Grant Institutions [(aka 3b & c Capacity Grants (formerly known as "Formula" Funds)]:

States are eligible for funds appropriated under this Act according to the following formula: Out of each annual allocation, each State will be entitled to receive a sum of money equal to the sums available from Federal cooperative extension funds for the fiscal year 1962, and subject to the same requirements as to furnishing of equivalent sums by the State, except that amounts heretofore made available to the Secretary for allotment on the basis of special needs shall continue available for use on the same basis. Further, the University of Guam and the University of the Virgin Islands will receive $100,000 each in addition to the sums appropriated for the several States of the United States and Puerto Rico under the provisions of sections 3(b) and 3(c) of the Smith-Lever Act. Of the remainder so appropriated for each fiscal year 20 per cent will be paid to the several States in equal proportions, 40 per cent will be paid to the several States in the proportion that the rural population of each bears to the total rural population of the several States as determined by the census, and the balance will be paid to the several States in the proportion that the farm population of each bears to the total farm population of the several States as determined by the census. Any appropriation made under sections 3(b) and 3(c) of the Smith-Lever Act will be allotted in the first and succeeding years on the basis of the decennial census current at the time the appropriation is first made, and as to any increase, on the basis of decennial census current at the time such increase is first appropriated.

Cost Sharing or Matching

Section 3(e)(1) of the Smith-Lever Act (7 U.S.C. 343(e)(1)) states, with regard to institutions in the 50 states, no allotment shall be made to a State under subsection (b) or (c), and no payments from the allotment shall be made to a State, in excess of the amount that the State makes available out of non-Federal funds for cooperative extension work. However, section 3(e)(4) of the Smith-Lever Act (U.S.C. 343(e)(4)) provides that Effective beginning for fiscal year 2003, in lieu of the matching funds requirement of paragraph (1), the insular areas of [American Samoa,] the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, [Micronesia, the Northern Marianas Islands,] and the Virgin Islands of the United States shall provide matching funds from non-Federal sources in an amount equal to not less than 50 percent of the formula funds distributed by the Secretary to each of the insular areas, respectively, under this section..... The Secretary may waive the matching fund requirement [of 50 percent] for any fiscal year if the Secretary determines that the government of the insular area will be unlikely to meet the matching requirement for the fiscal year.

(b) Cooperative Extension Programs at 1862 Land-Grant Institutions (Special Needs) :

Funds will be distributed to the institutions on a quarterly basis. See Appendix A of the Capacity Request for Applications (RFA) for the specific allocation.

Cost Sharing or Matching

1862 Land-grant Institutions in the 50 States must match 100 percent of the Special Needs funds they receive with funds from non-Federal sources such as State or county appropriations. The matching must be in the form of cash. Matching funds must be used for extension activities approved in the eligible institutions 5-Year Plan of Work.

1. To comply with the matching requirements of the Special Needs Program, applicants are required to provide 100 percent matching funds from non-federal sources for all proposed federal funds sought in the application. In-kind and third party contributions are not allowed for the Smith-Lever Special Needs

2. Matching Alternative. Extension Directors may certify an offset of guaranteed non-Federal funds to your application. The signed certification of offset must be scanned and included as a PDF attachment (see Part IV.,B.,2.,c.,(1) for specific instructions).

3. Matching Exception. Insular Areas: In lieu of the matching funds requirement, the insular areas of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United States shall provide matching funds from non-Federal sources in an amount equal to not less than 50 percent of the grants awarded. The Secretary may waive this matching fund requirement for any fiscal year if the Secretary determines that the government of the insular area will be unlikely to meet the matching requirement for the fiscal year. 2. Agricultural Extension at 1890 Land-Grant Institutions, Including Tuskegee University and West Virginia State University (Section 1444):

The 1890 Land-Grant Institutions, including Tuskegee University and West Virginia State University, are eligible for funds appropriated under this Act according to the following formula: Any funds annually appropriated under NARETPA section 1444 up to the amount appropriated for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1978, pursuant to section 3(d) of the Act of May 8, 1914, as amended, for eligible institutions, will be allocated among the eligible institutions in the same proportion as funds appropriated under section 3(d) of the Act of May 8, 1914, as amended, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1978, are allocated among the eligible institutions. Of the funds in excess of that amount, 20 per cent will be allotted among the eligible institutions in equal proportions; 40 per cent will be allotted among the eligible institutions in the proportion that the rural population of the State in which each eligible institution is located bears to the total rural population of all the States in which eligible institutions are located, as determined by the last preceding decennial census current at the time each such additional sum is first appropriated; and the balance will be allotted among the eligible institutions in the proportion that the farm population of the State in which each eligible institution is located bears to the total farm population of all the States in which the eligible institutions are located, as determined by the last preceding decennial census current at the time each such additional sum is first appropriated. For purposes of computing the distribution, the allotments to Tuskegee University and Alabama A&M University will be determined as if each institution were in a separate State.

Cost Sharing or Matching

NARETPA section 1449 (7 U.S.C. 3222d) states that the State shall provide matching funds from non-Federal sources. Such matching funds shall be for an amount equal to not less than ... 100 percent of the formula [capacity grant] funds to be distributed to the eligible institution for fiscal year 2007 and each fiscal year thereafter. ... Notwithstanding [redistributing the funds], the Secretary may waive the matching funds requirement ... above the 50 percent level for any fiscal year for an eligible institution of a State if the Secretary determines that the State will be unlikely to satisfy the matching requirement.

7 CFR 3419.1 defines matching funds as funds from non-Federal sources made available by the State to the eligible institutions ... [for] programs or activities that fall within the purposes of agricultural research and cooperative extension under sections 1444 and 1445 of NARETPA ...or [for] qualifying educational activities. Matching funds means cash contributions and excludes in-kind matching contributions. It defines non-Federal sources as funds made available by the State to the eligible institution either through direct appropriation or under any authority (other than authority to charge tuition and fees paid by students) provided by a State to an eligible institution to raise revenue, such as gift acceptance authority or user fees. Finally, it defines qualifying educational activities as programs that address food and agricultural sciences components of an eligible institution.

7 CFR 3419.6 states that The required matching funds for the formula programs shall be used by an eligible institution for agricultural research and extension activities that have been approved in the plan of work required under sections 1444(d) and 1445(c) of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977... or for .. qualifying education activities.

Further, in accordance with Section 7129 of the Agricultural Act of 2014 (House Conference Report 113-333, to accompany H.R. 2642), Central State University has the Designation as 1890 Institution.

2. Four percent (4%) shall be available for administrative expenses.
3. $100,000 will be distributed to each 1862 and 1890 Land-Grant Institution including the University of the District of Columbia.

4. Effective fiscal year (FY) 2009 10 percent of funds appropriated for EFNEP in excess of funds appropriated will be allocated to the 1890 Institutions in an amount that bearing the same ratio to the population living at or below 125 percent of the poverty level (as prescribed by the Office of Management and Budget and as adjusted pursuant to section 673(2) of the Community Services Block Grant Act (42 U.S.C.9902(2))) in the State where the 1890 Institution is located; bears to the total population living at or below 125 percent of the poverty level in all States where 1890 Institutions are located; as determined by the most recent decennial census at the time when the appropriated amount first exceeds levels appropriated for EFNEP. The FY 2009 rate of 10 percent is to increase by 1 percentage point annually until FY 2014 maxing out at 15 percent and remaining at that level for every year thereafter.

4. OTHER EXTENSION ACTIVITIES:

(a) Renewable Resources Extension Act (RREA):

The majority of the appropriated funds are distributed to eligible institutions based on a formula that considers the geographic extent, ecosystem productivity, economic contribution, and population for each state.

Since FY 2002, a small amount of these funds have been used to fund National Focus Fund Projects. (RREA-NFF).

NIFA does not require matching support for this program and matching resources will not be factored into the review process as evaluation criteria.

(b) Rural Health and Safety (RHSE):

The Rural Health and Safety Education Competitive Grants Program provides funds to meet national goals for addressing the health and access needs of rural Americans.

NIFA does not require matching or cost sharing support for this program and matching resources will not be factored into the review process as evaluation criteria.

NIFA has determined that grant funds awarded under this authority may not be used for the renovation or refurbishment of research, education, or extension space; the purchase or installation of fixed equipment in such space; or the planning, repair, rehabilitation, acquisition, or construction of buildings or facilities.

(c) Extension Services at the 1994 Institutions (TCEP):

Appropriated funds are to be awarded to the 1994 Land-Grant Institutions for Extension work and funds are to be distributed on the basis of a competitive application process.

NIFA does not require matching support for this program, and matching resources will not be factored into the review process as evaluation criteria.

Under the TCEP, the use of grant funds to plan, acquire, or construct a building or facility, or to acquire land, is not allowed. With prior approval, in accordance with the cost principles set forth in OMB Circular No. A-21, grant funds may be used to purchase equipment, or for improvements, alterations, renovations, or repairs to land, buildings, or equipment, deemed necessary to retrofit existing spaces and resources in order to carry out a funded project under this grant. However, requests to use grant funds for such purposes must demonstrate that such expenditures are incidental to the major purpose for which the grant request is made and no more than twenty-five percent of the project budget may be used to purchase equipment. Any equipment purchased with Federal funds is the property of the grantee or the subgrantee, as appropriate.

(d) Grants to Youth Serving Institutions (RYD):
This Program has not been funded for several years.

(e) Food Animal Residue Avoidance Database Program (FARAD):

Refer to the most current Request for Applications (RFA) for specific instructions. Pertinent details to be reflected in the CFDA database at a future date. .

(f) Federal Administration (DIRECT APPROPRIATION):

Refer to the most current Request for Applications (RFA) for specific instructions. Pertinent details to be reflected in the CFDA database at a future date. .

(g) 1890 Facilities (Section 1447):

NIFA assessed four percent (4%) of the appropriated amount for Federal Administration, distributed sixty percent (60%) of the balance equally, and distributed the remaining forty percent (40%) based on the formula found in Section 1444 of NAREPTA of 1977, as amended (Pub. L. No. 95-113).

Within each institution, the research, teaching and extension programs must each receive at least 20 percent of the annual allocation. The remaining 40 percent may be allocated based on institutional needs for research, teaching, or extension. No more than 60 percent of the total allocation should be directed to research, teaching, or extension. However, if there are unique situations in your institution which warrant a deviation from these guidelines, we will consider requests for reallocation. Such reallocations must be justified by the submission of a situation statement which describes the research, teaching, and extension facilities needs in your institution and how previously available Federal funds were utilized.

NIFA does not require matching support for this program and matching resources will not be factored into the review process as evaluation criteria.

The obligation and expenditure of funds awarded under these grants are limited to equipment, land, buildings and other related costs which are or will be used in the administration and conduct of approved research, teaching and extension activities. In accordance with NARETPA Section 1447 (e), funds provided for this program may not be used for the payment of any overhead costs of the eligible institutions.

Further, in accordance with Section 7129 of the Agricultural Act of 2014 (House Conference Report 113-333, to accompany H.R. 2642), Central State University has the Designation as 1890 Institution.
MOE requirements are not applicable to this program.

An annual Progress Report is due 90 calendar days after the awards anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day of which the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period. The following information, when applicable, must be included in the Project Modifications section of the annual Progress Report.

1) A comparison of actual accomplishments with the goals established for the reporting period (where the output of the project can be expressed readily in numbers, a computation of the cost per unit of output should be submitted if the information is considered useful);

(2) The reasons for slippage if established goals were not met; and

(3) Additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs.

c. Final Technical Report

The Final Technical Report is required within 90 calendar days after the expiration or termination of the award. The Final Technical Report covers the entire period of performance of the award and must describe progress made during the entire timeframe of the project instead of covering accomplishments made only during the final reporting segment of the project. In addition to supplying the information required under item b. of this article, the final report must include the following when applicable:

Identify equipment purchased with any Federal funds under the award and indicate subsequent use of such equipment.

FINANCIAL REPORTING:

PROGRAM ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: The following represents accomplishments for active Programs:

(A), (B) and (CC) - Cooperative Extension Programs at 1862 Land-grant Institutions (aka CES Smith-Lever Regular and CES Smith-Lever Special Needs), and District of Columbia Public Postsecondary Education Reorganization Act Program (aka DCPPERA) [Section 3 (b) & (c)] - (Capacity previously known as Formula)

Cooperative Extension Programs at 1862 Land-Grant Institutions were allocated $288,676,390 to support Extension activities. Awards ranged from $1,133,542 to $13,255,226. The total amount of required matching funds in FY 2016 was $280,548,168. Both programs have matching requirements; with over 98 percent of the organizations that receive funds having to match 100% of the award amount.

Special Needs program was allocated $1,029,979 to support individual projects that may be initiated under this program. Awards ranged from $11,347 to $111,504. The total amount of required matching funds in FY 2016 was $1,029,979.

Combined appropriation for both programs was $289,052,443.

University of the District of Columbia Public Postsecondary Education Reorganization Act Program (DCPPERA)

In Fiscal Year (FY) 2016, $1,196,560.00, (representing the Appropriation, less the legislatively mandated set-asides), was available to fund this program allocated solely to the University of the District of Columbia (UDC). There is no matching requirement for this program. Administrative costs are taken from Smith-Lever funds. Funds are being used to carry out educational programs and research in Climate Change; Global Food Security and Hunger; Health, Nutrition and Childhood Obesity Prevention; Urban Families, Youth and Communities; and Sustainable Energy through UDCs two (2) essential land-grant components, the Agricultural Experiment Station and the Cooperative Extension Service.

(C) Smith-Lever Special Needs Competitive Grants Program [Section 3 (b) & (c)]

The National Institute of Food and Agriculture (NIFA) funded Smith Lever Special Needs projects to implement applied scientific programs that serve public needs in preparation for, during and after local or regional emergency situations or disasters.

The program received seven (7) applications, and the total allocation was $461,619. The range of proposal funded was from $12,500 for a planning grant to $180,000.

(D) Agricultural Extension at 1890 Land-Grant Institutions, Including Tuskegee University, West Virginia State University, and Central State University (aka 1890 LGIs and Section 1444) - (Capacity, previously known as Formula)

In Fiscal Year (FY) 2016, $45,620,000 was appropriated for this program. Funds in the amount of $43,795,200 were provided to support the Extension programs at the 19 1890 Land-Grant Universities, in 18 states. Funds are distributed on a formula basis.

(E) & (EE) - Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program (aka EFNEP) [Smith-Lever - Section 3 (d)] - (Capacity previously known as Formula) and EFNEP WebNEERS (Competitive)

The Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program (EFNEP) brings together federal, state, and local resources to target two (2) primary audiences: low-income families with young children and low-income youth. The program is delivered by the 1862 and the 1890 Land-Grant Institutions. Since 1969, EFNEP has reached more than 33 million low-incomes families and youth, improving their diets and food-related behaviors. Each year EFNEP enrolls more than half a million new program participants. In FY2016, EFNEP received $67,417,320 in federal funding. EFNEP reached 118,976 adults and 365,369 youth directly; and more than 345,000 family members indirectly (source: EFNEPs evaluation and reporting system, WebNEERS). 84% of EFNEP participants who reported income were at or below 100% of poverty, earning $24,300 a year or less for a family of four (4). At least 74% of all EFNEP adults are minorities. This is significant because poor health disproportionately affects minority and low-income populations. As well, educational opportunities and resources are limited.

EFNEP consistently demonstrates strong results. FY 2016 data confirms adult graduates:

- Improve their diets: 94% report more closely following dietary recommendations, including consuming an extra 1/2 cup of fruits and vegetables;
- Improve their nutrition practices: 89% improve nutrition practices, such as making healthier food choices and reading nutrition labels;
- Stretch their food dollars farther: 84% improve food resource management practices, such as planning meals and shopping with a grocery list;
- Handle food more safely: 65% improve food safety practices, such as storing and thawing food properly; and/or
- Increase their physical activity rates: 40% increase their physical activity level by 30 minutes or more.

(G), (H) & (W) Farm Safety, Youth Farm Safety Education and Certification, and Assistive Technology Program for Farmers with Disabilities (AgrAbility Project)

In FY 2012 Congress consolidated Extension 3(d) line items Farm Safety (AgrAbility) and Youth Farm Safety Education and Certification into a single line item.

In FY 2016, after legislatively mandated set asides approximately $4,424,474 was available to support Farm Safety (i.e., AgrAbility) and Youth Farm Safety Education and Certification (YFSEC) programs.

Of this amount, $300,000 was made available for a YFSEC project to continue the work commenced via prior years funding. Further, approximately $3,592,500 was made available to support twenty (20) continuation awards, all State/Regional AgrAbility Projects (SRAPs) and one (1) new National AgrAbility Project (NAP).

SRAPs maintained their focus on supporting state and regional projects that increase the likelihood that individuals with disabilities and their families engaged in production agriculture (AgrAbility customers) will become more successful.

NIFA received two (2) proposals and funded one (1). Funding ratio was 50%.

(I) New Technologies at Ag Extension (aka NTAE)

In Fiscal Year (FY) 2016, NIFA awarded a continuation grant in the amount of $1,488,000 to the New Technologies for Ag Extension (NTAE) program. The funding ratio for this program in FY 2016 was 100% due to the competition waiver process.

FARAD is a university-based national program that serves as the nations primary source for scientifically-based recommendations regarding safe withdrawal intervals of drugs (used off label) and chemicals in food-producing animals. As such, FARAD is a key resource for protection of our nation's food supply, including meat, milk and eggs, against accidental contamination of animal-derived foods with residues of drugs, pesticides or other agents that could compromise food safety.

The FRTEP Extension Offices are designed and equipped to respond to life and nature dictate. Generally, the programming is consistent each year.

(Q) 1890 Facilities Grant Program

Projects will continue to address renovation and construction needs of the 1890 Land-Grant Institutions that will enable them offer state-of-the-art teaching, research and extension facilities, for faculty, staff, students, and the communities that are served through their agricultural programs.

(R) Food Animal Residue Avoidance Database Program (aka FARAD)

The Projected Project Network Nodes are the same as for Fiscal Year 2016.

Collaboration between all institutions will occur on research.

1862 CES Capacity (Smith-Lever) and DCPPER):

Funding for the Cooperative Extension Programs at 1862 Land-Grant Institutions authorized under the Smith-Lever Act section 3(b) and (c) (SLBC) and the University of the District of Columbia Public Postsecondary Education Reorganization Act Program (DCPPER) under Section 208 of the District of Columbia Public Postsecondary Education Reorganization Act is to be used for the development of practical applications of research knowledge and giving of instruction and practical demonstrations of existing or improved practices or technologies in agriculture, uses of solar energy with respect to agriculture, home economics, and rural energy, and subjects relating thereto to persons not attending or resident in 1862 Land-Grant Institutions, and imparting information on those subjects through demonstrations, publications, and otherwise and for the necessary printing and distribution of information in connection with the subjects.

Program and Extension Activities - Smith-Lever Act sections 3(b) and 3(c) Federal funding may only be used for extension programs and an activity identified in the institutions approved 5-Year Plan of Work.

1862 Special Needs Capacity Grants Program (SLSN):

1862 Smith Lever Special Needs Capacity funds support extension education initiatives that address risks, hazards and disasters. The SLSN sponsors targeted projects enable Cooperative Extension Service to assist in preparing for, providing an educational response to, and recovering from disasters. Education programming funded by this program help communities, families and individuals become more self-sustaining by strengthening and increasing their resiliency to disaster. The SLSN increases awareness and capacity building of urban/rural communities response to natural and/or human-made disasters by increasing individual, family, farms, small business and community disaster preparedness through extension education, as well as collaboration with other agencies and volunteer organizations.

Smith-Lever Special Needs Competitive Grants Program (SLSNCGP):

SLSNCGP projects to implement applied scientific programs that serve public needs in preparation for, during, and after disaster. Though national, regional, and/or multi-state efforts are a priority for categories 1-3, highly replicable single-state projects may be considered if they have a strong plan for transferring successful methods to other states. The SLSNCGP also funds the development of educational programs and demonstration activities focusing on disaster preparedness, mitigation, response, and recovery. Successful projects in the past have helped extension educators, who normally do not have a disaster extension focus, to have a greater impact in this area.

The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

(i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;

(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following: Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this

Competitive Smith-Lever Special Needs Competitive (SLSNCGP):

We evaluate each application in a two-part process. First, we screen each application to ensure Competitive Smith-Lever Special Needs: that it meets the administrative requirements as set forth in this RFA. Second, a technical review panel will evaluate applications that meet the administrative requirements.

We select reviewers based upon their training and experience in relevant scientific, extension, or education fields, taking into account the following factors:

- the level of relevant formal scientific, technical education, or extension experience of the individual, as well as the extent to which an individual is engaged in relevant research, education, or extension activities;
- the need to include experts from various areas of specialization within relevant scientific, education, or extension fields;
- the need to include other experts (e.g., producers, range or forest managers/operators, and consumers) who can assess relevance of the applications to targeted audiences and to program needs;
- the need to include experts from a variety of organizational types (e.g., colleges, universities, industry, state and federal agencies, and private profit and non-profit organizations) and geographic locations;
- the need to maintain a balanced composition with regard to minority and female representation and an equitable age distribution; and
- the need to include reviewers who can judge the effective usefulness of each application to producers and the general public.

After each peer review panel has completed its deliberations, the responsible program staff of SLSNCGP will recommend that your project (a) be approved for support from currently available funds or (b) be declined due to insufficient funds or unfavorable review.

SLSNCGP reserves the right to negotiate with the PD/PI and/or with the submitting organization or institution regarding project revisions (e.g., reductions in the scope of work, funding level, period, or method of support) prior to recommending any project for funding.

Matching Requirements: Joint Cooperative Extension Programs at 1862 Land-Grant Institutions (1862 CES Capacity & DCPPERA):

Section 3(e)(1) of the Smith-Lever Act (7 U.S.C. 343(e) (1)) states, with regard to institutions in the 50 states, no allotment shall be made to a State under subsection (b) or (c), and no payments from the allotment shall be made to a State, in excess of the amount that the State makes available out of non-Federal funds for cooperative extension work. However, section 3(e)(4) of the Smith-Lever Act (U.S.C. 343(e)(4)) provides that Effective beginning for fiscal year 2003, in lieu of the matching funds requirement of paragraph (1), the insular areas of [American Samoa,] the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, [Micronesia, the Northern Marianas Islands,] and the Virgin Islands of the United States shall provide matching funds from non-Federal sources in an amount equal to not less than 50 percent of the formula funds distributed by the Secretary to each of the insular areas, respectively, under this section..... The Secretary may waive the matching fund requirement [of 50 percent] for any fiscal year if the Secretary determines that the government of the insular area will be unlikely to meet the matching requirement for the fiscal year.

University of the District of Columbia Public Postsecondary Education Reorganization Act Program (DCPPERA):

1862 Smith-Lever Special Needs Capacity (SLSN):

1862 Land-Grant Institutions in the 50 States must match 100 percent (100%) of the SLSN funds they receive with funds from non-Federal sources such as State or county appropriations. The matching must be in the form of cash. Matching funds may only be used for extension activities approved in the eligible institutions five (5) year Plan of Work.

Smith-Lever Special Needs-Competitive (SLSNCGP):

Applicants are required to provide 100 percent matching funds from non-federal sources for all proposed federal funds sought in the application. In-kind and third party contributions are not allowed for this program; thus, all of the matching funds must come from the applicant institution (please note that sub-awards/partner match would be considered third party). This program does not have MOE requirements.

Reports:

REReport GRANT REPORTING:

All grant reporting must be completed using the Research, Education, and Extension project online reporting tool (REReport). Initial reporting (item a. below) is to be submitted through the REReport system. Annual progress and final reporting (items b. and c. below) also is to be done through the REReport system. Information on REReport can be found on NIFAs web site at <https://nifa.usda.gov/tool/rereport> and the REReport software can be found at <http://portal.nifa.usda.gov>.

a. Initial Documentation in the REReport Database--

Research, Education, and Extension project online reporting tool (REReport)
All projects must be documented in REReport. The NIFA contact for all REReport documentation is:

E-mail: electronic@nifa.usda.gov

b. Annual Progress Reports.

All projects must report annually into REReport. An annual Progress Report is due 90 calendar days after the awards anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day of which the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period. The following information, when applicable, must be included in the Project Modifications section of the annual Progress Report.

1) A comparison of actual accomplishments with the goals established for the reporting period (where the output of the project can be expressed readily in numbers, a computation of the cost per unit of output should be submitted if the information is considered useful);

(2) The reasons for slippage if established goals were not met; and

(3) Additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs.

Plan of Work (POW):

Section 105 of the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (AREERA) amended the Smith-Lever Act and the Hatch Act to require an approved POW for extension and research activities at 1862 Land-grant Institutions in order to receive Federal funding. As stated in the Preface to the Federal Register Notice at 71 FR 4107 (January 25, 2006), Although the District of Columbia receives extension funds under the District of Columbia Postsecondary Education Reorganization Act, Public Law 93471, as opposed to the Smith-Lever Act, NIFA has determined that it should be subject to the POW requirements imposed under these guidelines except where expressly excluded. Therefore, the University of the District of Columbia must submit both a 5-Year Plan of Work Update for FY 2017-2021 (i.e., submitted as an annual update) and an Annual Report of Accomplishments and Results.

These reports should be submitted online through the NIFA Reporting Portal at the web address <http://portal.nifa.usda.gov/portal>. Additional information about the POW is available at <http://nifa.usda.gov/tool/pow>.

c. Final Technical Report

The Final Technical Report is required within 90 calendar days after the expiration or termination of the award. The Final Technical Report covers the entire period of performance of the award and must describe progress made during the entire timeframe of the project instead of covering accomplishments made only during the final reporting segment of the project. In addition to supplying the information required under item b. of this article, the final report must include the following when applicable:

Identify equipment purchased with any Federal funds under the award and indicate subsequent use of such equipment.

FINANCIAL REPORTING:

As outlined in 2 CFR 200.327, the recipient must submit financial status reports by the frequency required in the terms and conditions of the award. The following are the financial reporting requirements for NIFA.

Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425:

For the SLBC and the DCPPERA programs, SF-425 financial reports for the awards whether annual or final, will be due Dec. 31 each year. See <http://nifa.usda.gov/program/smith-lever-act-capacity-grant> for additional details of annual, final and financial reporting requirements.

A final Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due 90 days after the expiration date of this award. The report must be submitted to the Awards Management Division (AMD) as a pdf attachment to an email sent to awards@nifa.usda.gov.

If questions are encountered regarding financial reporting requirements, please contact:

Formula and Matching Requirements:

Statutory formulas are not applicable to this program.

Matching Requirements: Section 1449 of NARETPA (7 U.S.C. 3222d) states that the State shall provide matching funds from non-Federal sources. Such matching funds shall be for an amount equal to not less than ... 100 percent of the formula [grant] funds to be distributed to the eligible institution for fiscal year 2007 and each fiscal year thereafter. ... Notwithstanding [redistributing the funds], the Secretary may waive the matching funds requirement ... above the 50 percent level for any fiscal year for an eligible institution of a State if the Secretary determines that the State will be unlikely to satisfy the matching requirement. Most regulations applicable to NIFA awards are housed in Title 7 of the Code of Federal Regulations. 7 CFR 3419.1 defines matching funds as funds from non-Federal sources made available by the State to the eligible institutions ... [for] programs or activities that fall within the purposes of agricultural research and cooperative extension under sections 1444 and 1445 of NARETPA ... or [for] qualifying educational activities. Matching funds means cash contributions and excludes in-kind matching contributions. It defines non-Federal sources as funds made available by the State to the eligible institution either through direct appropriation or under any authority (other than authority to charge tuition and fees paid by students) provided by a State to an eligible institution to raise revenue, such as gift acceptance authority or user fees. Finally, it defines qualifying educational activities as programs that address food and agricultural sciences components of an eligible institution.

7 CFR 3419.6 states that The required matching funds for the formula programs shall be used by an eligible institution for agricultural research and extension activities that have been approved in the plan of work required under sections 1444(d) and 1445(c) of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 or for qualifying education activities. NIFA may consider and approve matching waiver requests above the 50 percent level. See Part IV, B. 4. for instructions about how to request a waiver.

MOE requirements are not applicable to this program.

Length and Time Phasing of Assistance:

States are encouraged to spend Section 1444 Program funds in the year they are appropriated; however, if carryover is necessary, no more than 20 percent of the funds received by an institution in any fiscal year may be carried forward to the succeeding fiscal year. No prior approval from NIFA is required. Carryover limitations are legislatively mandated and NIFA is not authorized to approve any carryover requests beyond the 20 percent and one-year limitations.(7 USC 3221).

Initial reporting (item a. below) is to be submitted through the REReport system. Annual progress and final reporting (items b. and c. below) also is to be done through the REReport system. Information on REReport can be found on NIFAs web site at <https://nifa.usda.gov/tool/report> and the REReport software can be found at <http://portal.nifa.usda.gov>.

a. Initial Documentation in the REReport Database--

b. Annual Progress Reports.

All projects must report annually into REReport. An annual Progress Report is due 90 calendar days after the awards anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day of which the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period. The following information, when applicable, must be included in the Project Modifications section of the annual Progress Report.

1) A comparison of actual accomplishments with the goals established for the reporting period (where the output of the project can be expressed readily in numbers, a computation of the cost per unit of output should be submitted if the information is considered useful);

(2) The reasons for slippage if established goals were not met; and

(3) Additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs.

c. Final Technical Report

The Final Technical Report is required within 90 calendar days after the expiration or termination of the award. The Final Technical Report covers the entire period of performance of the award and must describe progress made during the entire timeframe of the project instead of covering accomplishments made only during the final reporting segment of the project. In addition to supplying the information required under item b. of this article, the final report must include the following when applicable:

Identify equipment purchased with any Federal funds under the award and indicate subsequent use of such equipment.

FINANCIAL REPORTING:

As outlined in 2 CFR 200.327, the recipient must submit financial status reports by the frequency required in the terms and conditions of the award. The following are the financial reporting requirements for NIFA.

Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425:

NIFA uses the SF-425, Federal Financial Report to monitor cash. A Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due on an annual basis no later than 90 days following the end of the award anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day when the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period.

A final Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due 90 days after the expiration date of this award. The report must be submitted to the Awards Management Division (AMD) as a pdf attachment to an email sent to awards@nifa.usda.gov.

(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

Formula and Matching Requirements:

Statutory Formula: Title NAREPTA, Public Law 95-113. FORMULA:

The National Institute of Food and Agriculture (NIFA) assessed four percent (4%) of the appropriated amount for Federal Administration, distributed sixty percent (60%) of the balance equally, and distributed the remaining forty percent (40%) based on the formula found in Section 1444 of NAREPTA of 1977, as amended (Pub. L. No. 95-113).

Within each institution, the research, teaching and extension programs must each receive at least 20 percent (20%) of the annual allocation. The remaining 40 percent (40%) may be allocated based on institutional needs for research, teaching, or extension. No more than 60 percent (60%) of the total allocation should be directed to research, teaching, or extension. However, if there are unique situations in your institution which warrant a deviation from these guidelines, we will consider requests for reallocation. Such reallocations must be justified by the submission of a situation statement which describes the research, teaching, and extension facilities needs in your institution and how previously available Federal funds were utilized.

This program has no matching requirements. COST SHARING OR MATCHING:

NIFA does not require matching support for this program and matching resources will not be factored into the review process as evaluation criteria.

Reports:

PERFORMANCE AND MONITORING REPORTS:

NIFA expects the awarded funds to be used for the acquisition and improvement of agricultural and food sciences facilities and equipment, including libraries, so that the 1890 land-grant institutions, including Tuskegee University, West Virginia State University and Central State University, may participate fully in human capital development in the food and agricultural sciences.

A. Performance Reports

Awardees of Federal funds are responsible for monitoring day-to-day project performance to ensure that project goals and performance schedules are met, contain costs, and accurately report progress to NIFA. An annual performance report is due in NIFA 90 days after completion of the first 12 months of the initial grant award and annually thereafter during the project period. Each report shall cover work performed during the previous 12-month period, including any funded or unfunded time extensions. If this project is supported in annual funding increments, the performance report required as part of the grantee's annual follow-on grant proposal shall satisfy this reporting requirement through the grantee's final application for funds. Thereafter these annual performance reports shall be submitted to the ADO. Performance reports should not exceed two pages in length, should contain appropriate identifying data and shall provide the following information:

1. A comparison of actual accomplishments with the goals or objectives established for the program during the reporting period, including percentage-of-completion data and a computation of square footage costs for all projects undertaken;
2. The reasons for slippage if approved goals were not met;
3. Additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs. Identify any issues, favorable or adverse conditions, changes, or situations which are expected to impact the scope, size, cost, or completion schedule for the project, along with a discussion of proposed or actual actions taken by your institution to resolve any problems encountered;
4. If the proposed represents any change to your approved five-year plan, please provide a description of, and justification for, the change;
5. A summary of activities to be undertaken during the ensuing 12-month period;
6. A listing of A/E, and construction contracts entered into during this reporting period only for each program component; and
7. A detailed breakdown of all project costs incurred to date (cumulative).

In addition to the Annual Performance report described above, the grantee is required to submit an annual progress report in REEport.

B. REEport Grant Reporting:

All grant reporting must be completed using the Research, Education, and Extension project online reporting tool (REEport). Initial reporting (item a. below) is to be submitted through the REEport system. Annual progress and final reporting (items b. and c. below) also is to be done through the REEport system. Information on REEport can be found on NIFAs web site at <https://nifa.usda.gov/tool/reepport> and the REEport software can be found at <http://portal.nifa.usda.gov>.

a. Initial Documentation in the REEport Database--

Research, Education, and Extension project online reporting tool (REEport):

All projects must be documented in REEport. The NIFA contact for all REEport documentation is:

b. Annual Progress Reports.

All projects must report annually into REEport. An annual Progress Report is due 90 calendar days after the awards anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day of which the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period. The following information, when applicable, must be included in the Project Modifications section of the annual Progress Report:

- (1) A comparison of actual accomplishments with the goals established for the reporting period (where the output of the project can be expressed readily in numbers, a computation of the cost per unit of output should be submitted if the information is considered useful);
- (2) The reasons for slippage if established goals were not met; and
- (3) Additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs.

c. Final Technical Report

The Final Technical Report is required within 90 calendar days after the expiration or termination of the award. The Final Technical Report covers the entire period of performance of the award and must describe progress made during the entire timeframe of the project instead of covering accomplishments made only during the final reporting segment of the project. In addition to supplying the information required under item b. of this article, the final report must include the following when applicable:

Identify equipment purchased with any Federal funds under the award and indicate subsequent use of such equipment.

FINANCIAL REPORTING:

As outlined in 2 CFR 200.327, the recipient must submit financial status reports by the frequency required in the terms and conditions of the award. The following are the financial reporting requirements for NIFA.

Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425:

NIFA uses the SF-425, Federal Financial Report to monitor cash. A Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due on an annual basis no later than 90 days following the end of the award anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day when the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period.

A final Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due 90 days after the expiration date of this award. The report must be submitted to the Awards Management Division (AMD) as a pdf attachment to an email sent to awards@nifa.usda.gov.

OBJECTIVES:

The purpose of this funding is to increase the impact of nutrition education disseminated to low-income families and youth in the 50 states, the U.S. territories, and the District of Columbia. EFNEP serves two primary low-income audiences: 1) families with young children (parents and other caregivers with primary responsibility for feeding young children); and 2) youth/children (grade range - kindergarten through 12th grade). The priorities of EFNEP are to assist low-income families and youth in acquiring knowledge, skills, attitudes, and changed behaviors necessary for nutritionally sound diets and to contribute to their personal development and improvement of the total family diet and nutritional well-being. Participation in EFNEP should result in improved diets and nutritional well-being of the total family.

Individuals and families should experience improvements in four core areas:

Diet Quality and Physical Activity Improved diets and nutritional and physical well-being through the adoption of federal food and physical activity recommendations.

Food Resource Management Increased ability to buy, grow, or otherwise appropriately obtain, prepare, and store food that meets nutritional needs.

Food Safety Improved household food safety and sanitation practices.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Formula Grants; Project Grants (Discretionary)

EXAMPLES OF FUNDED PROJECTS:

Fiscal Year 2016: The Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program (EFNEP) is funded as a national program, not as individual projects. All seventy-six 1862 and 1890 Land-Grant Institutions receive EFNEP funding each year and these are the only entities eligible for EFNEP funding. EFNEP is designed to assist limited resource audiences in acquiring the knowledge, skills, attitudes, and changed-behavior necessary for nutritionally sound diets, and to contribute to their personal development and the improvement of the total family diet and nutritional well-being. Although EFNEP lessons may be tailored to meet the needs of participants, all programming follows the same model: Lessons are taught by peer educators using an evidence-based, interactive, culturally appropriate approach. Upon participant entry and exit data are collected on diet quality, physical activity, food safety, and food resource management practices, all of which influence health. Fiscal Year 2017:

Forest and rangeland resources include vegetation, water, fisheries and wildlife, soil, and recreation.

Renewable Resource Extension Act National Focus Fund Projects (RREA-NFF):

The purpose of the grant program is to provide funds for pilot projects that:

- (1) Address emerging forest and rangeland resource issues,
- (2) Have national or regional relevancy, or
- (3) Develop new and innovative projects that can be replicated at other institutions.

The goal of the NFF program is to enhance the sustainability of the nations forest and rangeland resources and to enable landowners and managers to achieve their desired goals and objectives by making resource management decisions based on sound research findings. Forest and rangeland resources include vegetation, water, fisheries and wildlife, soil, and recreation. These projects must maximize the capacity, reach, and impact of the Cooperative Extension System Extension Forestry and Rangeland Programs and must directly work across state boundaries to share expertise to address common problems.

Credentials/Documentation:

Credentials/Documentation (083):

The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

(i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;

(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

Reports:

RREA:

Recipients have an approved Five (5) year project in REEport and are to provide an Annual Progress Report (by fiscal year), in REEport. The progress report should include program outputs and outcomes that correspond to the RREA strategic issues included in the recipients REEport project. Significant outputs and outcomes from emergent program offerings should also be included in the Annual Progress Report.

The following is a description of project data reporting requirements through the REEport system (<http://portal.nifa.usda.gov>), as well as the SF-425 reporting requirements.

Institutions must submit a REEport Project Initiation, which includes the Project Description, Project Classification, Assurance Form, and Project Proposal through the REEport System prior to the initiation of each capacity-funded project. The project must undergo a review process and be approved before it is incorporated into the Program of Research.

Each institution must submit a REEport Progress Report annually for each eligible project. All Progress Reports are based on the federal fiscal year and must be submitted by March 1st for the preceding fiscal year.

A Final Report must be submitted to NIFA through REEport for each completed or terminated project. Such reports must be submitted at the same time as are progress reports on active projects and should include a summary of accomplishments for the entire life of the project.

A Project Financial Report must be submitted to NIFA through REEport annually for all eligible projects from the preceding fiscal year. A Project Financial Report is also required for expenditures on all state projects that are to be included in the non-federal funds and matching funds computation. Reports shall be made on the federal fiscal year basis.

Financial reporting via the SF-425, Federal Financial Report is due to the ezFedGrants portal, on December 31st, for the period October 1st through September 30th, and annually thereafter until the award is closed out. Information on how to access the ezFedGrants portal can be found under the training on the ezFedGrants page: <https://www.nfc.usda.gov/ezFedGrants>.

The final SF-425 is due no later than 90 days after the termination date of the grant. The form should be emailed as a PDF attachment to formulagrants@nifa.usda.gov (link sends e-mail). All questions relating to the SF-425 reports should be directed to the Administrative Contact listed in block 14 of the Award Face Sheet.

See

<http://nifa.usda.gov/program/renewable-resources-extension-act-capacity-grant> for additional details of annual, final technical, and financial reporting requirements. Instructions for using the REEport system are included on the NIFA web site at <http://nifa.usda.gov/reeport-resources-land-grant-partners>.

RREA-NFF:

REEport GRANT REPORTING:

All grant reporting must be completed using the Research, Education, and Extension project online reporting tool (REEport). Initial reporting (item a. below) is to be submitted through the REEport system. Annual progress and final reporting (items b. and c. below) also is to be done through the REEport system. Information on REEport can be found on NIFAs web site at <https://nifa.usda.gov/tool/reeport> and the REEport software can be found at <http://portal.nifa.usda.gov>.

a. Initial Documentation in the REEport Database--

Research, Education, and Extension project online reporting tool (REEport) All projects must be documented in REEport. The NIFA contact for all REEport documentation is:

b. Annual Progress Reports.

All projects must report annually into REReport. An annual Progress Report is due 90 calendar days after the awards anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day of which the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period. The following information, when applicable, must be included in the Project Modifications section of the annual Progress Report.

1) A comparison of actual accomplishments with the goals established for the reporting period (where the output of the project can be expressed readily in numbers, a computation of the cost per unit of output should be submitted if the information is considered useful);

(2) The reasons for slippage if established goals were not met; and

(3) Additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs.

c. Final Technical Report

The Final Technical Report is required within 90 calendar days after the expiration or termination of the award. The Final Technical Report covers the entire period of performance of the award and must describe progress made during the entire timeframe of the project instead of covering accomplishments made only during the final reporting segment of the project. In addition to supplying the information required under item b. of this article, the final report must include the following when applicable:

Identify equipment purchased with any Federal funds under the award and indicate subsequent use of such equipment.

FINANCIAL REPORTING:

As outlined in 2 CFR 200.327, the recipient must submit financial status reports by the frequency required in the terms and conditions of the award. The following are the financial reporting requirements for NIFA.

Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425:

NIFA uses the SF-425, Federal Financial Report to monitor cash. A Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due on an annual basis no later than 90 days following the end of the award anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day when the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period.

A final Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due 90 days after the expiration date of this award. The report must be submitted to the Awards Management Division (AMD) as a pdf attachment to an email sent to awards@nifa.usda.gov.

Credentials/Documentation:

Credentials/Documentation (083):

The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

(i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;

(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). This information collection is approved under OMB Circular Control No. 0524-0026, Assurance of Compliance with the Department of Agriculture Regulations Assuring Civil Rights, Compliance and Organization Information.

REEport GRANT REPORTING:

All grant reporting must be completed using the Research, Education, and Extension project online reporting tool (REEport). Initial reporting (item a. below) is to be submitted through the REEport system. Annual progress and final reporting (items b. and c. below) also is to be done through the REEport system. Information on REEport can be found on NIFAs web site at <https://nifa.usda.gov/tool/reeport> and the REEport software can be found at <http://portal.nifa.usda.gov>.

a. Initial Documentation in the REEport Database--

Research, Education, and Extension project online reporting tool (REEport) All projects must be documented in REEport. The NIFA contact for all REEport documentation is:

b. Annual Progress Reports.

All projects must report annually into REEport. An annual Progress Report is due 90 calendar days after the awards anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day of which the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period. The following information, when applicable, must be included in the Project Modifications section of the annual Progress Report.

1) A comparison of actual accomplishments with the goals established for the reporting period (where the output of the project can be expressed readily in numbers, a computation of the cost per unit of output should be submitted if the information is considered useful);

(2) The reasons for slippage if established goals were not met; and

(3) Additional pertinent information including, when appropriate, analysis and explanation of cost overruns or unexpectedly high unit costs.

c. Final Technical Report

The Final Technical Report is required within 90 calendar days after the expiration or termination of the award. The Final Technical Report covers the entire period of performance of the award and must describe progress made during the entire timeframe of the project instead of covering accomplishments made only during the final reporting segment of the project. In addition to supplying the information required under item b. of this article, the final report must include the following when applicable:

Identify equipment purchased with any Federal funds under the award and indicate subsequent use of such equipment.

FINANCIAL REPORTING:

As outlined in 2 CFR 200.327, the recipient must submit financial status reports by the frequency required in the terms and conditions of the award. The following are the financial reporting requirements for NIFA.

Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425:

A Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due on an annual basis no later than 90 days following the end of the award anniversary date (i.e., one year following the month and day when the project period begins and each year thereafter up until a final report is required). An annual Progress Report covers the most recent one-year period.

A final Federal Financial Report, Form SF-425, is due 90 days after the expiration date of this award. The report must be submitted to the Awards Management Division (AMD) as a pdf attachment to an email sent to awards@nifa.usda.gov.

FARAD

FEDERAL AGENCY:

National Institute of Food and Agriculture, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

Title VI Section 604 of the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (7 U.S.C. 7642) states that -The Secretary of Agriculture shall continue operation of the Food Animal Residue Avoidance Database program (referred to in this section as the FARAD program) through contracts, grants, or cooperative agreements with appropriate colleges or universities., Title 7, Section 604, 7 U.S.C 7642.

OBJECTIVES:

The purpose of the FARAD is to provide livestock producers, extension specialists, scientists, and veterinarians with up to date information to prevent drug, pesticide and environmental contaminant residues in food animal products.

Collaboration between all institutions occurs on research projects that are necessary to validate the FARAD withdrawal interval estimates.

TYPES OF ASSISTANCE:

Project Grants (Discretionary)

USES AND USE RESTRICTIONS:

The Food Animal Residue Avoidance Databank (FARAD) is a NIFA funding opportunity for the production of safe foods of animal origin through the development and dissemination of expert-mediated resources supporting prevention and mitigation of violative chemical (drug, pesticide, natural toxins, and environmental contaminant) residues in food animal products.

The major roles of each FARAD Center:

Kansas State University (KSU) - Develop pharmacokinetic modeling approaches and provide pharmacokinetic support to FARAD centers. In addition, develop an interface that links the developed models (physiologically-based PK models) with drug residue cases managed by responders at UCD and NCSU.

The University of California (UCD) Maintain the pharmacokinetic, bibliographic and call center databases and web-based access to the kinetic and bibliographic citation files. On a rotating basis with NCSU also provides responses to drug and contaminant residue questions submitted to FARAD.

The University of Florida (UFL)- Collect and enter data for the US Approved Animal Drugs Database (US-AADD), maintains internet websites for FARAD, creates and supports platforms for mobile devices to access the Veterinarian's Guide to Residue Avoidance Management (VetGRAM) and other mobile-friendly applications, and distributes electronic alerts and updates via email, Twitter and other electronic formats.

North Carolina State University (NCSU) Develop pharmacokinetic modeling approaches and provide pharmacokinetic support to FARAD centers. In addition, develop an interface that links the developed Population PK models with drug residue cases managed by responders at UCD and NCSU. On a rotating schedule with UCD, provide responses to emergency queries (telephone, internet) from the FARAD Hotline. NCSU will work with a veterinary clinical pharmacologist provide veterinary clinical pharmacology technical support to responders at NCSU and UCD for drug residue cases submitted to FARAD and oversee that appropriate PK models are utilized to resolve FARAD cases submitted to NCSU and UCD response centers.

Collaboration between all institutions occurs on research projects that are necessary to validate the FARAD withdrawal interval estimates.

RESTRICTIONS: Pursuant to Sec. 604 of the Agricultural Research Extension and Education Reform Act of 1998; [7USC 7642(d)], applicants requesting recovery on indirect cost should limit their requests to the lesser of their institutions official negotiated indirect cost rate or the equivalent of 19 percent of total Federal funds awarded.

Applicant Eligibility:

Title VI Section 604 of the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (7 U.S.C. 7642) states that -The Secretary of Agriculture shall continue operation of the Food Animal Residue Avoidance Database program (referred to in this section as the FARAD program) through contracts, grants, or cooperative agreements with appropriate colleges or universities.

This 30-year-old high performing integrated consortium of collaborating institutions currently includes at each Land Grant campus a lead PD, and his/her respective scientific staff. The institutions involved are University of California, Davis (UCD), North Carolina State University (NCSU), University of Florida (UFL), and Kansas State University (KSU).

Beneficiary Eligibility:

Title VI Section 604 of the Agricultural Research, Extension, and Education Reform Act of 1998 (7 U.S.C. 7642) states that "The Secretary of Agriculture shall continue operation of the Food Animal Residue Avoidance Database program (referred to in this section as the FARAD program) through contracts, grants, or cooperative agreements with appropriate colleges or universities.

The institutions involved are University of California, Davis (UCD), North Carolina State University (NCSU), University of Florida (UFL), and Kansas State University (KSU).

Credentials/Documentation:

The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

- (i) Be registered in SAM before submitting its application;
- (ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and
- (iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following: Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. NIFA will provide copies of forms recommended for use in fulfilling these requirements as part of the preaward process. Although an applicant may be eligible based on its status as one of these entities, there are factors which may exclude an applicant from receiving Federal financial and nonfinancial assistance and benefits under this program (e.g., debarment or suspension of an individual involved or a determination that an applicant is not responsible based on submitted organizational management information). Section 714 of the Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2017 (Pub. L. 115-31) limits indirect costs to 30 percent of the total Federal funds provided under each award. The System for Award Management (SAM) combines eight federal procurement systems, including CCR, and the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance into one new system. CCR activities are conducted through SAM (the CCR website will redirect users to SAM).

Dun and Bradstreet Universal Numbering System (DUNS) Number and System for Award Management (SAM): Each applicant (unless excepted under 2 CFR 25.110(b) or (c), or has an exception approved by the Federal awarding agency under 2 CFR 25.110(d)) is required to:

(ii) Provide a valid DUNS number in its application; and

(iii) Continue to maintain an active SAM registration with current information at all times during which it has an active Federal award or an application or plan under consideration by a Federal awarding agency.

It also must state that the Federal awarding agency may not make a Federal award to an applicant until the applicant has complied with all applicable DUNS and SAM requirements and, if an applicant has not fully complied with the requirements by the time the Federal awarding agency is ready to make a Federal award, the Federal awarding agency may determine that the applicant is not qualified to receive a Federal award and use that determination as a basis for making a Federal award to another applicant.

Applicants must furnish the information required in the Competitive Request for Applications (RFAs). Successful applicants recommended for funding must furnish the information and assurances requested during the award documentation process. These include, but are not limited to the following:

Organizational Management Information - Specific management information relating to an applicant shall be submitted on a one time basis, with updates on an as needed basis, as part of the responsibility determination prior to the award of a grant identified under this RFA, if such information has not been provided previously under this or another NIFA program. FEDERAL AGENCY:

Food and Nutrition Service, Department of Agriculture

AUTHORIZATION:

-In the Food and Nutrition Act of 2008, in Section 17(a)(1) gives the Secretary authority to make grants related to delivering nutrition-related benefits.

OBJECTIVES:

-The Food and Nutrition Services Supplemental Nutrition assistance Program (SNAP) provides funding for the SNAP Nutrition Education Program (SNAP-Ed). SNAP-Ed is central to SNAP's efforts to improve nutrition and prevent and reduce obesity among SNAP recipients. The Food Stamp Act of 1977 mandated creation and distribution of nutrition education materials to program participants. Subsequent legislation has expanded upon this requirement. The Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act (HHFKA) of 2010 established SNAP-Ed as a Nutrition Education and Obesity Prevention Program and changed its financial structure to that of 100 percent Federal grant funding to States with no State contribution or match.

The goal of SNAP-Ed is to improve the likelihood that persons eligible for SNAP will make healthy food choices within a limited budget and choose physically active lifestyles consistent with the current Dietary Guidelines for Americans and MyPlate.

FNS encourages States to center their efforts on the following behavioral outcomes for SNAP-Ed participants:

Make half your plate fruits and vegetables, at least half your grains whole grains, and switch to fat-free or low-fat milk products.

Increase physical activity and reduce time spent in sedentary behaviors as part of a healthy lifestyle.

Maintain appropriate calorie balance during each stage of life.
